We enter UCLA in huddled masses, though each of us have our own collection of emotions whirling inside. With a curious blend of anxiety, fear and eager anticipation we begin a new phase of our lives; a time to decide and shape our futures. We want to be writers, doctors, dancers and lawyers. We are optimists. We are opportunists. We are individuals.

Our personal desires lead us to probe disciplines foreign to others. At first cautiously discriminating, we test and explore, gradually finding something that piques our interest. We find security in common ground and often restrict ourselves to a particular domain. North Campus. Bio-Med. The Sculpture Garden. Powell. These are the places we characteristically run to and stake out as our own; here we are sure to find people who share our passions, and that in itself is comforting. Our niche is chosen.

But staying within the confines of a homogenous environment leads to stagnation and imbalance. We progress only by exposing ourselves to new and different situations. We benefit from being challenged as well as actively challenging others.

Collectively, however, we form a special unit. We are a community made up of a vast pool of resources and talent—a montage. The cam-hether you're a manager or an executive, you know that you can't run a business without a strong team of people. But what if you're the only one who's willing to take on the challenge of leading a team? What if you're the only one who's willing to take on the challenge of leading a team? Our mission is to help you do just that. We're a team of experts who can help you build a team that's ready to take on any challenge. We'll help you find the right people, give them the tools they need to succeed, and make sure they're all working together towards the same goal. It's not always easy, but it's always worth it. So if you're looking for a team that's ready to take on any challenge, we're the ones you want to talk to. We're the ones who can help you build a team that's ready to take on any challenge. # On the Fifth Circuit

You were sure you'd taken the wrong exit to UCLA—after all, since when is Sunset Boulevard University Drive? You kept your eyes open for “School Crossing,” “Slow,” “Speed Limit 25,” the signposts of academic life. You had learned these in Driver's Training, forgotten them on the license test. On your fifth circuit of the school though, a realization sideswiped you—this was life in the fast lane.

Shifting gears, you soon exchange “Freshman” for a college identity. You become the commuter, the apartment dweller, the dormie, the athlete. Yet all share common bonds—a photo I.D., a registration card, a backpack. Surveying our stereos' packing crate housing with satisfaction, we leave our rooms and enter theirs.

Moore 100. Rolfe 1200. Haines 39. Young 2500. These define the Space Age. “Come with me and explore the cosmos of learning,” the Professor intones, with a quizzical quirk of an eyebrow. Suddenly, empty seats verify the existence of black holes. The uninitiated ignore this as well as the apparently irrelevant statistics given in fine print on the syllabus: “There are 1,680 hours in ten weeks. A normal person is expected to sleep only a third of that time.”

With the condensing of our time, we condense our language. The ten minute passing period becomes a forum for this lingo, a place to exchange abbreviations and monosyllables. “How goes it?” “The same.” “12 at the Coop.” “For sure.” The casualness is deceptive; these communications become extremely vital for otherwise a student faces days of not seeing a familiar face.

The majors we have chosen dictate our paths, both literally and figuratively. Friends with classes in Young Hall are unwilling to trek to North Campus for spaghetti; English majors are just as uninterested in discussing organic chem test results over Bombshelter falafel. We begin to distance ourselves geographically and mentally as we progress to upper division classes. Yet the stirrings of intellectual independence are soon put to the test, and we become as one again, all facing imminent grading.

You appear as 003413784 on all the necessary documents, as do others in your position. Warily, you have attempted to meet the demands of professors, students, administration. “Shape up or we'll ship you out” is a familiar threat. Depleted by midterms, you prepare for the last onslaught of studying. You are a UCLA vending machine during finals week.

Unbeknownst to the College of Letters and Science, students can best be evaluated by monitoring their vending machine visits. For example, a student's progress through Lehninger's Biochemistry: a tale easily told by the number of empty M & M packages littering his desk. He has hit bottom after package #9. This method truly realizes the notion of “brain food.”

You know you've really made it at UCLA when you're invited out for coffee. Notorious for their coffee consumption, students double their intake during the quarter's last weeks. Hot, cold or with ice cream, a swift infusion of cappuccino “gets me through to dawn,” admitted several caffeine junkies. But the dearth of Jujubees in the vending machines is a clear indication that students do not live by sleeplessness alone.

What do students live by then? Their deeply felt desire for truth and knowledge? Please—this can hardly be expected of minors, much less undeclared majors. Their lecture notes? Not quite—if you need these to find out when the summer solstice is, you're already in trouble. No, the guiding principle behind the evolution of the UCLA student is that inevitable step beyond Darwin: Survival of the wittiest.

Sure, extra sensory perception, that "sixth sense," may get you on "That's Incredible!"; but it takes a finely honed sense of irony to make it at UCLA. How else can a student face the staggering blow of having the computer go down just as his turn comes? Or listing an out-of-state address and still getting Lot 32? Students have learned to deal with these crises through a special curriculum—Subject S or remedial sarcasm.

Every morning, the UCLA student downs his Scorn Flakes, fortified with ten essential vitamins and irony, and hikes to the campus. He checks his schedule—Art, how to draw rhetorical moustaches on the moon-faced decrees of Murphy Hall; Military Science, how to remain stoically inattentive; Linguistics, how to ferret out the bourgeois origins of professors' names; Meteorology, how to make lightning-fast retorts. Certainly a well-rounded schedule, but alas, the System rejects the course credit petition by simply pointing out that repartee merely fills a breath not a breadth requirement.

You make a 180° turn. Coming to your senses, you realize that the next four, five or six years cannot be spent gathering cocktail party material. UCLA is rather a place to cultivate your sense of self, not to vegetate in. And in a society whose greatest reward is the expense account lunch, that idea becomes food for thought. □

PEOPLE

From all over the world and from all across the country people converge on UCLA. People from all different cultures, religions and ethnic backgrounds all intergrate and blend together to make up this university's student body of approximately 32,742 (give or take a bruin or two). UCLA is a potpourri of people and is reknown for its diversity. yet, we are all here for essentially the same purpose—to gain a degree of higher education (or maybe even a spouse!)

Yes indeedy, we are all here together and whether we are black or white, red or yellow, brown or pink, punk or preppy, we somehow manage to adapt to the same university customs. Yet, learning to adapt is a little harder for some students than it is for others—especially if you are a foreign student.

There are many cases in which foreign students arrive in Los Angeles with nowhere to live, no one they know, and no sense of how to get where they want to go (in other words, "welcome to UCLA"). Above and beyond the aforementioned obstacles, the foreign student has to contend with the language barrier here, not to mention a whole new way of life. I honestly cannot even imagine what it must be like for these brave and adventurous students. I'm sure it's quite a challenge for them just to face (what seems to the average Joe Bruin as) the ordinary aspects of everyday life. I mean, geez, it's not easy being a student at UCLA, let alone being a foreign one.

Speaking of problems to overcome, let's not forget about the most courageous souls of all—the handicapped. This sector of "diverse students" is one made up of super-students. Can you actually imagine yourself traversing Bruin Walk without your eyesight, or trying to buy lunch at North Campus in a wheel chair? Life is extra tough for those determined and gifted students. The handicapped Bruins are just incredible, in fact if I had just half their will and perseverance, I could have graduated on time after all.

Meanwhile back at the ranch, we all learn to cope with the college way of life, come hell or high water. And eventually we find that special place on campus we call "home." Some may find themselves leading the artist's way of life—lugging art materials to and from their lockers in Dickson. It is here in ultra-north campus that the conceptual is made visual. Ideas are represented in clay, cloth, glass, metal, on canvas, sketch pads, celluloid and on stage. Among the students of Fine Arts, creativity is the spice of life, and imagination supplies the food for thought (I just love verbosity).

Now we can move to the other extreme—geographically and conceptually. On south campus we discover a radically different set of people. Instead of seeing students dragging art supplies around, you'll find them toting calculators in hip holsters. Here is where the inquisitive minds of the Letters and Science students are nourished with elements of logic and reason. Ideally and realistically, the science and technology of our society rests within the grasps of these calculator punchers (Kind of makes you feel important, don't it?).

"We not only absorb knowledge from books, but from people, too."

---

I've given you the one extreme to the other, but don't forget the wide inbetween—everything from poli sci to philosophy, econ to music, etc. can be found within this spectrum. We call those students who fit into this category, MOC (middle of campus) students. And while we're on the subject of people, let's not forget about our beloved professors. The ones who inspire us and provide us with profound insight. Where would we be without them? (At the beach, no doubt!)

College is a true learning experience—academically and socially. We not only absorb knowledge from books, but from people, too. And the variety of people here at the Big U offers Joe and Josephine Bruin a vast pool of human resources. UCLA. It's not just an education; it's an adventure. □ —TN

Time-honored Memories

"...in ten years...we shall look with amazement upon the development of this University, for it is certain to be greater, far greater, than the imagination of any of us can foresee."

Southern Campus, 1920

These were optimistic words from Dr. Ernest Carroll Moore, first UCLA Provost, voiced only a year after the "University of California, Southern Branch" was established, and nine years before UCLA's landmark, Royce Hall, opened for classes. Dr. Moore's prediction for the University has indeed been fulfilled, far beyond the original vision of the Royce Quad, which included Haines, Kinsey, and Powell Library. The physical face of the campus is still changing, yet UCLA's development also extends off-campus through its worldwide academic reputation.

Long before "ook-la" or "uk-la" Bearwear became the latest fad in Europe and Japan, UCLA was exporting its ideas. Major contributors to this endeavor include some familiar names: Ralph BUNCHE, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize and Undersecretary General of the United Nations; Frank Prescott ROLFE, former Dean of Letters and Science and authority on 17th century prose and Victorian literature; Llewelyn M.K. BOELTER, founding dean of the School of Engineering; Edward A. DICKSON, former Regent, reporter, publisher, and known as the "Godfather of UCLA"; and, of course, Dr. Ernest Carroll MOORE, educator and philosopher.

Though surrounded by all this history, students have left their own mark on UCLA traditions. For example, Mardi Gras was begun in 1941 to benefit UNICAMP, the University's summer camp for underprivileged children. There were ten booths that year. Today's Mardi Gras spans the intramural field and is a fully-equipped carnival. Another tradition preserved is the rallies at the foot of Janss Steps. Constructed in the early 1930's, it has been the scene of both political and sport rallies—from John F. Kennedy to Larry Brown.

Perhaps the most enduring UCLA tradition is the football rivalry with USC. This manifests itself in many ways including bogus Daily Trojan papers, massive priority ticket lines, and special t-shirts. Here again, students draw on tradition, through the fight songs, including George Gershwin's hit "Strike Up the Band." The Gershwins presented this song to UCLA in 1937, appending a "for UCLA" to the title. The lyrics to this song as well as those to the "Fight Song" are usually forgotten, except for the famous 8-clap endings added by the students.

In recent years, students have moved a form of the 8-clap into the classroom. Written evaluations of the instructors pale in comparison; the real estimate of success in a lecture hall being, as in life, the loudness of the applause. □

Routines: Reflections of Reality

Yesterday I trudged up and down Bruin Walk eleven times. I can't believe it! When they told me about the high attrition rate here I thought they were talking about academic prowess and not physical stamina. As we all know, UCLA thrives on its diversity. Yet, some statistician must have neglected the fact that all of those diversified knowledge seekers seem to stand in the same lines, ride the same shuttle bus to Lot 32 and walk up Bruin Walk time and time again.

class, "Terrorism Today." I think I'll go see my TA after class, or maybe right after I play a little "Pac-Man" first...

Better yet, I'll go to my prof during his office hour...First I think I'll thumb through the Bruin over a cup of coffee in Kerckhoff to make sure nothing exciting is happening on campus...Gee, what's going on in Meyerhoff Park? Oh, another religious zealot...I wonder when the new schedule of classes comes out?...Is the psych department going to offer "The Psych-

"Here it is—my college experience, that new epoch in my life, the stepping stone to my multi-million dollar career—and here I am, routine-ridden."

It's scary how big of a rut I'm in. Here it is—my college experience, that new epoch in my life, the stepping stone to my multi-million dollar career—and here I am, routine-ridden! I brush my teeth every morning (Mom's orders) along with ten other people from my dorm. I read the personals in the Daily Bruin while waiting for my prof to arrive. I play "Pac-Man" until I clear the board at least three times on my way back up Bruin Hike. I check to see if the late book for my history class has come in yet (yes, the final is in two weeks). I could go on forever, but I'm afraid this list would become another routine thing!

You know what? Something is fishy about all these routines. I had Psych 10 fall quarter and I remember reading something about "mind control patterning." I think I may have stumbled across some sort of elitist plot or something. (If it's not the administration's plan, then I'm sure those "Young, Irate and Ticked-Off Socialistic Agitators" are in on it.) I can't believe it—what a paper topic for my ology of Routines?"...Boy, am I hungry...I'll have to see my prof about this tomorrow...I'd better do some studying tonight...I really should do my laundry before I start my paper...I always have a hard time finding a place to study in URL...I can't wait until tomorrow, I can sleep 'til nine...Why not play a quick game of "Pac-Man" before I go back to the dorm, then I'll start my homework.

I really think there is something to these routines after all. Hold it! Just wait one cotton-pickin' minute! I seem to recall a "high school routine," "a summer-time routine," and I even have a "dating routine." Gee, these routines can't be that bad, at least I know what to do after the nice dinner, the movie and the extended drive home with Sarah Lee Sleeze. Now I can see these routines in a new light! I think these things help us to get along day to day without undue stress and strain. Move over Freud baby, I have a new topic in mind—"Routine Ways Make for Better Days." (Aren't flashes of genius great?) □ —JDL

WITH STYLE

“What is it?” “Who’s got it?” “And where can I some?” Well, first off, style isn’t something you can buy; it’s intangible. According to Webster’s, it’s the way something is said or done. For example, translated into fashion, style is not just the clothes you wear; it’s the manner in which you wear them. Individuality is the key to style. You can dress with style

“Fashion is fantasy; it’s meant to be fun.”

and not be fashionable (and vice versa). We all have our own way of doing things, or own “style,” right? Sure.

Anyhow, getting back to styles in fashion, uh, well, fashion is a widely used and abused word. People call just about anything fashion these days—from a piece of plastic jewelry to a pair of designer socks. And the truth is that people, in general, really don't know just what is fashion, and they tend to take fashion much too seriously (you know who all your Rodeo Drive die-hards are). Fashion is a certain look which projects a certain mood. It says something about you. Fashion is fantasy; it's meant to be fun. So who cares if everyone in your anthro class is giving you funny looks? Fashion is flexible. You can wear a certain fashion and mold it to your own style. And to top it off, fashion provides us with variety since it never stays in one place too long.

In these ever-changing times, fashions change rapidly from season to season. Usually by the time I get around to purchasing the latest fashions, they have already gone out of style. (I wonder what I can do with those metallic purses, shoes and belts I bought? I guess I'll save them for Halloween or maybe use them to decorate our Christmas tree.) Now let's all just pray that somebody doesn't come out with Nancy Reagan designer jeans—in red! (yish!)

Well, humming right along, what are the biggies in style on the campus scene this year? Let me see here, focusing on particular trends in "fashion," we see that (in popularity) the cute little alligator has miraculously transformed into a rather pompous looking fellow on a polo horse; accessories have become a bit shinier and metallic; the combat fatigue look has invaded campus; low heeled pumps are for your feet; pants that look like shorts and shorts that look like skirts are all chic; miniskirts are back for those who dare; anything sweatshirt is casual;

headbands are cool; plaid shorts are just too preppy; new wave is hip; punk is peachy; Dolphins reveal more than you think; hair for women—volume is vogue and the messier the better; for guys, short and styled hair is GQ; those portable radio/tape/headphone units are great; author John Irving has been selling quite a few books; bikes and mo-peds are sporty; the Pretenders and Pat Benatar dominate the dance floor and the Go Go's "have got the beat." So there you have it, kids. I'm sure you can all relate to the aforementioned fads and fashions of 1981-82. Well, it's been real far out, and it's been funky. And it's been real far out and funky. □ —TN

Hangin' Out at UCLA

Did you ever realize that there is an art to hanging out? That's a fact, Jack! Where catch some rays, to read the Bruin, or to watch people bop by. If you just sit down and list where you go when you do not have class to go to (or maybe even where you go when you do not go to class), you will discover a pattern of hangouts not unlike the migratory paths of Canadian geese in mating season.

You must be on the edge of your seat now, just waiting for me to divulge my secret know-and study halls flung about campus for people in the study-scene.

The next step from this academic solitude is the great outdoors. For serenity there is always the grassy knolls of Bruin Hill. For more bustle there is the inverted fountain (around it, not in it) and the benches in front of the West Center. When you are looking for not mere bustle, but hustle bustle you can head indoors for most any you hang out depends upon your friends, your mood, your next class, your next midterm, etc. This can seem very elementary to some of you snoots out there, right? That is, you may be thinking, "No doy, kill joy! Of course I go to the study lounge when I want to study." What I want you to know is deeper than this simpletonian view.

There are places on campus which people hang out at to see people they know, to make sure they do not see people they know, to make sure they do not see anyone, to hear the latest radical or religious zealot, to ledge about the hangout scene on campus. But there is no secret—you know all about it. You know where you like to hang out. Wellll, OK, I'll mention some hangouts so those of you who are hangoutless will be able to start hanging out like you know what you are doing. (As in, "That's right, we bad...")

For starters, let's survey the places for peace and quiet: there is always Kerckhoff Study lounges with nice, soft, comfy chairs and sofas (for Zzzz); the halls of URL and Powell are quite popular for quite studying; then there are the other libraries eatory. The Coop, the Treehouse, or the Bombshelter will do you well for food hangouts.

Now we come to the kings of the hangouts—North Campus Eating Facility and its surrounding area (talk about a hangout!) and Kerckhoff Coffee House. You can go to these places to watch people, talk to people, study and especially hangout. If any of these places are not your thing, then there is always the bowling alley, the game room or maybe the gymnasium is more your style...□

Westwood

Is Westwood a college town? Subsequently, is Southern California weather really conducive to the wearing of Shetland sweaters? These questions are debatable. To answer them, however, a definition of "college town" is necessary. Here are some offerings:

- a) A town on a college's doorstep.
- b) A region used as a hang-out by college students.
- c) A small metropolitan area filled with a seemingly endless number of little restaurants serving outrageously overpriced and mediocre fettucini; also contains an abundance of fast food places. Bookstores tend to stock more Shelley than Sidney Sheldon.
- d) c, but more could be said.
- e) Any or all of the above.

Westwood is not defined exactly by any of these categories, yet it has elements of all of them.

Westwood has always possessed an element of the elite, catering to a wealthier and usually non-student clientele. Yet the patronage of students is significant, as the numerous ads in the Daily Bruin attest; after all, there is a potential market of over 30,000 students. (Though it is unlikely that this number or even a quarter of this number would be significantly moved to purchase Cole-Haan penny loafers.)

The mercantile bent of Westwood was seen most obviously prior to the fall edition of the 24th semi-annual Westwood Art Show. Over 100 merchants petitioned to have the show moved, since the huge traffic problems make their stores inaccessible to shoppers. But the objections are more than economic ones; the chic image of Westwood is tarnished by the questionable aesthetics of fabric mooses and other such novelty sold at the "art" fair. But the fair will endure, as long as the market for abstractly arranged ferns remains steady, as it undoubtedly will. After all, weren't Grapenuts born in California?

Reaching up to the sky, they cast the area in perpetual shade. So dominating their presence that the lone man looks up in awe at the extent of Creation. Then, shaking his head, he crosses Wilshire to the opposite side of Westwood Boulevard.

The face of Westwood is changing; the horizon is not only obscured by smog but now by skyscrapers at the outskirts of Westwood Village. Inside the village, similar changes are taking place, with the up-dating of existing structures and the construction of new ones. Westwood displays all the symptoms of the chic take-over.

Wood and brick have been discarded for glass and chrome. So too has clothing been exchanged for costumes. This is the Age of the Future—"Star Wars" has left its mark. Even the shabbily homey Westwood Bookstore is leaving its space to move to glassy new headquarters at the Gayley Center.

Along with the physical changes in Westwood comes a change in mentality. The new merchants display a fervid patriotism—to France. Most would object to calling Westwood a town; rather, it is la ville. (This, unlike its country cousin "ville" as in Mudsville, is pronounced "la vee.") These new developments seem at first to be gross discrimination against the masses who speak (and are often unaware of their) badly pronounced French. Yet entrepreneurs firmly believe that in a health-conscious society such as Southern California's, letting "them eat cake" would signal danger to thousands of Pritikin diets. Thus, they invented the "croissant." □

Los Angeles

City of the Angels

Los Angeles spans a vast area, all parts being accessible only by the freeways. The virtual monopoly of the auto industry is truly recognized—L.A. is the origin of the Rapid Transit District. U.S. citizenship is not required; only vehicle registration.

Where is Los Angeles? There is the Downtown Area with City Hall (a myth to many UCLA students), West Los Angeles (homesweethome), and that nebulous zone between these two (known only to Tommy's hamburgers junkies). Geographically, Los Angeles covers an area that runs along the coast. Yet in all regions, culture reigns supreme, from "C" to shining "C."

Los Angeles has always had a reputation for being the epitome of mellowness, of Southern California-ness, a languid state induced by the sunny weather. Though it is true that self-realization books and Cusinart cookbooks consistently make the L.A. bestseller list, all Angelenos should not be judged merely by the reading habits of those who live close to the water.

The Greek Theatre at UCLA, the largest outdoor theatre in the world, is a masterpiece of architecture. It was designed by the architect John C. Timpanelli and completed in 1928. The theatre has a seating capacity of 28,000 and is known for its excellent acoustics. It has been the site of many famous performances, including the first production of the musical "Oklahoma!" in 1943. The theatre is a popular venue for student organizations and is often used for large-scale events.

Los Angeles gets more than its fair share of gawking, especially West Los Angeles. This is due either to the preponderance of famous and wealthy people in the neighborhood adjacent to UCLA or the preponderance of star-struck Midwesterners making the pilgrimage to California to fulfill their wildest Photoplay dreams. Pressured for a solution to this problem, one T.V. network tried shifting their headquarters to Burbank. But the tourist traffic was not so easily misled; they soon discovered that Johnny Carson commutes.

Tourists often forget that cardinal rule of travel: in this case, when in Los Angeles, do as the Angelenos do, go where the Angelenos go. (This does not include buying postcards from Mann's—not Grauman's—Chinese Theater.)

The best film event of the year is the Los Angeles International Film Exposition or FILMEX, as each year's new batch of black T-shirts advertise. Held in the spring, FILMEX presents a myriad of foreign features at several Hollywood locations. The organization helped sponsor the Los Angeles showing of "Napoleon," Abel Gance's 1926 silent film classic.

FALL

The fall season may signal the dormancy of plant life and bears in the cruel world, but in Bruin country things are just beginning to jump. What with football going so great (we want the roses!) and the thousands of freshmen and returnees, the campus is full of energy. And anyway, Mr. Weather doesn't seem to want to play the game by the rules either—this fall has been more like a continuation of summer than the precursor to winter. The heat-wave has added spunk to the Bruins' drive into the new school year.

Along with the optimal weather conditions, there were the dorms, residential suites, apartments, commuting, rush, Westwood, clubs and lines to promote hot activity for the back-to-school Bruin. Whether it was putting up with your roommate or the traffic, the fall quarter is to be remembered for its almost lull-less speed at which it passed. (WHOOSH!) Homecoming with its parade, rally, reunions and fun was here and gone. That brand new checking account sure flies when it's having fun! How about those Dodgers? Los Angeles just loves a winning "World Series" team—even if they can't sing "New York, New York" very well.

With disgust over the rising reg fees, the Bruins looked for new jobs, tightened their budgets, held a few rallies, yet, ultimately came to the conclusion that maybe a month off in December will liven their lives up a bit! One quarter down, two to go—man, oh man, if only this summer weather could last a few more months (I study so well at the rec center). There's nothing like a suntan for when I go back home to brag about Southern California . . .

Summertime

Summer. Most students are at home working to save up enough money for next fall's reg fees. Some travel, some bask in the sun for three straight months. There are also those unusual few who go to summer school.

But wherever we were, whatever we were doing, there were many newsworthy events occurring during the summer of 1981 that have surely been entered into the annals of history.

Internationally: Prince Charles and Lady Diana tied the nuptial knot. Televised all over the world, this royal wedding was the grandest in English history . . . Hunger strikes in Ireland, led by IRA member Bobby Sands, protested British rule.

Nationally: Air traffic controllers found themselves out of a job when they went on strike and President Reagan fired them all .

. . . Sandra Day O'Connor became the first woman appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court . . . First Lady Nancy Reagan became the butt of many jokes when she purchased a $200,000 set of dishes and redecorated the family quarters in the White House during this recessionary period . . . The Rubik craze swept the nation. While most of us struggled to restore one side of the dreaded cube, a 13-year-old held the world's record for solving the puzzle with a time of 39 seconds . . . General Hospital became the highest rated daytime show. Luke and Laura became America's sweethearts and Milos and his weather machine got what they deserved. After an entire summer of espionage, Luke and Laura capped it off with their own royal wedding. Even Elizabeth Taylor joined in on the festivities by making a special appearance as Milos' widow.

●MADE IN THE SHADE AT VENICE BEACH

Entertainment: Raiders of the Lost Ark, starring Harrison Ford, was the big blockbuster movie of the summer . . . The most talked-about twosome was Brooke Shields and her skintight Calvins . . . The hottest news of the music industry was the reuniting of Simon and Garfunkel for a one-time concert held in New York's Central Park . . . Despite its slow start on TV, Hill Street Blues walked away with nine Emmy Awards and very increased ratings.

Sports: The big baseball strike put a damper on America's summer sport. When play finally resumed in August, it seemed as if the season started all over again. But in the end, it was the Los Angeles Dodgers who defeated the New York Yankees in the World Series in seven games . . . Two Americans won the coveted Wimbledon title. Tracy Austin defeated Chris Evert Lloyd while John McEnroe defeated Bjorn Borg . . . In the most publicized bout of the summer, Sugar Ray Leonard TKOed Thomas Hearns.

California: Governor Jerry Brown finally ordered Medfly spraying in Northern California after the little pests started spreading throughout the state. Some Medflies were even spotted in the L.A. area. □

SUMMER '81

Homecoming: A Celebration

UCLA's 55th Homecoming was "A Celebration," in theme and in the festivities planned for the October 23-25 weekend. Stressing the importance of the entire UCLA community, Homecoming '81 involved the efforts of alumni, students, faculty, administrators, Westwood residents and merchants.

Activities began at noon, Friday, with the crowning of an honorary Homecoming King and Queen, the popular former jazz instructor Paul Tanner and his wife Bunny. It was singularly appropriate that Mr. Tanner's long-playing engagement in Schoenberg Hall should be honored during Homecoming, his jazz classes having been taken by literally thousands of alumni.

The traditional parade through Westwood was crowned by yet another UCLA "institution"—Grand Marshal John Wooden. Following the fanfare of the UCLA Marching Band, "Coach" Wooden (as he will ever be known) led a parade that included approximately 60 entries entered by fraternities, sororities, dorms and other associations, as well as several dignitaries.

Famous alumni were in evidence, including former football greats Kermit Johnson, Rev. Don Moomaw and Rob Scribner, and basketball stars Gail Goodrich, Abdul Rahman (Walt Hazzard), Lynn Shackelford and Mike Warren. New basketball head coach Larry Farmer, himself a Wooden alumnus, was also greeted enthusiastically by the crowds lining the streets of Westwood.

An awards ceremony for the best floats was held after the parade capturing both the Greek and Sweepstakes Awards were Alpha Delta Pi and Theta Xi. In keeping with the theme of celebration, they constructed a miniature Mardi Gras, complete with Ferris wheel and other carnival elements. Of the non-Greek entrants, Hedrick Hall was judged as the winner.

Saturday was highlighted by a football confrontation with Cal, preceded by an alumni picnic and rally. The Bruins' 34-6 victory over the Bears climaxed the Homecoming celebration.

Sunday officially and nostalgically closed Homecoming with the celebration of 11 UCLA class reunions, ranging from the class of '26 to the class of '76. □

FALL

Students returning to UCLA were greeted with a $75 increase in registration fees and promises of even more fee increases in the near future. With the UC budget reduced by a big 7 percent, quarter fees may be $455 in Fall 1982. A tuition rally to protest budget cuts and tuition hikes was held with 2,500 students crowding into Ackerman Grand Ballroom for Governor Brown's appearance.

The College of Letters and Science announced stricter policies regarding requirements and admissions. Eighteen upper division courses will be required instead of the current number of thirteen. Late and transfer students will be discouraged by the new policy of requiring a student's final 68 (rather than 36) units to be courses taken at UCLA.

A wide range of personalities were brought to you by the Campus Events Speakers Program. Film stars, comedians and plain ol' reknown personages could be heard speaking out or merely commenting on a variety of topics. Indeed, the fall quarter had its share of speakers to distract the student from his pending one o'clock class.

Timothy Hutton, the Oscar-winning supporting actor in Ordinary People, commented on his career and the film following a special screening of it. Ex-Congressman Yvonne Burke spoke out on the need for greater minority and female participation in the political realm. Also accentuating the lack of political activity, Jane Fonda demanded that students get up and go out and become politically aware of the world around them. Speaking at the World Hunger Fair, Buckminster Fuller—philosopher and architectural genius—professed an architectural cure to the hunger problem the Third World faces.

More student participation was called for. Undergraduate President San. Law for "Project Mad Dog," a protest of the football seating plan. Unreserved seats for students had been moved to the side by twenty yards. The only visible sign of the protest, however, was the sidelined card show.

Alumni and students joined in mourning for long-time band director Kelly James, who succumbed to a stroke suffered last year during the Cal football game. Besides directing many innovative halftime shows, James established several traditions at UCLA, including the fight song "Sons of Westwood."

On the lighter side of the speaker program, "CHIPS" star Bruce Jenner recalled his Olympics glory and the subsequent changes his life has gone through. Comedian George Carlin joked and spoke of his career and his future plans. Following a screening of Heaven Can Wait, writer/director/actor Buck Henry answered questions about his personal and professional life. New wavers called The Roman-tics filled Ackerman Grand Ballroom with slammers and dancers who bopped to their beat.

World news hit UCLA on October 6 in the form of the shocking assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat by extremist soldiers. Sadat's death was yet another event rocking the unstable Mideast. Adding fuel to the fire, the U.S. Senate failed to halt the sale of AWAC planes to Saudi Arabia, despite strong protests.

Controversy was again raised on campus as the Boelter Hall nuclear reactor facing relicensing investigations. Of less import but no less controversial was the pending approval of ASUCLA's liquor license.

Former Cabinet member James Schlesinger commented on national security and defense. The cast of the multiple-E Emmy-award-winning television show Hill St. Blues was present for a question/answer session. Tricia Toyota and Arthur Ashe were also a part of this quarters' Speakers program. Each spoke of their respective fields—television news and world tennis. These topics align the spectrum of the Speakers program.

If campus and international hubbub is not enough to keep Joe Bruin on top of the world, there is always the next quarter during which he can broaden his background. And it is so much easier to attend those Speakers programs with nice, mellow weather. What better education is there than being enlightened to some international or apathetically caused crisis at Meyerhoff Park and soaking up some rays as well? □

Once I began attempting to remember what the winter quarter was like, all I could think of was the weather. Do you remember winter quarter? My atmo. prof said winter was wet and cold, but nooo . . . surf city here I come. Many a Bruin began sunning with their studies. Then it all came down to a drenching dead week, but anyway, it's hard to re-read Major Accent highlighting in the sun. Rain gives me the atmosphere I need for studying, and John Belushi sort of died too, which added to my drive to study the past and its mistakes.

But, really now, are the weather and fallen comics the only memorable items of the winter of 1981-82? To tell you the truth, after glancing through my accumulation of old Daily Bruins I wasn't really rivetted over any hot breaking news of the quarter. But even without campus toppling events, I was reminded of the numerous speakers, rallies and protests, etc., etc., which will go down in this recollection of the "winter calendar."

It's always amazing to look at the list of campus speakers and think that I had the opportunity to see and question some pretty big names. The speakers program invites a variety of per-sonnages from a wide spectrum of interest — this quarter's ranged from the CIA to Eye-witness News, ex-radical to contemporary radical, and the genres march on.

For no particular reason whatsoever, I will encapsulate the long list of speakers in a chronological, long list: Disillusionment in the CIA was discussed by ex-agent Gene Riche-son; Connie Chung pointed an accusing finger at attention-getting hype which television news falls prey to; Tony Award winner Virginia Capers discussed career goals in the field; Elliot Gould rambled on about life; Tom Hayden called for active support for the sagging ERA movement; future Superman III, Christopher Reeves, berated the film industry and also expounded upon life; the cast of "Barnum" held juggling workshops and the like and brought a taste of the big top to campus; ex-radical and ex-UCLA professor Angela Davis was here during Black History Month; recording artist Tom Petty chatted about the music industry; Dennis Christopher was present at a sneak preview of his film "Don't Cry It's Only Thunder;" political power was the topic of Assembly Speaker Willie Brown's speech; and on a more serious note, the threat of nuclear arms was pointed out by George McGovern (no, he hasn't died).

Above and beyond mere speakers, there really were events, not rocking events mind you, but happenings nonetheless. You may vaguely recall the Armenian uprising over Professor Shaw's denial of the Armenian genocide. Shaw went on to resign from the quarter. The never-present-pub controversy did not dry up, but the pub remained as such when the liquor license was denied once again. Reorganization plans were announced for Ackerman Union, under which Bruin Bowl may soon be a thing of the past as a proposed theater is to take its place.

Bowling alleys may not be the only thing of the past, as tuition for out-of-state students was raised by ten percent. (It's just as well, who will be able to afford to come here to bowl anyway?) Undergraduate presi-

Showing Their Spirit and Unity

Greek Week's origin dates back to the heyday of Sorority and Fraternity life back in the early 50's and 60's, but died off during the anti-establishment days of the later 60's and early 70's. When it was revived again in 1979 the Greek Sing College Bowl Dance Marathon, and Greek Olympics were the main highlights of the week. In 1980 and 1981 most of the events were opened up to the University as a whole, yet still the games one of the most fulfilling things they had ever done.

Monday at noon was the traditional rally/psych-up in front of Janss Steps, to key up for the week of spirit and unity within the Greek system. Moonlight Madness, a two mile race around the perimeter of the campus, attracted 600 people, with 250 of the lucky participants receiving Miller Beer tee shirts. Headed by Vicky Ross and Scott Tsugita and assisted by Mike Larice and assisted by Nancy Dieiter, invited campus leaders, Panhellenic and IFC officials, House Mothers and distinguished Administrators for the reception. The Variety show, organized by Dan Bethlahmy and Marian Koltai, showcased the three top winners in preliminary competition in 5 categories — All Dance, All Instrumental, Singing, Comedy/Vaudeville and Musical Production. Tommy Hawkins, local D.J. and former Lakers player, hosted the evening. Numerous celebrity judges were dispersed throughout the audience and added to the fun of it all.

Thursday found the Greeks eating ice cream, people passing, egg dropping, chariot racing and marathon running for the second day of the Olympics. An Olympic Forum was held that evening with guests Perry O'Brien, shot put gold medalist; Dr. Norman P. Miller, director of UCLA 1984 Olympic Planning; gold medalist Brian Goodel; and Randy Rich, arbitrator for the leasing of the greek properties for the Olympics. Shelia Hoffman and Brian Knapp co-directed this event.

Greek Week was concluded Friday night with a car rally and an All-Greek party at Phi Kapp and Sigma Pi. It was truly a week to remember — Greeks were encouraged to have fun, participate in a community service event, and all the while generate good publicity for the system as a whole. □

Greeks "run." This year Greek Week has again been closed to the campus as a whole, with the Sing, College Bowl and Marathon being taken over by other campus groups. This left Shelia Hoffman and Bobby Zauzmer, co-directors of the week, with a goal of a non-stop week of activity to plan. To help subsidize their allotted SLC budget, Miller Beer was enlisted as a co-sponsor of the week.

Greek Week started with the Special Olympics, an athletic event run for mentally retarded children and adults. Karin Derr, director, and her assistants Marchia Tinkler and Dave McCarthy, had 300 Greek volunteers who played, hugged and cheered on the participants. All those who participated found the Movie night, the following night, was another extremely successful event. Twenty-eight houses put together fourteen three minute films with the theme "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Exchange." Randy Fontane and Sharon Dazon found over 2000 people packed into Ackerman Grand Ballroom — a more than capacity crowd.

Wednesday was an especially busy day with the first part of the Olympics in the afternoon with its serious competitive events followed by the Alumni Reception that evening which preceded the Greek Variety Show in Royce. Cindy Brewer, dent Sam Law raised a political stink for himself with Russ Hagey over the chairmanship of the Board of Control. A political stink on an international scale took place on our very doorstep: the Turkish Consulate was assassinated in Westwood. Less lethal, but still affecting people's lives, the Admissions Office had to turn away 3500 prospective Bruins due to overpopulation at UCLA.

Concern over illicit dealings during UCLA's basketball era gone by, was dredged out in an expose in the Los Angeles Times on Sam Gilbert — "Godfather of UCLA Basketball." Another dirty deal in the world of sports was the suggestion of charging a dollar per ticket for the traditionally free football games. As of yet, the tickets will remain complementary. (Thank you very much, I'd hate to pay for the privilege of attending the games which are all the hell the way over at the Coliseum.) Speaking of pretensions, the Pretenders rocked Pauley Pavilion on Valentine's Day. Then, always the sweethearts, Parking Service initiated an audit upon parking permits and their geneology.

Disgruntled student groups made their presence known to a generally unenthusiastic student body. (Face it, how many times have you thought "Who cares?" when accosted on Bruin Walk for some cause or another?) The campus as a whole ignored nuclear proliferation rallies, nursing school cuts protests, ERA support groups, law school minority sit ins, El Salvadorian consciousness proponents, and the like. Then, speaking of quiet responses — Marcel Marceau mimed his way through Royce. And the Beta House was damped by a charter revocation over numerous Beta-like activities.

Even though some greeks were being run off campus, the other greeks were running on campus for Greek Week. This year the Special Olympics kicked the grand week off. Then, while the greeks were kicking, Further droning is out of place, as this has been the Winter Quarter of 1982. Believe it or not, what may seem to be dull and dreary here, may in fact be a reflection upon the writer and his era. Yet as time treads on, these moments will shimmer as the fluorescent highlighter does in that assigned textbook called your life.

SPRING

Is the year over already? Spring quarter so soon? Wasn't I just longing for the summer? My psych prof was right, my life is beginning to flee. It's far too easy to fall into the sentimental trap when writing about the end of another school year. So, let's change the subject — let me think more of what was going on in the spring instead of how melancholy it may seem now that it's over.

Spring quarter is notorious for that summertime temptation of going to the beach or rec center to prep for your suntan instead of your midterm. Senioritis attacks in epidemic proportions. (And you thought mono was contagious!) This springtime condition cannot be explained, but I know you can feel it around you as you think to yourself on the way to class with your sunglasses on, and feel the warmth of the sun penetrate through your Izod shirt.

Another thought that enters your mind on the way to class is the onslaught of speakers on campus: a co-star of that spectacle "Watergate," John Ehrlichman; Phyllis Schlafly, ERA opponent extraordinaire; author Gore Vidal on a campaign stop, plugging for his bid for a senate seat; and yes, there were many more. Then, when the evenings rolled around, didn't the Ackerman movies tempt you away from your studies? (Just when you were trying to make up for that class you skipped to sleep in the quad.)

When there weren't enough movies on campus to keep you occupied, did you ever sit up with friends discussing how you all had better go to see the new Oscar-winning movies? "How could 'Chariots of Fire' beat 'On Golden Pond' when both Fonda and Hepburn won the big ones for acting?" The inevitable response from your roommate is, "Well, if you would just go to see it, you'd know why." So off the Westwood, without a jacket because it's so nice out at night. I love the spring — except when it floods. Oh well, summer will take care of excess water.

Spring quarter seemed to be one string of "weeks." There was International Week, Engineers' Week, UniCamp Week, Gay Awareness Week, Mardi Gras Week, Spring Sing Week, Dead Week, and (Oh No!) Finals Week. I still don't know how Mardi Gras lures me away from my studies after three years of it. There's just something about the people you meet at a carnival.

The events kept coming and before I knew it, friends were graduating. I wonder when/if I'll graduate. There are so many people at this place, it's truly amazing that you will actually feel that you're an integral part of the place called UCLA when it comes time to graduate. □

Mardi Gras

Exciting, Entertaining and Fun. Those are but a few of the adjectives used to describe the UCLA Mardi Gras. Serving as a source of relief from mid-spring quarter tensions, Mardi Gras allows the entire community to become engulfed in a weekend of madness. It also yields great joy to thousands of inner city children each summer by serving as a fund-raiser for UCLA's UniCamp. While the weekend of Mardi Gras comes and goes quickly, the planning and organizing of its magnificence begins months ahead of time.

The Mardi Gras Committee commenced work during winter quarter. In addition to acquiring needed publicity, judges, and traveling carnival company contracts, committee workers contacted fraternities, sororities, clubs and organizations and even dorm floors to organize the entertainment and food and game booths.

By the beginning of spring quarter most of the work was done. Advertisements for Mardi Gras were now seen on television, in newspapers, on billboards, and heard on the radio. Students began to feel the "Mardi Gras Mania" in the air and look forward to its arrival. The final touches on all booths were done, the carnival rides were moved in and the Committee could now sigh a deep breath of relief.

Thursday night was set aside for the many groups and organizations sponsoring the various booths. These workers were now allowed a trouble-free and uncrowded evening to enjoy their great accomplishment. But even while relaxing, there was still tension in the air in anticipation of tomorrow's grand opening.

On Friday night, the true joy and splendor of Mardi Gras could be felt. Music, fireworks, games, food, and entertainment abounded with individuals of all age levels joining in on the fun. Mardi Gras was now operating in full swing, and the enthusiasm of its presence did not die until the final closing of the gate on Sunday afternoon.

After the grandeur of Mardi Gras, the time came for its most beneficial aspect to come into effect . . . all proceeds were contributed to UniCamp.

UniCamp represents a UCLA-supported camp for underprivileged children which offers UCLA students the opportunity to develop leadership skills through service to the community.

The camp was founded in 1935 by the board of The University Religious Conference, an organization comprised of the major religious groups serving the UCLA campus. At its start, UniCamp was mainly operated through the solicitation of funds, but because of its popularity among students, UniCamp became the official charity for Mardi Gras and UCLA in the 1940's.

Over the years thousands of children have attended UniCamp. The children are referred by social service agencies, schools, and neighborhood centers throughout the Los Angeles area.

The two camps of UniCamp are each located in the Barton Flats area of the San Bernardino National Forest. Each camp hosts groups of 65 and 80 children, providing a full range of activities including arts and crafts, archery, swimming, hiking, fishing, sports, evening camp fires, and campwide events. While each UniCamp session consists of ten days, the students and children involved learn a lot about giving of themselves in the process of sharing their friendship and talents with others.

Through UniCamp, the greatness of Mardi Gras is felt in two separate manners. It not only provides immediate joy to thousands through Mardi Gras' three-day session, but also provides life-time memories to thousands of needy children each year. □

The Arts

"Art comes to you proposing frankly to give nothing but the highest quality to your moments as they pass."

—Walter Pater
The Renaissance

Much of the vigor and vitality in a major university takes place in its creative arts programs. Here, in UCLA's North Campus, artists and designers, film majors, dancers, musicians and theater arts majors create a special energy that is evident in the exhibits, films, dances, art shows and plays put on by the students.

The North Campus creative arts buildings, Dickson Art Center, MacGowan Hall, Melnitz and the Freud Playhouse become the home away from home for many students. Their work is not simply learned in a classroom or from a book; it requires hours, if not years of practicing lines, trying new techniques, learning musical scores and getting the final project "just right."

Take a walk through the North Campus Statue Garden during lunch hour and surround yourself with creative energy. Artists are sketching, absorbed in their work, while jugglers perform, and dancers practice to music only they can hear. A musician may play, unconcerned, as actors roar or whisper their lines, and people stroll, skate, skip and saunter among the statues, adding to the creative atmosphere. □

Surrounded by the Grandeur of Design

Architecture

Moving in 1929 from its original cramped and outgrown quarters on Vermont Avenue in mid-town Los Angeles, UCLA laid down its foundations on the barren chaparral-covered hills of Westwood. From what was once just four structures (Royce Hall, Powell Library, Kinsey Hall and Haines Hall) standing majestically in the middle of a deep arroyo there has grown a campus with some 125 buildings with the charm and grace that rivals many centuries-old and ivy-clad Eastern schools.

But with ten minute passing periods and seemingly endless streams of exams and papers, we often fail to appreciate the grand display of architectural details and workmanship that we pass daily. The four original buildings around Dickson Quad were all designed in the Romanesque style reminiscent of northern Italy and suggests the rich academic tradition of the Renaissance. Royce Hall's bold towers, graceful arches, sturdy columns and the portico enclosing the main entrance to the auditorium were patterned after the basilica of San Ambrogio in Milan, Italy.

Powell Library strikes a resemblance to the Church of San Zenove in Verona, Italy, yet bear heads that line the banisters and pillars carved with the twelve disciples representing the twelve disciplines of knowledge and education add distinctive touches that make this structure unique.

Stone carvings, a distinctive feature of medieval architecture and deemed frivolous in today's sleek construction, can be found along Kinsey Hall. Above the entrances to this building are carved the entreaty from Psalms (119:18), "Open Thou mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things of Thy law" and a quote attributed to English scientist Michael Faraday, "Nothing is too wonderful to be true" complemented by fluid arabesques and lace-like patterns. These details are lasting examples of a period when detailed and intricate craftsmanship were an integral aspect of a building's overall design.

Kerckhoff Hall, headquarters for the Associated Students' government and publications and once UCLA's first student union, is the only campus structure in Tudor Gothic architecture and resembles Henry VII's chapel in Westminster. The light that filters through its finely leaded and hand-painted window panels gives the interior a mystical glow which accents the building's vaulted archways.

After World War II, however, the original architecture style employed in the campus' original buildings was abandoned for a more economical contemporary style that displayed the minimalist design concept. Using modern glass and steel, Bunche Hall, Molecular Biology Building, Jerry Lewis Neuro-muscular Research Center, Placement and Career Planning Center and UCLA's newest addition, the Louis Factor Building, are all tributes to this sleek style. Christopher Georgescu's metal sculpture, "Splits Radiation" punctuates the James E. West Center's clean design and finds itself among picturesque gardens designed and donated by Japanese Americans.

Although construction is still continuing throughout the campus, care is taken by planners to coordinate and blend the old with the new, creating the varied surroundings that reflects the equally diverse student population. □ allowing students to familiarize themselves with sophisticated equipment and get better acquainted with the field of theater. Productions are sometimes held in the Little Theater, Freud Playhouse, and 1340, which is a classroom-type theater. Many of these presentations are classic plays although contemporary and original works are also utilized.

Several famous actors, actresses, directors, producers, and cinematographers have graduated the UCLA Theater Arts Department. Often one of these graduates returns to campus and participates in student projects.

Theater Arts as a major at UCLA is hardly a task of ease. It requires determination and strong dedication — a lifestyle for a very unique kind of student. □

Practice Makes Perfect

Music

The UCLA Department of Music offers a varied curriculum of practical, theoretical, and historical studies in the musical field.

Because it is one of UCLA's noteworthy assets, the music department is useful not only to a music major, but all UCLA students and the surrounding community with frequent musical presentations.

Among 1981-82 recitals were the UCLA Performance Organizations: the A Cappella Choir, Madrigal Singers, Men's Glee Club, Women's Glee Club, the Collegium Musicum, the Opera Workshop, the Musical Theater Workshop, Symphony Orchestra, Chamber Ensembles, Concert Band, Jazz Ensemble and Wind Ensemble. The Marching and Varsity Bands are also considered a major part of the Music Department. Student performances are held in Schoenberg Auditorium, Jan Popper Theater, and Royce Hall.

The home of the UCLA music department is Schoenberg Hall and Annex, named in honor of Arnold Schoenberg, Professor of music at UCLA from 1936 to 1944. The facilities are well equipped with almost seventy practice rooms housing pianos, organs or listening equipment, an electric piano studio, a media center, teaching studios, Ethnomusicology Archive and classrooms, Early music and Systematic Musicology laboratories and the Electronic Music studio.

With talented and dedicated faculty, excellent facilities, extensive resources, and tremendous support, the UCLA Music Department offers outstanding opportunities to hear, to participate, and to learn while developing musical and academic skills. □

THE ARTS

Creativity Flourishes

Art/Design

Do you ever wonder where all those unique-looking students carrying blue plastic tackle boxes and oversized sketch pads come from? Chances are, these semi-humans wearing turquoise cowboy boots and lavender t-shirts are the product of Dickson Art Center located in (you guessed it) North Campus.

Dickson is the home of three separate majors in the Art Department: Art History, Design and Painting/Sculpture/Graphic Arts. The latter includes courses such as painting, drawing, printmaking, sculpture, and photography. Design covers a broader spectrum of courses involving ceramics, glass, clothing, textiles, video, graphics, landscape/shelter, industrialization, and product. The other major of the Art Department is Art History, which involves indepth studies of art from different periods and cultures. Art History majors utilize a more traditional classroom-type atmosphere—a rarity in Dickson.

The unique atmosphere of Dickson is by no means a new tradition. After all, how do you think Michelangelo Buonaroti got started?□

—TN

The artistic heart of UCLA lies deep in North Campus. With Dickson Art Center to one side and Macgowan Hall to the other, North Campus creates the DiVinci's and Picasso's of the future.

Sculpture Garden

Where once stood a mere dusty North Campus parking lot, now stands the Franklin D. Murphy Sculpture Garden. This expansive setting, named in honor of former Chancellor Franklin D. Murphy, is the fulfillment of the dream of two men—Franklin Murphy and Ralph Cornell, a distinguished professional landscape artist.

The dream was to create a green open space which would collaborate between nature and man combining the creative genius of the sculpture with the constantly changing creativity of plant life. Without a doubt, this dream has been marvelously fulfilled. This landscape now has over sixty sculptures, including the work of such artists as Jean Arp, Jacques Lipchitz, and Henri Matisse.

The Sculpture Garden's hospitable setting provides a peaceful atmosphere for lunch, socializing, studying, or just "vegging out". Cornell planned the garden without benches but with free-form seating areas well designed into the landscape.

North Campus Focus on Art

Wight Art Gallery

The Frederick S. Wight Art Gallery is still another part of the North Campus art scene.

In 1972 the UCLA Art Council gave $400,000 for the renovation and expansion of the gallery, making it a spacious well equipped building. The Gallery is open not only to UCLA students, but members of the community as well. Young school children are often given tours of the gallery along with informal lectures about the exhibitions.

majors. Also, cultural and ethnic presentations are given with international art shows.

The Franklin D. Murphy Sculpture Garden and the Frederick S. Wight Art Gallery are two major assets of artistic involvement at UCLA. □

Take a Walk on the Wild Side

Feel like taking a short trip to Japan or wandering through a lush green forest? Well, you can, right here and you don't have to travel miles and miles or across the ocean to experience it. Because UCLA has its own Japanese Garden and Botanical Garden.

Japanese Garden

The Japanese Garden is located in Bel Air and was a donation to the University in 1965. The garden serves as an adjunct in the teaching programs of several UCLA departments, but it's also open to the public by reservation. Upon arrival, you are confronted with a delicately constructed, temple-like main gate fashioned in the style of the famous Ichida estate in Kyoto. And once you pass through the entrance, you are miraculously transported into the peaceful and tranquil realm of the Orient. Nearly all the trees and plants belong to species that are grown in Japan while the major structures in the garden—the main gate, the teahouse, bridges, and the shrine were all built in Japan and reassembled here by Japanese artisans. Even the major symbolic rocks were shipped from Japan. In the central region of the garden, there is a beautiful pond surrounded by a pebbled shoreline and pine trees. The pond is filled with huge, colorful koi fish and did you know that koi can live as long as two-hundred years or so?

The gardens in Japan were traditionally built by the ruling elite and by monasteries as places for peaceful contemplation and worship. So if you ever feel like getting a bit of foreign culture into your life or just meditating in a beautiful, tranquil atmosphere, come by and visit the Japanese Garden.

Botanical Garden

Another garden spot can be found at UCLA, and more specifically, in the southeastern part of the campus. Located here is the Mildred E. Mathias Botanical Garden, started in 1929 when UCLA was first established on this campus. The eight acre garden serves primarily for the teaching of botany and ornamental horticulture, with some lab classes held in the garden.

Within the garden, you'll find a wide variety of plant life, over 3500 species to be more precise. There are eucalyptus, laurel, fig, cork, carob and even redwood trees. There's also a tropical region where birds of paradise, bamboos, palms, gingers and banana trees flourish in our sunny Southern California climate. Along with the plant life there naturally exists animal life. You may see a furry squirrel scurrying up a tree or a swooping blue jay here and there. Across the bridge is a pond filled with carp (English American for koi) and turtles, too.

Well folks, if you ever feel the need to relax and get a little closer to Mother Nature, do drop by the Botanical Garden. □

Museum of Cultural History

UCLA has its own museum-gallery located right here on campus in Haines Hall. The Museum of Cultural History, originally called the Museum of Laboratories of Ethnic Arts and Technology, was first established in 1963.

The Museum houses over 120,000 objects, representing contemporary, historic, and prehistoric cultures of Africa, Oceania, the Americas, Asia, the Near East and Europe. Of special note is the Sir Henry Wellcome Collection, especially rich in materials from Africa and Oceania, which was presented to the University in 1965. The Museum's primary role is that of an educational institution; it collects objects of scholarly or aesthetic value, preserves and maintains them in the best conditions possible. In addition, the Museum exhibits and interprets the objects for students, faculty, and the general public. So by actively encouraging the utilization and enjoyment of its holdings and resources, the Museum has become a dynamic and innovative teaching arm of the University.

Each year, the Museum develops one major exhibition which is shown in UCLA's Fredrick S. Wight Art Gallery. The Museum also sponsors activities in conjunction with its exhibitions, including lectures, performances, and symposia.

The gallery in Haines Hall was established in 1978. The 1,800 square foot multi-purpose facility is used for exhibits directly related to teaching and research. The gallery also serves as a focal point for classes, seminars, and lectures. The Museum maintains hall cases in various buildings on campus and installs changing exhibits throughout the year. The themes for the cases range from newly-documented information, requests from other research centers, departments, student groups or individual research projects based on museum collections, but the majority of displays are organized to enrich and highlight concurrent course lectures and associated readings.

The Museum of Cultural History is unique in the variety and quality of its programs, and represents an invaluable resource for the University as well as the community. Since its inception, the Museum has flourished and is now internationally known for the quality of its collections, programs, publications, and exhibitions. □

A Student Corporation

UCLA's student body, although considered part of the "me" generation, is also unconsciously a member of an organization far larger and complex than itself. Membership into this organization is gained automatically with the payment of registration fees. The organization functions each day of the school year, operating on various levels from student leadership to the many eateries and food services on campus. Have you guessed yet what this great conglomeration is called? Why it's the Associated Students of the University of California, Los Angeles, of course! That's right, ASUCLA while maintaining 31,000 members, functions relatively secretly on campus, generally only leaving its mark on your checkbook.

"The extent of these services is, in a word, incredible!"

The swift yet smooth management of this vast enterprise lies with the Board of Control which assists in the policy and decision making of the university. The BOC attempts to abide by the rules and concepts of the university while adopting new procedures aimed at bettering student relations.

Working with the BOC is the Communications Board which represents all student publications on campus. The Comm Board's main role is that of a commentator between the BOC and the student body, making students aware of all major issues within the University.

Other important functions of the ASUCLA is to provide a wide range of services for students. The extent of these services is, in a word, incredible!

CONVENIENCE—Did you know that without leaving campus you could make reservations for a trip to Hawaii, Mexico, Europe or you name it? The ASUCLA Travel Service will gladly plan and arrange a whole vacation for you. They also can provide great student discounts!

FOR THAT CREATIVE TOUCH—Set any artist free in the School and Arts supply department and its could be hours before they come out—their arms full of new supplies. There is a wide range of supplies available; from mechanical pencils, grade cards and french curves to notebooks, picture frames and they even have little black books for those important names and numbers! There are so many items in School and Arts Supplies, it is easy to get confused. Just ask one of the helpful employees in the bright blue vests (usually covered with buttons!) and they can assist you.

STEP OUT IN STYLE—Whether you are an avid Bruin fan, a super jock or interested in the latest fashions, the departments in Ackerman Union can dress you in style. Anything blue and yellow and says UCLA on it or could possibly have a Bruin printed on it, is most likely available in the Bearwear department. Mugs, keychains, bumper stickers, shirts, shorts (available in sizes to fit infants up to the 5th year senior) line the shelves.

The shelves are stocked with Nike, Adidas and Puma tennis shoes plus other sporting goods in the men's section. Backpacks, tennis racquets, swimgear, good ol' Levis 501 jeans as well as the latest in pocket calculators to really snaz up anyone's wardrobe.

HURRY UP AND WAIT—The unavoidable lines are particularly apparent around the textbooks, Country Store and Lecture Notes sections. Under the same roof, you could conceivably purchase a cookbook, buy ingredients needed for one of the book's recipes and hop home to cook while reading the notes on the class you are missing. The Textbook department offers not only books for your classes, but magazines, calendars, and books on almost any subject.

ASUCLA: Provides for You!

DELICIOUS TOO!—What'll it be today: pasta, soup and salad, a burger or maybe just some yogurt and a Tab? Whatever it is, UCLA has over 7 different food services to dish it up for you. You would have to go to all parts of LA to find such an assortment in foods. Beginning at the south end of campus, at the Bomb Shelter, one can enjoy a terrific roast beef sandwich. Moving north, you stop for a bit to eat at The Treehouse in Ackerman Union. Still hungry? Try a dish of frozen yogurt at The Corner Pocket, located across from Kerckhoff. The vending machines are always a great way to grab a bite before you enter north campus. At North Campus you can make yourself a huge salad for lunch, the only problem is finding a place to sit down and enjoy it! There is more to school than what is printed in books—eating and people watching at North Campus is truly an experience.

While mainly functioning on the business and working level, there also exists a light and entertaining side to ASUCLA known as Campus Events. This level of the ASUCLA enterprise serves solely as a means of enjoyment for the students. Along with the many guest speakers from the entertainment and political world, Campus Events also sponsors student oriented activities such as the annual Halloween Party in Ackerman Union. Campus Events thereby provides the students with an inexpensive outlet from the booze and books.

While maintaining these many services within the ASUCLA organization, its main and most important function is to assist and please its members: the students. So remember, Joe Bruin, you have the "Association" behind you. □

Cooperage's Grand Opening

Taking The Coop's place by the bowling alleys in Ackerman Union is UCLA's all new eatery, The Cooperage. On September 10, 1981 the Cooperage finally opened its doors to students and faculty. Business has been quite good according to the division manager, Mike Berry. There are over 225 employees working as bartenders, food preparers, servers and as clean up crews.

A cooperage is a warehouse which stores barrels of wine, which lends its name quite appropriately to UCLA's Cooperage. To carry out the wine barrel theme, wood planks and bold graphics decorate the interior. Banners with a grape motif hang from the ceiling. One wall has four huge barrels protruding out with prime years labeling them. The years represent 1919, the establishing year of University of California, Southern Campus, 1929, UCLA's founding year and 1969, when Ackerman was built and the vintage year of 1980-81 when The Cooperage was established.

There is quite a wide range of food available at The Cooperage. The Two Bears from Italy serves up the tastiest pizza around, Casa Del Oso serves great mexican tostadas, tacos, burritos. Fred's Green Grocer offers fresh fruits, cheese and croissants and, for you traditionalists, Cooper's Grill has all types of burgers for you.

The Cooperage has entertainment also. Bands play everything from Punk to Jazz as well as occasional stand up comedians. A big TV screen really packs in the Monday night football fans, as well as the World Series games (go Dodger Blue!) and the college football games too.

The Cooperage was long time coming, but it was well worth it!

STUDENT GOVERNMENT, for the students, by the students

Student government — a bunch of students filling up resumes with great sounding jobs, playing inconsequential games of power tripping, and socially clicking with one another, while getting paid out of student registration fees. True, perhaps only to the uninformed student. Yet student government, for the student and by the student, affects even the most mundane aspects of life at UCLA, allowing those taught to take an active part in their curriculum, personal safety, health, comfort and entertainment.

SLC is comprised of board members, each heading their own departments, with their own staffs and interests. The board itself is mainly a policy making body, recommending stands on political issues both on and off campus that pertain to students. They allocate monies to the various committees, make financial recommendations, and help the president's office make many of the hundreds of appointments of students to committees on campus. They, as a whole, reflect the various ethnic racial and special interest groups on campus, allowing a good mix of viewpoints reflected on the board's decisions. Two important resolutions made by this year's board were the endorsement of a bill in Congress dealing with "Pro-Choice", a woman's right to decide for herself about abortion, as well as the problem of discrimination of students in the housing market.

Sam Law, this year's undergraduate president, was elected in a windfall vote during the 1981 Spring Quarter. Bringing with him proven experience, having been president of the Asian Coalition, making it the largest special interest group on campus. He promised to make student government active and visible. His office succeeded in many student rights oriented projects including what was nicknamed "Mad Dog", the reclamation of reserved fifty-yard line seating from student season ticket holders and back to the student body as a whole. At the beginning of the year, a rally in Meyerhoff Park against proposed budget cuts to the University from the State budget succeeded in getting a meeting for Sam with Governor Jerry Brown, who was on campus speaking on the possibility of nuclear war. This show of concern on the part of students eventually convinced the Governor to reduce the original 5% cut to 2.5%. A so-called "paper victory", nonetheless, showed that students could band together for a crucial common cause. Another long range project started by the office would be the increasing of the membership fee for the Undergraduate Students Association, included in every student's registration fees. This fee hike would raise the present six dollar price, which has been in effect since the 1940's, in order to compensate for raising costs incurred within the workings of the government itself.

Working within the office of the president are the student lobby groups: the National Student Lobby, U.C. Student Lobby, Metro Lobby and the UCLA Housing Lobby. These lobby groups represent the UCLA student body in the outside world, when issues pertaining to students are prevalent. At the beginning of the year, the U.C. Student Lobby set up a General Telephone complaint service for students having phone problems, as well as a voter registration campaign during winter quarter. Long term goals being worked on range from concern over student discrimination with regards to renting, and parking solutions, with the possibility of converting more parking space on the West Campus.

Next in line to the President's office is the Administrative Vice President's. Taking care of council business and hiring the secretarial staff is the only mundane part of the job. After that business is taken care of, the vice-president and his staff are open to any projects he deems appropriate. This fall, the office sponsored the "Fall Kick-off Celebration", where all the organizations on campus set up booths and recruited or informed interested students. Some 4000 people were estimated at attendance. Another innovation brought in this year was an in-house newsletter designed to let the student body as a whole know some of the inside scoops going on in government, an effort to open up student government.

SEPC, Student Educational Policy Commission, is divided further into four subcommittees; Academic Senate Affairs, Departmental Affairs, Student Mini Grants and Student Relations/Planning. Students participating actively in the direction of their own education.

ASA, Academic Senate Affairs, places almost thirty students on various faculty policy committees. The students themselves have no official vote, yet their opinions are considered invaluable. Looking toward long range policy issues; nevertheless, this office deals with such current problems as undergraduate admissions, including the Academic Support Program, and tutorial program for unprepared incoming students. This is a very prevalent issue, for the question asked by lawmakers and college officials is whether to up admission standards, offer remedial courses in college to help prepare struggling freshmen or to ignore the problem on the whole. Another project is the revision of the undergraduate core curriculum, also known as breadth requirements, which many feel can be too unstructured to be of any service to the student. This office also helped two majors keep themselves together this year. The Business-Economics major was being phased out, but because of the effort within this commission, the major was reinstated.

Student Mini-Grants, slate money for instructional improvement grants of up to $750, can be granted to students wanting to put on a class presentation or wishing to sponsor a class of their own.

Student Welfare Commission sponsored their traditional drive was also held during spring quarter, making the student body once again aware of the concern we all should have for the future of our planet.

The Financial Supports Commission addresses the financial concerns of the students, disseminating information on financial aid and showing alternatives to financing an education. This year's biggest project was the Computollar Scholarship Search Service, which was essentially a financial aid referral service for UCLA undergrads. With no cost to the student, a questionnaire is filled out and run through a computer that will let the applicant know what scholarships or awards he/she might be eligible for.

Bank Day was held fall quarter. Banks came and distributed literature highlighting their special services for students. A "Starving Student" exposition was held at the beginning of winter quarter, showcasing the many free services on campus. Several meetings of the SAAC, Student Aid Association of California, were held to help students fill out their student aid applications. Students were also often informed about upcoming deadlines via ads in the Daily Bruin.

Something for every student's interests. The first vice-presionce-a-quarter blood drives, each quarter collecting on the average of 1300 pints. Also sponsored by their departments are the Peer Health counselors, and the Women's Issues Committee. The evening tram service, still a budding project, was revised again this year with the purchase of two vans driven by Community Service Officers, allowing the service more route stops, faster service and an eventual savings over the present service. An aluminum can dent takes care of the budgeting for all the special interest groups as well as the offices on SLC. The General Reps are the connection between students' voices and the voice of government. Campus Events, probably the most visible group on campus, takes care of the Ackerman movies and the speakers program. Although student government is not always as visible as Campus Events, it is an active government, really making a difference in the life of the everyday student. □

A Range of Learning Experiences Off-Campus

If you think that the classroom is the only place for the student to gain an education, then you'd better open your eyes and take a look around at all the opportunities UCLA offers for involvement off-campus. CSC is one opportunity for students interested in community affairs, to help people who are in need of assistance or companionship. In addition, EXPO offers students opportunities for cross-cultural experiential education. And to top it all off, if you like to travel and wish to study abroad or even just somewhere else in the States, then the EAP is for you.

CSC

Ever wonder just what the initials CSC stand for? Well, if you don't already know, I'll tell you. It's an abbreviation for Community Service Commission, which is a student-run organization to help other members within our community. Through CSC, you will be able to gain an education in consumer affairs, enrichment through better community relations and experience in tutoring and motivation. There are presently thirteen different projects you can become involved with: Amigos Del Barrio, the Asian Education Project, the Community Theater Workshop, the Consumer Protection Project, the Exceptional Children's Tutorial Project, Project MAC, Project Motivation, the Prison Coalition, the Senior Citizens Project, the Student Educational Exposure Project, the UCLA Special Olympics, the UCLA Village CO-OP, and Uni-camp.

EXPO

If you've ever wanted to serve an internship either in a governmental/non-governmental field or in an international field, EXPO can place you in the assignment depending upon your interest, background and the agencies' needs. The internship program is offered during all four quarters of the year to any full-time undergraduate or graduate student at UCLA including graduating seniors. EXPO also hosts the Model United Nations Program, trains students to become counselors for the VITA (Volunteer Income Tax Assistance) program and even offers a Semester at Sea program. EXPO is located in the EXPO Center on A-Level in Ackerman Union.

EAP

The Education Abroad Program offers students in their junior year the opportunity to travel and study overseas. The program has information and services located in the EXPO Center. Each year 120-125 students are selected to travel to twenty-four different countries. And if you would like to study or work in a country not listed in the twenty-four, or would rather not stay for the full one year, the EXPO Center will provide you with other options.

So there you have it, Bruins, a variety of exciting and educational experiences offered outside of the classroom. Why not take advantage of these learning opportunities and get involved with life! □

Service Organization

Campus Service Organizations play an important role on a campus as large as UCLA. UCLA service organizations provide indispensable aid to decrease student apathy and to increase student involvement since they provide for many school oriented activities. Blue Key and Bruin Belles are the two most established service organizations here at UCLA and have many active members.

Blue Key

Blue key is a campus service organization whose involvement runs parallel to Bruin Belles. It is a National Honor Fraternity accepting only juniors and seniors with a minimum 3.0 GPA. Although Blue Key is not associated with the Greek system, most members are fraternity men. However, Blue Key welcomes and encourages non-Greeks to seek membership.

Last year Blue Key made contributions to the Heart Association through proceeds from their "All-U" party fundraiser. Other activities included participation in a charitable telethon, halftime crowd control, and Mardi Gras participation. At the end of the year Blue Key held the "Blue Ball" formal dance sending off the graduating seniors and celebrating the end of another successful year.

"Blue key has earned a reputation as being the 'hosts' of UCLA."

---

Deservingly, Blue Key has earned a reputation as being the "hosts" of UCLA.

Bruin Belles

Bruin Belles is an all-girl service organization often referred to as the "Hostesses of UCLA". Comprised of 130 girls (at least thirty from each class), Bruin Belles are chosen by judges from the Alumni Association.

The group categorizes their activities into three areas: social, athletic, and philanthropic. Although many social functions in the past were for mainly outside causes, formals were often held within the group this year. Athletic involvement concerned greeting visitor teams and providing support for female as well as male sports.

Other important endeavors last year included volunteer work for the Red Cross and the Marion Davies Cancer Clinic. Also, they worked alongside the Student Committee for Fine Arts in welcoming many of UCLA's guest artists.

For the Bruin Belles, 1982 was, as usual, a productive, worthwhile year. They once again succeeded in representing UCLA and upholding its outstanding social reputation. □

Reaching Out With Outreach

Need to rap with someone about a personal problem, or just want to talk to somebody who will listen? Need advice about technical University policies and procedures or at least directions to someone who can help you? Need medical information, counselling, or referrals? All these services are available right here at UCLA. Simply reach out to the outreach programs: Helpline, Academic Student K/Counselors (ASK), and Peer Health Counselors (PHC).

Helpline

Helpline (825-4357) is a student-run program formed in 1970. According to Cary Porter, adviser to the program, the program was formed because many people were reluctant to really discuss their problems or just talk to "establishment" programs. Since Helpline is a volunteer-staffed, non-establishment organization, there is very little risk to callers.

Helpline is presently staffed wholly by students, but volunteers are welcome from the faculty and staff. The volunteers must go through an eight-week training program where they are prepared to handle situations that may occur when they are "on-line." Currently there are twenty students on the lines with fifteen more in training.

Callers to the program have ranged from lonely people just wanting to talk to someone to people considering suicide. Drug, sexual problems, family problems, and rape are also areas discussed on the Helpline.

"Our strategy, to summarize it in one word, would be empathy as opposed to sympathy or advice," concludes Porter.

ASK

Scattered throughout the campus from URL to the Court of the Sciences, from Murphy

Hall to Ackerman, and three other places besides, ASK is prepared to answer questions regarding university policies and provide referrals if they cannot provide an answer.

Staffed by sixteen fellow College of L & S members, ASK assists approximately 1,500 students per week. ASK counselors receive their training in an initial two-week period and also continuously through the weekly meetings. Their effectiveness is evaluated by the program coordinator and by exercises at the weekly staff meetings, and of course from help Bruins with their afflictions.

PHC offers information, counselling, resources, and referrals for more serious cases. PHC volunteers must apply for positions and pass through an interview process before they receive permission to enroll in Public Health 19, the training grounds for Peer Health counselors.

There are ten different areas where PHC is concentrated. Among them: self-help weight control and nutrition, stress reduction training, information tables, counselling office, cold clinic, fitness inventory testing clinic, hypertension screening, women's health service, contraception counselling and education, and pregnancy screening.

While the others are more or less self-explanatory, the fitness inventory testing clinic may need clarification. It provides supervised fitness tests to determine the right exercise program for the individual.

Another interesting program is the stress reduction training. The program teaches relaxation techniques and other avenues to relieve tension. This should prove especially useful during finals week. □

Unicamp

Nestled up in the San Bernardino Forest, among the pinetrees, snow-fed streams and wildlife, there is Unicamp. Unicamp's two campsites are located about one mile apart in the Barton Flats area and they play host to the 175 plus UCLA student volunteers acting as camp counselors to underprivileged children.

The student-run organization over the years has been able to provide over 12,000 kids with a full range of camp activities, including arts and crafts, archery, swimming, hiking, fishing, sports, evening campfires, and special campside events.

The children are referred by social service agencies, schools, and neighborhood centers throughout the Los Angeles area on the basis of need — poverty, racial discrimination, neglect, abuse, broken homes, physical and emotional handicaps. Unicamp benefits all involved; many of the counselors maintain contact with their campers after the summer has ended and have an annual reunion at a UCLA football game.

The kids learn about sharing and friendship, just as the counselors do. Unicamp offers UCLA students the opportunity to develop leadership skills through service to the community.

Unicamp originated in 1935 by students on the board of the University Religious Conference. The organization is an independent organization comprised of the major religious groups at UCLA. It is operated by the University Camps Council, a board of directors composed of UCLA students, alumni, University and community members. Unicamp is accredited by the American Camping Association.

Many students associate Unicamp with Mardi Gras, and rightly so. Unicamp is the official charity of UCLA and over half of Unicamp's operating costs come from the annual UCLA Mardi Gras. Unicamp also receives support from individuals and organizations in the Los Angeles community.

It is with great appreciation and devotion that the volunteering students from UCLA make Unicamp the greatest place in the world for so many deserving children, who otherwise would never be exposed to any type of camp and friends. □

The Voice of UCLA

Communications of UCLA. Just what does this mean? For UCLA this includes not only publications, but air waves also. Under the auspices of the Comm Board of ASUCLA, UCLA produces a daily newspaper, six special interest papers, and a daily radio format. (Not to mention the UCLA yearbook, Southern Campus, and Westwind the literary magazine.) Each of these are unique forms of communications in their own right.

Daily Bruin: What's Bruin?

What makes a Bruin, really feel like a Bruin? Is it mastering the "Bruin Walk Hike?" Is it maintaining one's "Boelter Hall Glow?" Is it singing rather than mouthing the words to "Hail to the Hills of Westwood?" NO! It's . . . reading the Daily Bruin! That's right, no Bruin is complete without his/her daily dosage of DB Review, Viewpoint, Perspective and don't forget the Personals.

Under the watchful eye of Editor-in-Chief, Jesse Coronado, the DB writers, photographers, advertising staff, and sports staff distribute a daily paper that is arousing, enlightening, and entertaining.

Covering everything from student protests to Halloween seminars, the staff leaves no stone unturned, no branch unbroken, and no leaf uncrumbled to get its story. The DB has its finger on the pulse of the Big U! It serves as the commentator of the university, making students aware of all changes and occurrences in University procedures.

But happenings within the university represent only half of DB's coverage, for is also includes national and world headlines, along with the latest in movies, music, and books.

Besides being a great source of information, the Daily Bruin also has a hundred and one other uses, i.e., may be used as an umbrella on a rainy day, may be used as a great means of ruining your favorite clothes with ink, or give your dorm meal a proper burial.

COMMUNICATION

SIPs

Representation of minorities on a campus as large as UCLA is not an easy task, but the Bruins get the job done with its series of Special Interest Papers published specifically for the minority student. These papers include La Gente for Latinos; Nommo for Blacks; Ha'am for Jews; and Pacific Ties for Asians. Also represented are women via Together, and gays and lesbians through Ten Percent.

Within the Special Interest Papers, concentration is focused on the needs and interests of the minority student. The SIPs provide current information regarding events, literature, and the various services available to students of each race, sex, and inclination.

Although focused on the views of minorities, the Special Interest Papers also serve as a source of information to other UCLA's journal of the arts, Westwind, serves as a forum from which the artistic innovators of UCLA may express their craft. Existing in publication since 1950, Westwind is distributed three times a year by the ASUCLA Communications Board. In an effort to stimulate its readers to set their own standards for artistic and literary quality, Westwind includes poetry, drama, photography, and prose, thereby reflecting the total spectrum of UCLA's creativity.

KLA: Rockin' UCLA

UCLA's radio station, KLA — the sound of UCLA — broadcasts daily on both the AM and FM dials. Through the Theta Cable, students may tune in for the latest news, sports, weather, and of course, music.

But the range of KLA is not limited to the campus, for it may also be heard in many communities within the Los Angeles, thereby gaining an expanded audience.

KLA not only serves as an informative source to its listening audience, but also assists students interested in radio through its quarterly meetings on management, sports, and on-the-air news.

While maintaining a staff of over 200, KLA functions smoothly in assuring top-notch information and entertainment for its listeners. □ —LC

The Preparation

Before any athlete faces his competition, he must go through training and all the necessary preparation. There is more to the preparation before a game than just the physical training and having one's body in shape. There is the mental aspect also and that plays a very large role in any athlete's performance. The preparation really depends on the individual and varies from the type of person who gets really hyped-up in the anticipation of his sport, to the athlete whose mental preparation consists of a lot of self-discipline and devotion. The weeks, months and years that many athletes spend preparing themselves takes severe determination. The time-consuming, often gruelling hours spent doing sprints, running distances, jumping rope and lifting weights becomes a way of life for many athletes.

The training is building more than just muscles. Practice builds self-assurance. The self-confidence an athlete has in himself is vital to his performance. A positive attitude is essential. Many athletes look back on their previous games remembering their weak points and try to improve their strengths. They visualize the game ahead of them and try to mentally prepare how they will react under various circumstances; by having already "played the game," a certain confidence is established. Many athletes are superstitious and believe strongly in lucky charms. Some feel that by wearing the same "lucky" pair of socks, shorts, what have you, they maintain that winning streak they believe was brought about by wearing those items.

The physical training itself is often an athlete's way of psyching up. For some, the preparation becomes a total preoccupation. They walk, talk and think of nothing but their game, match, bout or tournament. Living with the other team members, the preoccupation is multiplied. Each athlete talking about what competition is ahead is a big part of the pre-game mental preparation. When a goal is set, it gives one something to strive towards and work for. Ah, the sweet smell of success! However, to win, someone must lose and there is always the possibility of being injured. These feelings must be surpassed and pushed to the back of one's mind. An aggressive, "balls out" attitude must prevail. The fear of defeat can have a positive effect by becoming a motivator and a real driving force. No one likes to lose, to let down the fans, the team and most of all, oneself. One of the most frustrating feelings an athlete can experience is when they have lost control. To put everything in, both physically and mentally, and have it not be enough, is one of the most aggravating and frustrating moments for any athlete. Losing is part of game.

The long hours, the sore aching muscles, the cramps, shin splints, special diets and drained hopes are all part of the sports we play and the price that some must pay.

As mentioned, the athlete's attitude before a game is as important as the many hours of training invested. Whatever it takes to increase confidence and get the adrenaline going. Many different aspects of preparation are taken. For some, the key is to "look good, feel good." New or special clothing, whether it's a new tennis dress or a pair of boxing trunks can often make you feel and perform better. Getting to "know" one's equipment is also important for many people. Athletes are sometimes seen wearing their mouthpiece hours before it's necessary or subconsciously twirling their racquet in their hand while in a deep mental state. These athletes are getting in touch with their equipment and with themselves. Many athletes choose to be alone before a match. Others enjoy music as a psych-up.

Athletes can practice head fakes, sprints, running up and down the stairs or test their physical strength against one another in a group. The best of athletes must also practice their psych-up. They must have their mind in shape also. The mental preparation and conditioning requires a personal workout. □

“Hear and Character” are the two words that best describe this year’s UCLA football team. After six games the Bruins held a 1-1-1 Pacific-10 Conference record and a 3-2-1 record overall, and had many people saying, “Wait till next year”. However, the Mighty Bruins refused to give up. And they came back to win four out of their last five games, coming within one kick of the Rose Bowl, and winning an invitation to the Blue Bonnet Bowl.

Under the guidance of Head Coach Terry Donahue, this relatively young squad improved greatly as the season wore on, and by the end they were playing like professionals. The Bruins seemed to get better with every game, and the experienced seniors, All-American tight end Tim Wrightman, offensive tackle Luis Sharpe, and talented kicker Norm Johnson all provided the team with poise and leadership. Thus it was with the efforts of the senior class that the Bruins were able to rebound so strongly during the second half of the season.

This year the exciting Bruin offense averaged an impressive 26 points per game. The offense was led by the passing of quarterback Tom Ramsey, the acrobatic catches of Cormac Carney and the slashing runs of Kevin Nelson. After revamping their offense last season in an effort to become more diversified, the Bruins added even more new formations and plays this year. The offensive squad used these added dimensions to their advantage and became a threat to score whenever they had the ball.

"If the UCLA offense played well this year, then the defense played superbly."

---

If the UCLA offense played well this year, then the defense played superbly. The defense held the opponents to under 20 points seven times this year, and the Bruins were 6-0-1 in those games. The anchors of the Bruin defense were their two free safeties, Tom Sullivan and Don

Rogers. These two tough hitters led the team in tackles and intercepted more passes. With other standout defenders such as junior tackle Irv Eatman and sophomore linebacker Ron Butler, the Bruins stopped some of the best teams in the nation.

Even though the Bruins didn't quite make it to the Rose Bowl, they still have a very impressive past season to reflect upon: the four big victories in the last half of the season, the amazing shut-out win over the Rose Bowl-bound Washington, and the fantastic playing of Nelson, Ramsey, Carney, Sullivan, and so many others. If there's one thing that the 1981 Bruins will be remembered for, it would have to be for their indomitable spirit. They could have given up after their poor start, but they refused. And they came back and played even harder. □

UCLA Sings the Bluebonnet Blues'

Billed by many to be a better matchup than the Rose Bowl, UCLA falls to Michigan in a 33-14 rout.

The 1981 Bluebonnet Bowl, featuring the Pac 10's UCLA Bruins and the Big 10's Michigan Wolverines, was billed as an attractive alternative to the Rose Bowl. Posters advertised that the contest would be "Smellin' Like a Rose." As it turned out, all the game did was smell.

Before a crowd of 40,309, who probably wished they had done something else on New Year's Eve, UCLA was soundly beaten by a more physical Michigan squad, 33-14.

The Bruin offense and defense took turns being ineffective. In the first half, the offense was nonexistent. Midway through the second quarter, Michigan had outgained UCLA, 212-0. The Bruins didn't get a first down until seven minutes were left in the half. Quarterback Tom Ramsey missed on his first seven passes, completed three in a row, and then threw an interception when hit by his own lineman, Chris Yelich.

Michigan ran up over 200 yards in the first half, but only scored 10 points, partly due to the Bruin defense, but mostly due to its own sloppy play. The Wolverines broke the Bluebonnet Bowl record for most penalties and penalty yards in a game in the first half. Twelve penalties were assessed for 118 yards. By the end of the game, the officials, throwing flags around like party favors, called 23 infractions for 242 yards. That's 47 more yards than UCLA's offense gained.

Yet, with the score only 10-0, on a 50-yard Steve Smith to Anthony Carter pass and Ali Haji-Sheikh's 24-yard field goal, UCLA was still in the game. If only the offense could start moving, that was the hope in the Bruin locker room. It did. Unfortunately for the small UCLA contingent in the Astrodome, the Bruin defense had its turn at playing poorly.

Bo Schembechler's Wolverines had the ball only four times in the entire second half. What they lacked in opportunities was made up for in efficiency. Michigan's drives in the last 30 minutes resulted in a field goal and three touchdowns.

When Ramsey threw his second touchdown pass of the night to Tim Wrightman with over seven minutes left in the game, UCLA was only trailing by five, 19-14. If the defense could hold, it appeared the offense could score again. But it didn't happen. Behind the running of Butch Woolfolk, who rushed for 186 yards on the night, and Smith, who had 216 yards in total offense, Michigan drove 80 of the easiest yards in its whole season. After a sack, two Ramsey incompletions and a punt, the Wolverine second string plowed 55 yards for a final, humiliating score. □

Cheers!

The drums echoed throughout the stadium as the band solemnly and endlessly marched out of the black tunnel. The silent Coliseum began to rumble and the roar of the crowd became more intense. Both spirit squads and the mascots ran across the field just ahead of the team. The rally committee was already preparing for half-time. Spirit was awakened in every Bruin. Throughout the year this is what every fan saw front and center, but there is more to spirit than meets the eye

Spirit Squad

It was spring quarter as they stretched, worked out, nervously cried, and stretched some more; they attached their cardboard six by eight tryout numbers on their blue and gold shirts; they fluffed their pompoms and triple tied their new shoes; they began to sweat; they laughed, told stories, and cheered each other on; they yelled, drank hot tea, and yelled some more; they taped their ankles, fixed their hair, put their cards and flowers down from well-wishers, and took a deep breath. Good luck. The judges scratched the last score down. Tryouts were over. They waited and waited and nervously waited some more; their envelopes, containing either letters of regret of congratulations, were ready to be picked up; their hands trembled; suddenly, screaming . . . tears . . . hugging . . . a hush . . . "I've got to call mom" . . . (embrace) . . . "I can't believe it" . . . "it was nice meeting you" . . . "oh my gosh I did it" . . . chills . . . smiles . . . intensity . . . "thanks for being a friend" . . . relief . . . "yah!" . . . a sigh . . . the 1981-82 Spirit Squad was finally selected.

This year's yell leaders — David White (captain), Dave Edelstein, Kim Wells, Lisa Garrett, "Freddie", Karen Imagawa, and Terri Sousa — combined a number of pyramids, double stunts, gymnastics, and arm motions to provide UCLA fans with one of its most memorable years of spirit. Cheering alongside the yell leaders were the song leaders — Krisann Pulos (captain), Dana White,

They included the Chancellor's Fall Reception, the International Adidas Fashion Show at the Biltmore, the Metromedias National Collegiate Talent Search, the Homecoming Parade in Westwood, several high school appearances during the North California Tour, and the squad's premier invitation to perform with the band at the pregame show of the 1981 World Series at Dodger Stadium.

The infamous spirit squad has appeared in such publications as Time Magazine, Sports Illustrated, Playgirl, the Daily News and the Los Angeles Times. The articles featured tryout procedures, cheerleading as a national sport, the first brother-sister spirit team, and crowd rapport. The squad has also appeared on many television shows such as "Two on the Town," "Eye on L.A.," "ESPN," and "Real People." Story lines included road trips, rallies, tailgate parties, and UCLA's and USC's spirit squads' preparation for football's fall classic.

As you can see, there's a lot more to the spirit squad than meets the eye. Their amazing performances and numerous engagements throughout the year receive much recognition from school, public and mass media. Their force sparks life into every Bruin fan. No wonder UCLA's Spirit Squad ranks as one of the top ten squad in the nation. □

Band

—DRW/HLH

UCLA's Band, over 250 members strong, entertained and delighted many people (not exclusively Bruins) with their solid gold sound the entire year. Members and staff alike spent considerable hours juggling hectic schedules of practice, actual showtime, and school.

The most hectic job of Band Director was aptly filled by Jennifer Judkins after the untimely illness and death of Director Kelly James. Ms. Judkins coordinated the marching formations, the instruments, and the music. Not an easy job: but done with much success. Several half-time shows informed as well as entertained coliseum audiences by presenting various musical styles and the stories behind those styles. One very special show dedicated to Kelly James centered around the theme "People" which also happened to be his favorite song. Jennifer had her hands full but as one band member said, "She's great! Just great!"

Extra on-campus activities included performing for other athletic teams besides football, Alumni functions, the Spring Sing, Greek Week Variety Show, and the Special Olympics to name a few. Outside performances involved taping segments for the Love Boat and Dan Fogelberg's latest album Age of Innocence.

One interesting note: the majority of the band is not made up of music majors. Most members play for fun, relaxation, and the fringe benefits (like traveling).

"L-clap, clap, clap"

"A-clap, clap, clap"

"UCLA fight, fight, fight"

The year's highlight — a trip to Houston for the Bluebonnet Bowl — certainly made all that practice worthwhile. But the best part (culled from reliable sources) definitely involved the flight home. They had three New Year's parties! — one in Houston, one over Nevada, and one when they touched ground in LA.

Undoubtably, UCLA's band and staff deserves more recognition and respect than they receive. Their musical contributions to UCLA and the entertainment industry give them professional credibility. And the Band will always be a leader among UCLA's most spirited.

Rally Comm

Rarely given the recognition they deserve, the Rally Committee worked feverishly hard to ignite some good ol' school spirit into Joe Bruin. Card stunts, rallies, and ever needed crowd control comprised the committee duties.

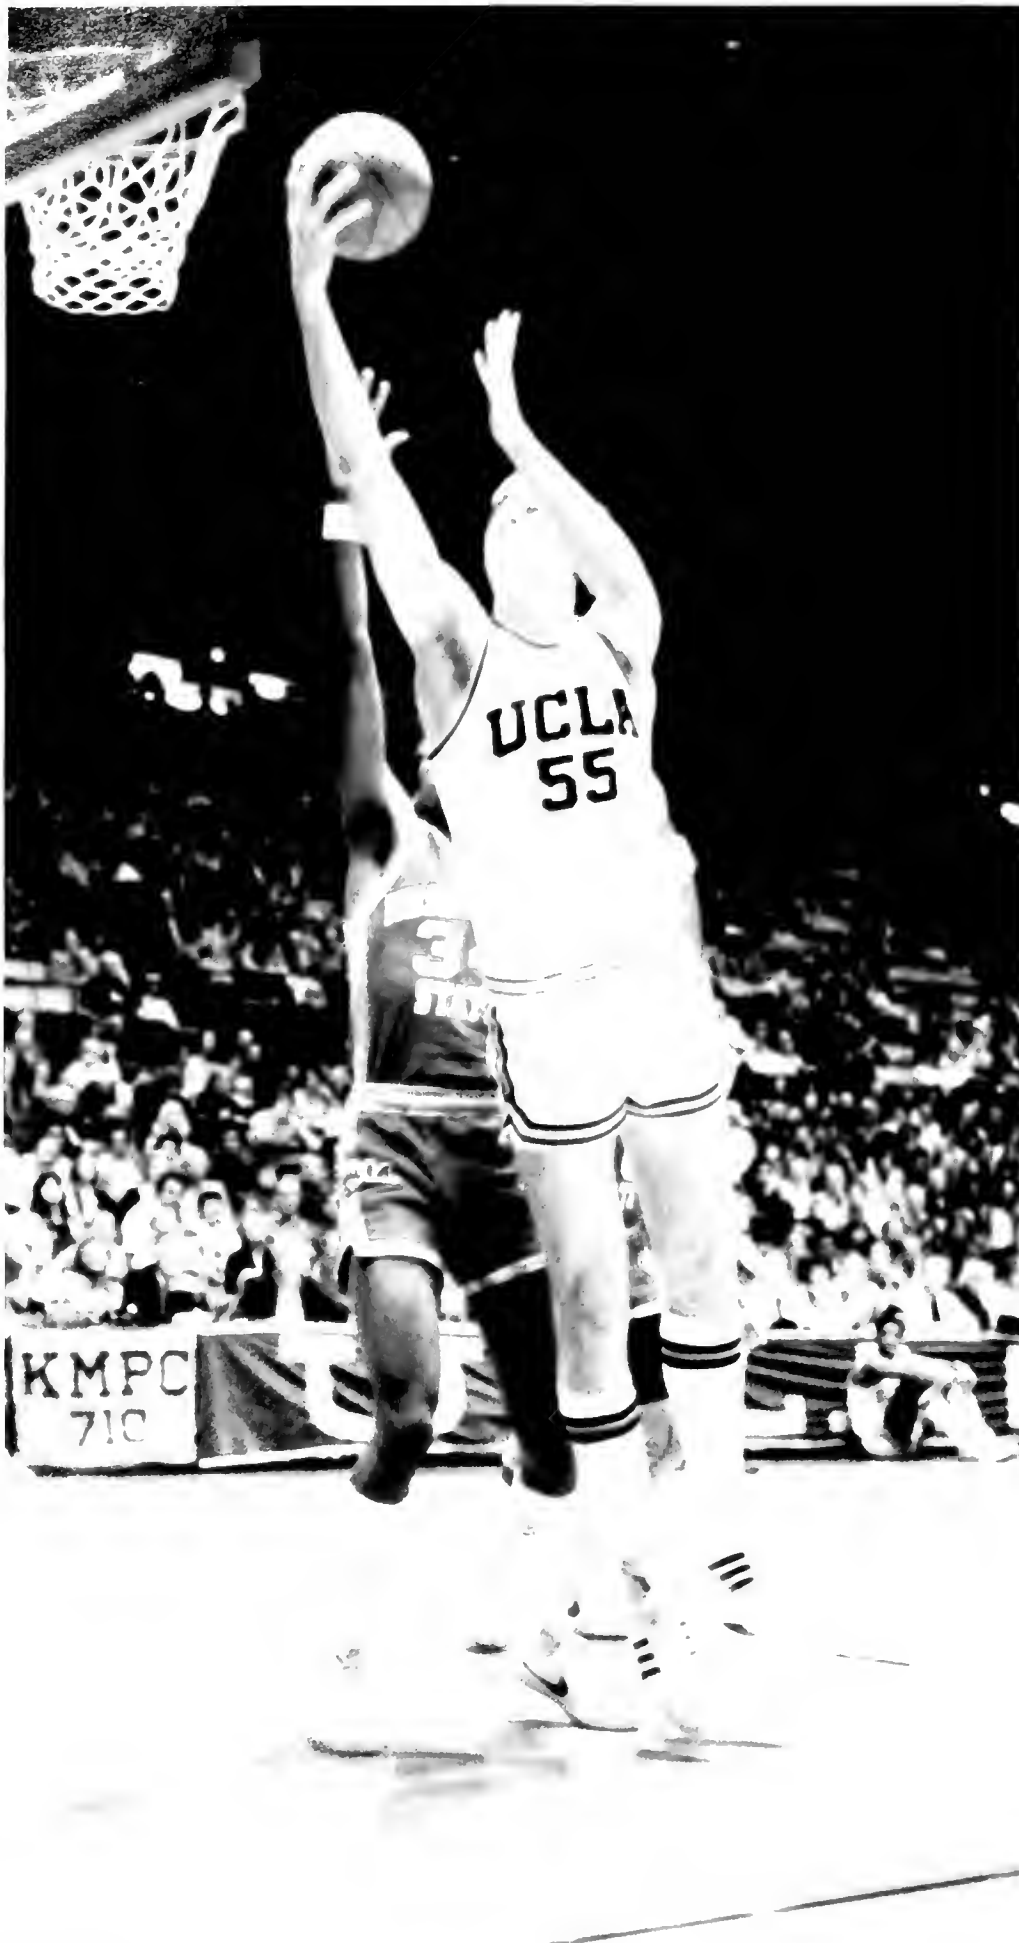

The Committee began its duties with football season by presenting the famous Coliseum card stunt show for fans and television audiences. Each stunt described a particular event that related in some way to the collegiate experience. Stunts were trendy like the "IZOD Alligator." Others were topical, like "Reaganomics" and "Dad, Please Send Money." Still others spied toward the future, especially UCLA's involvement with the 1984 Summer Olympics. Yet, of all the stunts, the UCLA signature stunt raises a roar throughout the Coliseum. It's the most popular with participants and watchers alike.

Besides card stunts, the committee hosted many spirit rallies. The most notable rallies were Homecoming and the nationally televised dual-rally between USC and UCLA involving over 3000 people. Food and entertainment accompanied much of the activity: Nowhere in the world except at UCLA rallies can you get a hot dog, a coke and entertainment for only fifty cents!

Most importantly, the Rally Committee involve long-standing tradition. A tradition of love for one's school. These most spirited people keep and spread that tradition through their time-consuming activities. Thank you Rally Committee for your dedication to UCLA. □

Gray vs Washington

This year the UCLA basketball team ended their season early because of probation penalties off the court — the first time since 1966 that the Bruins had not gone to the post-season play-offs.

Despite this unfortunate incident, Head Coach Larry Farmer's 1981-1982 team overstepped their anticipated 20-win season with a 21-6 overall record and finished in second place in the Pac-10 conference. As a result, the Bruins set a new record despite probation — having sixteen straight years with at least twenty wins each year.

"By the second half to the season it seemed like the team had everything together — winning twelve straight games in a row."

In the beginning of the season, the mighty Bruins wavered, losing two out of their first three games and three more soon thereafter. Stuart Gray, 7-0 freshman center, attributed the slow start to the new adjustments. Says Gray, "We had a new coach and we were still learning about him and his program. We were still learning how he wanted things run and what each person could do." By the second half of the season it seemed like the team had everything together — winning twelve straight games in a row. The Bruins then lost to Oregon State, breaking their amazing winning streak, but finished up by beating their last three opponents.

Since Larry Brown (who?) left last year to coach a pro team back east, UCLA has acquired a new head basketball coach in Larry Farmer. Farmer, however, is no stranger to the University. He has been a member of the UCLA varsity staff since 1975, and last year was assistant coach under Brown. In addition, Farmer is an ex-Bruin basketball star, having played for three years (1971-1973) under the Wizard himself — John Wooden. A strong believer in the Wooden system, Farmer states that his "basketball philosophy is comprised of three elements. The first is team play, where players sacrifice some of their personal goals for the betterment of the team. We want our players to think 'we' and 'us' instead of 'I' and 'me'. The second is that the team will be in great physical condition and the third is that the team will be fundamentally sound."

On the court, this season's starting five consisted of: Mike Sanders, Kenny Fields, Stuart Gray, Ralph Jackson and Rod Foster. At forward, leading the club in both points and rebounds, is 6-6 senior Mike "Slew" Sanders, whom Farmer calls "the best small forward in the nation." Sanders ranks among the top ten of UCLA's career leaders in both field goal and free-throw percentages.

Standing at 7-0, is freshman center Stuart Gray. Throughout the season, Gray continued to improve, making the type of progress the Bruin coaches had been looking for in a center. Occupying the backcourt, along with backcourt, along with playmaker Ralph Jackson, was pre-season All-American "Rocket" Rod Foster. Foster got off to a poor start, but made more than his share of points as the season wore on. Against Oregon, the junior guard entered the thirty-five point club and ended up with a seasonal percentage of .956 — a new NCAA free-throw record.

Coming off the bench were juniors Michael Holton (at guard) and Darren Daye (at forward). Holton and Daye, both fine shooters and exceptional ball handlers, spurred the team on in the clinch.

On reserve, adding more fuel to the Bruin Powerhouse, were seniors Tony Anderson (f), Dean Sears (f), Mark Eaton (c) and junior Randy Arillaga (g). Besides Gray, the incoming freshmen this year were: Gary Maloncon (f), Niguel Miguel (g), and Brad Wright (c) — all who proved to be promising assets to the team. Cliff Pruitt, a third year forward, transferred schools during mid-season.

For the 1981-1982 Bruins the season ended all too soon. It was a tough year for the team and a new experience working under Coach Farmer. It was a happy and also sad year for everyone. Perhaps Stuart Gray summed it up best. When asked if being on probation affected his or the team's performance as a whole, Gray replied, "It's hard to say. You don't know how you're feeling deep down inside, but each time we went for the court we wanted to win. What it comes down to is pride. You have to have pride in yourself. That's something (probation) we had no control over. We just did the best we could." And the Bruins certainly did.

Women's Basketball

The Bruins had the best shooting team in school history last year and started the season with a school record of 13 straight wins. This year's team is younger and may not start as fast but ... watch out!

The 1981-82 UCLA Women's Basketball Team, the youngest in school history, got off to a slow start, but the Bruins came on strong at the end of the season. Coach Billie Moore's team played the toughest schedule in the nation and traveled all over the country, including road games in New Jersey, Indiana, Louisiana, Mississippi, Kentucky, Illinois and Missouri.

UCLA started but one senior and had only two seniors on the roster. Three freshmen saw regular playing time and virtually the whole team will be back for 1982-83. "We knew before the season that we would have a very young team, but I would rather have a young and talented team than an older experienced team that didn't possess the outstanding players that we have in our program," said Moore. At the top of that list of "outstanding" players was 6-1 sophomore center Necie Thompson. After being a Freshman All-American last year, Thompson continued to excel during her second year and led the team in scoring and rebounding.

Senior guard Susie Swenson, who never started regularly before this season, was the second leading scorer and assist person on the team and provided continual leadership with her spirit and hustle. She had several games of more than 20 points and was the team's most consistent outside shooter.

Sophomore point guard Mary Hegarty was slowed in the early season by a series of leg injuries, but came on strong in the second half of the season to show the form that allowed her to break Ann Meyer's single season assist record as a freshman, when she also led the conference.

"I was disappointed that we did not play better in the early season, but I was very pleased with the way we came on at the start of the conference season."

Forward Jackie Joyner, a Freshman All-American in both basketball and track & field, was again UCLA's top defensive player and a good offensive player in the important games.

Freshman Charlotte Jones from Compton, started virtually every game at forward and was the team's third leading scorer and second leading rebounder. She had many games in double figures in both scoring and rebounding.

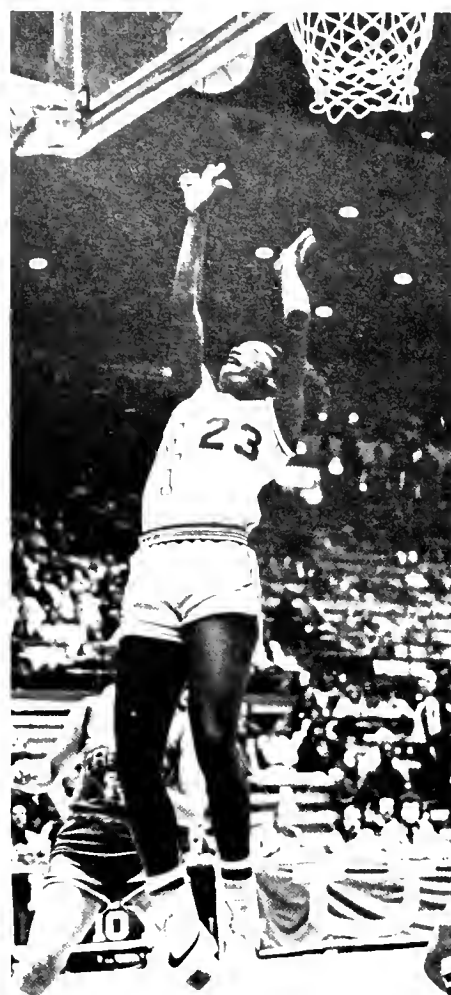

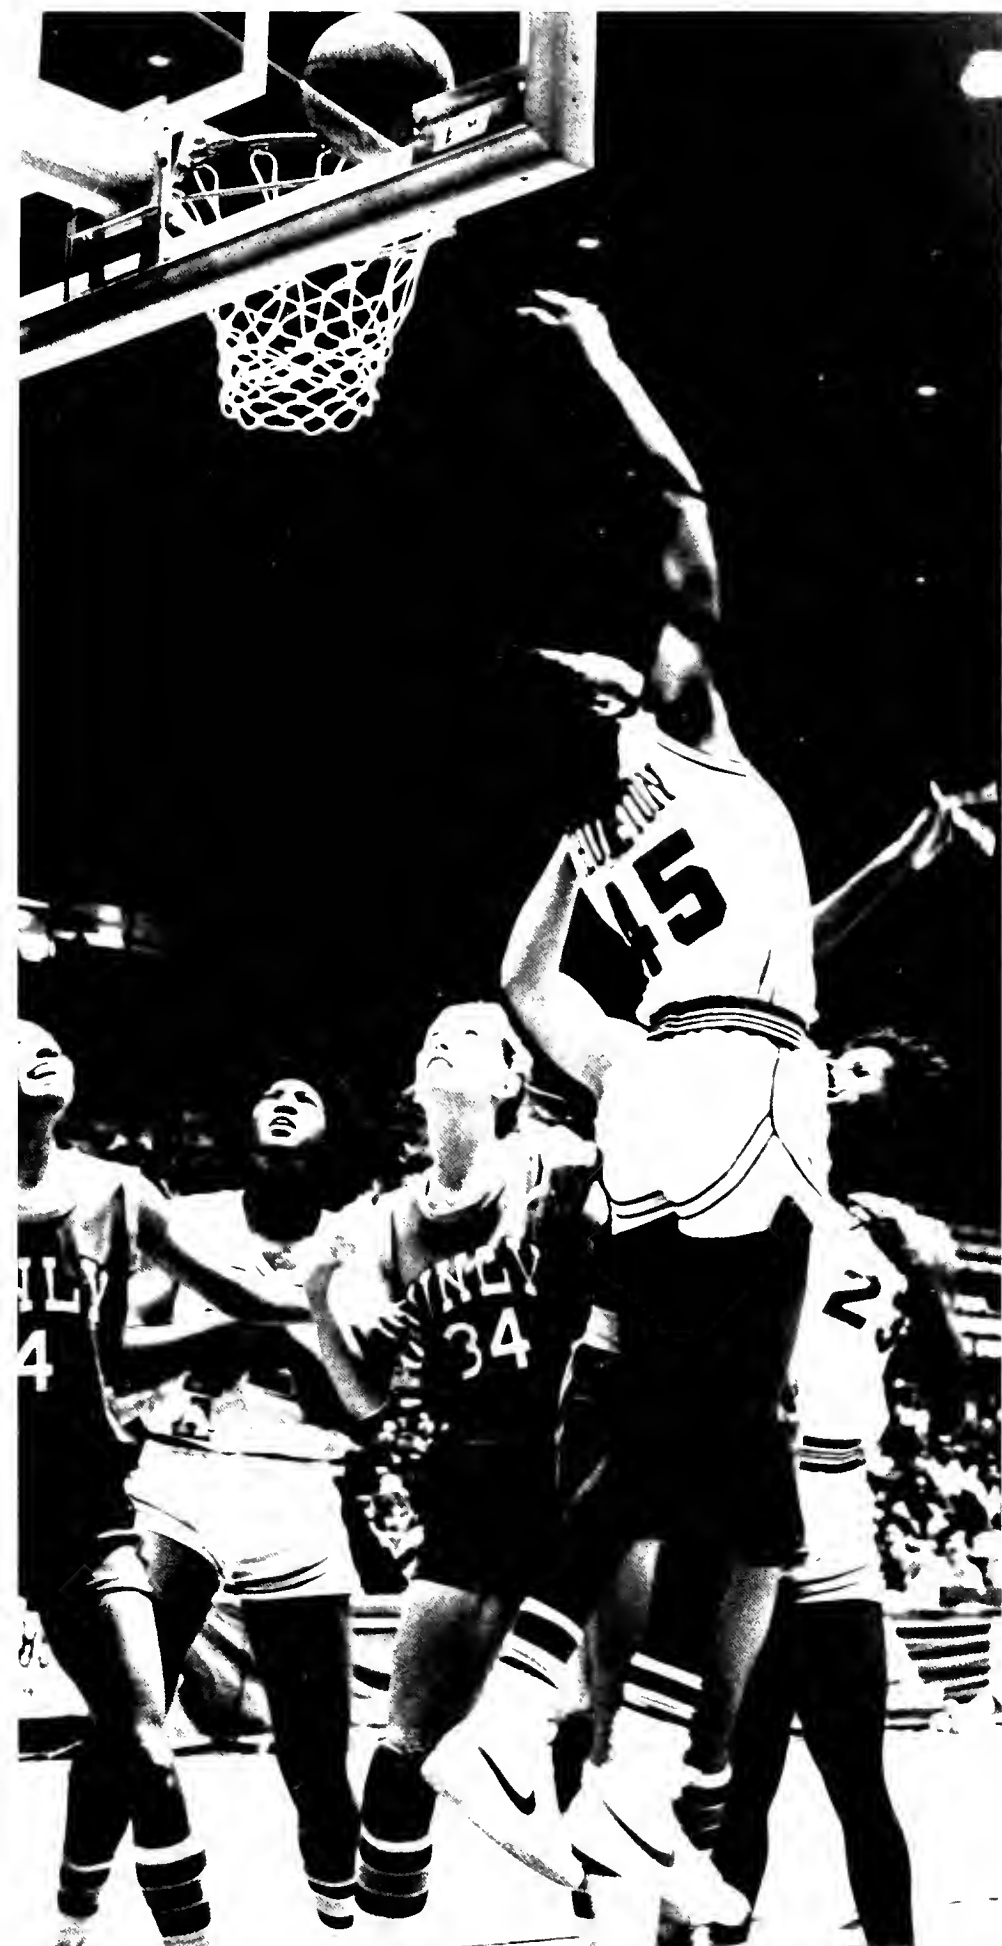

Coach Moore also had an outstanding group of substitutes for 1981-82. Freshman Merja Connolly of Culver City, who was outstanding in volleyball, joined the team late in basketball and did well. Another freshman, point guard Angel Hardy, was slowed by a foot injury the first part of the season, but she showed she is going to be an outstanding player.

Sophomore forward Deborah Thurston continued to improve offensively and was a top defensive player. Junior guard Vera James returned to contribute to the success of the team after missing almost two seasons with a knee injury.

favorite with her quickness, but she missed some games with a leg injury at mid-season. Center Melanie Horn was also a crowd favorite and the 6-5 senior had several fine games off of the bench for the Bruins. Sophomore guard Kendee Eulert started off the season very well, but hurt her back after the fifth game and never played again the rest of the season. Two-year basketball player Jeanne Beauprey decided to sit out the basketball season after completing an outstanding volleyball season.

"I was disappointed that we did not play better in the early season, but I was very pleased with the way we came on at the start of the conference season," said Moore. "Necie Thompson and Susie Swenson were our two key players during the season and when they played well, the team usually did well. We needed both of them to be on at the same time because of their importance to our team offensively and defensively." □

Men's Volleyball

The 12 returning lettermen have more than just the ability to perform, they have what it takes... extensive experience...

The UCLA men's volleyball team is the number one ranked team for 1982 in the pre-season poll. This title has been earned by the twelve returning lettermen on the team and by every one of last year's freshmen who either lettered or had extensive experience from junior varsity competition.

With all of this experience behind the Bruins, it is no wonder Coach Al Scates feels, "this year's team has the potential to be stronger than last year's NCAA Championship team. If we can stay healthy and continued to progress at our present rate of development, we could defend our title successfully."

UCLA definitely has the power to win the NCAA title in 1982, and for that ability, the coaching staff must be commended. Assistant coaches Denny Cline, Peter Ehrman, Mike Timmons as well as trainer Mike Wells are definite assets to the team. However, to be commended most of all, is the "Wizard of Westwood," Coach Al Scates. Scates is the dean of UCLA coaches and is entering his 20th year as Head Volleyball coach.

In 1970, volleyball became an NCAA sport. Over that 11 year period, Coach Scates has guided the UCLA men's volleyball team into 8 NCAA titles. Scates has compiled an amazing 308-44 (.875) won-lost record and an outstanding 26-3 (.896) record in NCAA tournament.

The talent on this year's team is incredible. "We probably have the top setter in the country in Karch Kiraly, and the top power hitter in Dave Saunders," commented Coach Scates.

Karch Kiraly is considered the best collegiate volleyball player in the United States. He is three-time All-American and is a two-time NCAA All-Tournament player. Karch leads the Bruins in kills (.377), has the leading killing average (.575) as well as being the top in killing efficiency (.466).

Dave Saunders has been considered one of the hardest hitters in collegiate volleyball, as well as one of the Bruins leading hitters last year.

Luyties vs. USC, 1/27/82

Kiraly vs. USC, 1/27/82

Both senior lettermen Kiraly and Saunders, are strong candidates for the 1984 U.S. Olympic Team.

Another dominant force on the team is setter Ricci Luyties. Ricci was one of the country's foremost freshmen setters last season.

"This years team has the potential to be stronger than last year's NCAA Championship Team," said Al Scates

---

Coach Scates remarked that, "last year, our depth was a critical factor in our success, and I think we have an even deeper team this year." With excellent depth at every position and considering the caliber and experience making up UCLA's 1982 men's volleyball team, the Bruins should not have any trouble in claiming their 9th NCAA title. □ returning players have started at least one match for UCLA and the four seniors have come close to winning titles during previous years.

UCLA returned five starters from last year's 38-14 team. They were two-time All-American power hitter, senior Linda Robertson; senior middle blocker and Jr. National All-American Kathy Herse; junior setter and Jr. National All American and tournament MVP, Jeanne Beauprey; senior setter and USVBA H.M. All American Wendy Baldwin; and junior middle blocker and All-Conference selection Cammy Chalmers.

Other experienced returnees were senior power hitter Mandy Wickman; sophomore power hitter and two-time Jr. National All-American Patty Orozco and sophomore setter Suzie Crone.

The Bruin's four talented freshmen were Merja Connolly from Culver City, Coleen Koop from Bakersfield, Tracy Saying from Manhattan Beach, and Dawn Kenny from Redondo Beach. UCLA's transfer players were Stacy Brittain, who was a starter for the University of Washington last year, and Kim Larson who was a starter for the University of Minnesota last season.

Coach Banachowski, who has been coaching this team for the last fifteen years and has had more top four finishes than any other coach in collegiate history, felt the past year's team was "the strongest team I've had in recent years!" □ -JLM

At 17 he was a member of the world team, at 18 years in 1980, he was a member of the USA Olympic team, and last year was a member of the USA World Games team that traveled to Moscow. Peter is

Junior and perhaps the top rings specialist in the nation; Chris Caso, a freshman from Fullerton, with outstanding potential; and Mark Caso, a junior and older brother of Chris, whose remarkable comeback after a serious neck injury two years ago has not hampered his career. He captured third all-around in the PAC 10 last year, and is ready for another outstanding year.

Number three and four gymnasts Anne Kitabayashi, with a wrist injury, and Karen Cogan with a knee injury, were also out of competition for a time. Besides the challenge of recovering from injuries, these women also put much emotional strain on themselves to make up for lost time and individual points. "The only thing I can tell them is to relax and do the best they can," says coach Jerry Tomlinson, "the pressure they have put on themselves is great, and all I can try to do is not add too much of my own."

This year's team, aside from its many injuries, still looks good for the rest of the season. If they place high in their last four

Although little is known at UCLA (one receptionist for Men's Athletics thought the only UCLA Badminton team was part of the Intramural Sports program; they are part of Women's Athletics for reasons explained later), the Bruins are well-known in the seven team league in which they operate.

Contributing heavily to the Bruin effort were Tony Alston and Gary Shelstad, both former U.S. National Junior Champions, and both members of the U.S. National Team. The Bruin attack was also armed with Quah Poh and Kurt Stephan, former Malaysian Junior Champion and one-half of the Pan-American Junior Mixed Doubles Champions, respectively.

Since badminton is a co-ed sport, there are no men's and women's teams but male and female badminton players. So far only the male players have been discussed, but the female players are no less talented. Barbara Bitterman leads the group, winning the AIAW singles championship last year. ## Waterpolo

"This year's season was an overall success. We overcame several injuries and came back strong. This team characterized itself with competitiveness, determination, and pride."

Despite a relatively slow beginning, this year's Bruin polo men exemplified their talent by placing 6th in this year's NCAA Championship Tournament at Belmont Pool in Long Beach. The Bruins, who were ranked third in the nation at the beginning of the season, began with great optimism. However, much like last year, early season injuries dampened the team's hopes. Characteristic of Bruin teams, however, the polo men overcame these early difficulties to put together an amazing second half of their season. In this awesome half, the team returned to Westwood from the prestigious Pepperdine Tournament bearing a first place trophy. This rebound in the second part, won the Bruins an invitation to the NCAA Finals, an honor enjoyed by the top 8 teams in the nation.

The Bruins will miss the leadership and play of the team's high point man, senior Vince Jonne. However, returning to the line-up next year is Vince's co-captain Brian "Boogie" Black. Also returning is Robin Leamy, whose 19.3 second 50 meter time makes him the fastest human in the waters of

Men's Crew

Crew is the epitome of team sports. For the unit to work successfully, each component in the rowing machine must operate efficiently and smoothly with each other. In tune, in time, as a team.

There are no individual statistics, no national recognition, no individual acclaim. However, there is the camaraderie, the challenge of pushing your limit to its utmost and being a part of the truest team sport: that is crew.

In crew, speed comes with efficiency, and efficiency only comes when the entire eight man team works as one. There is no one save yourself who can tell if that extra effort is not there; Coach Bob Newman has difficulty in picking the varsity eight. But it is this test of yourself that builds what Newman calls "guts, initiative, desire, and healthy positive attitudes."

eight, seniors Dave Arnold, John Daglas, Dave Nelson, and Russell Rowell, are all returnees from last year's second-place Pac-10 team. The Bruins' major competition this year as in years past were Cal and Washington, but UCLA also saw action against local teams and the nation's best at the Crew Classic, April 3, where they came in fourth place.

Crew members have nine land and water workouts a week and Newman estimates they work slightly under 30 hours a week. As difficult as that may sound, it has been going on for some time. Crew was the first collegiate sport. At UCLA crew has been a club sport since 1933, but as a fulltime program only since 1963. □

—RRG

Women's Crew

Although this year's crew is rather small, it is a team of quality not quantity.

If by chance you were out jogging in the wee morning hours in the Marina Del Rey area, you'd probably see a group of young women rowing away. The group is UCLA's women's crew and they rise with the sun to get in their before-school practice at Balona Creek.

Crew training is quite strenuous and begins in October and runs through Spring quarter. The varsity team works out twice daily, six days a week. The morning hours are devoted to crew speed and technique. Crew is definitely a sport requiring a lot of team effort.

The biggest and strongest women sit in the center of the boat which gives balance and power. The center position is given to the person with a good sense of timing and who rows the strongest. There is no set seating arrangement as Coach Larry Daughterty feels that it is best to move a crew member to the position that they could best fill, and this varies.

Wendy Larson, a senior and fourth year crew member "has consistent and good technique, better than anyone I've ever seen on the team," remarked Coach Daughterty. The average height of the team is 5'9½", which (compared to past years) is small. Height is a definite advantage in crew; in fact, it is better to have tall weak members than strong, shorter members. That is not to say strength is not important, strength is another definite advantage.

"Rowing involves about 50% strength and endurance and 50% rowing technique. . ."

This year's afternoon training is geared towards building endurance, strength and speed. In rowing, the power of the initial stroke is supported by the legs. For that reason, the training emphasizes exercises to develop leg muscles, strengthen the arms and running to build cardiovascular endurance.

"Rowing involves about 50% strength and endurance and 50% rowing technique. This year the emphasis is on working on the endurance portion of our training," said Coach Daughterty.

UCLA Crew's main competition is within the Pac-10, mainly the University of Washington Huskies and Cal-Berkeley's Bears. This year the Nationals were hosted by the East coast and as the hosting team, they got to decide the meter distance to race. The duel racing distance was set for 1500 meters and with UCLA's endurance training, distance proposed no difficulties.

Ideally a team is made up of 16 women, the top eight being chosen to race. However UCLA's team had eleven members; ten varsity rowers and one coxswain. This size provided only two "spare" members. Coach Daughterty feels the on-campus recruiting could be better, however this year's crew worked hard and well together and was a fine example of "quality not quantity." □

Barrett in the breaststroke events are junior Ron Zhiss and freshman Dave Chernek, winner of the Junior National Championship which was against the Soviet Union.

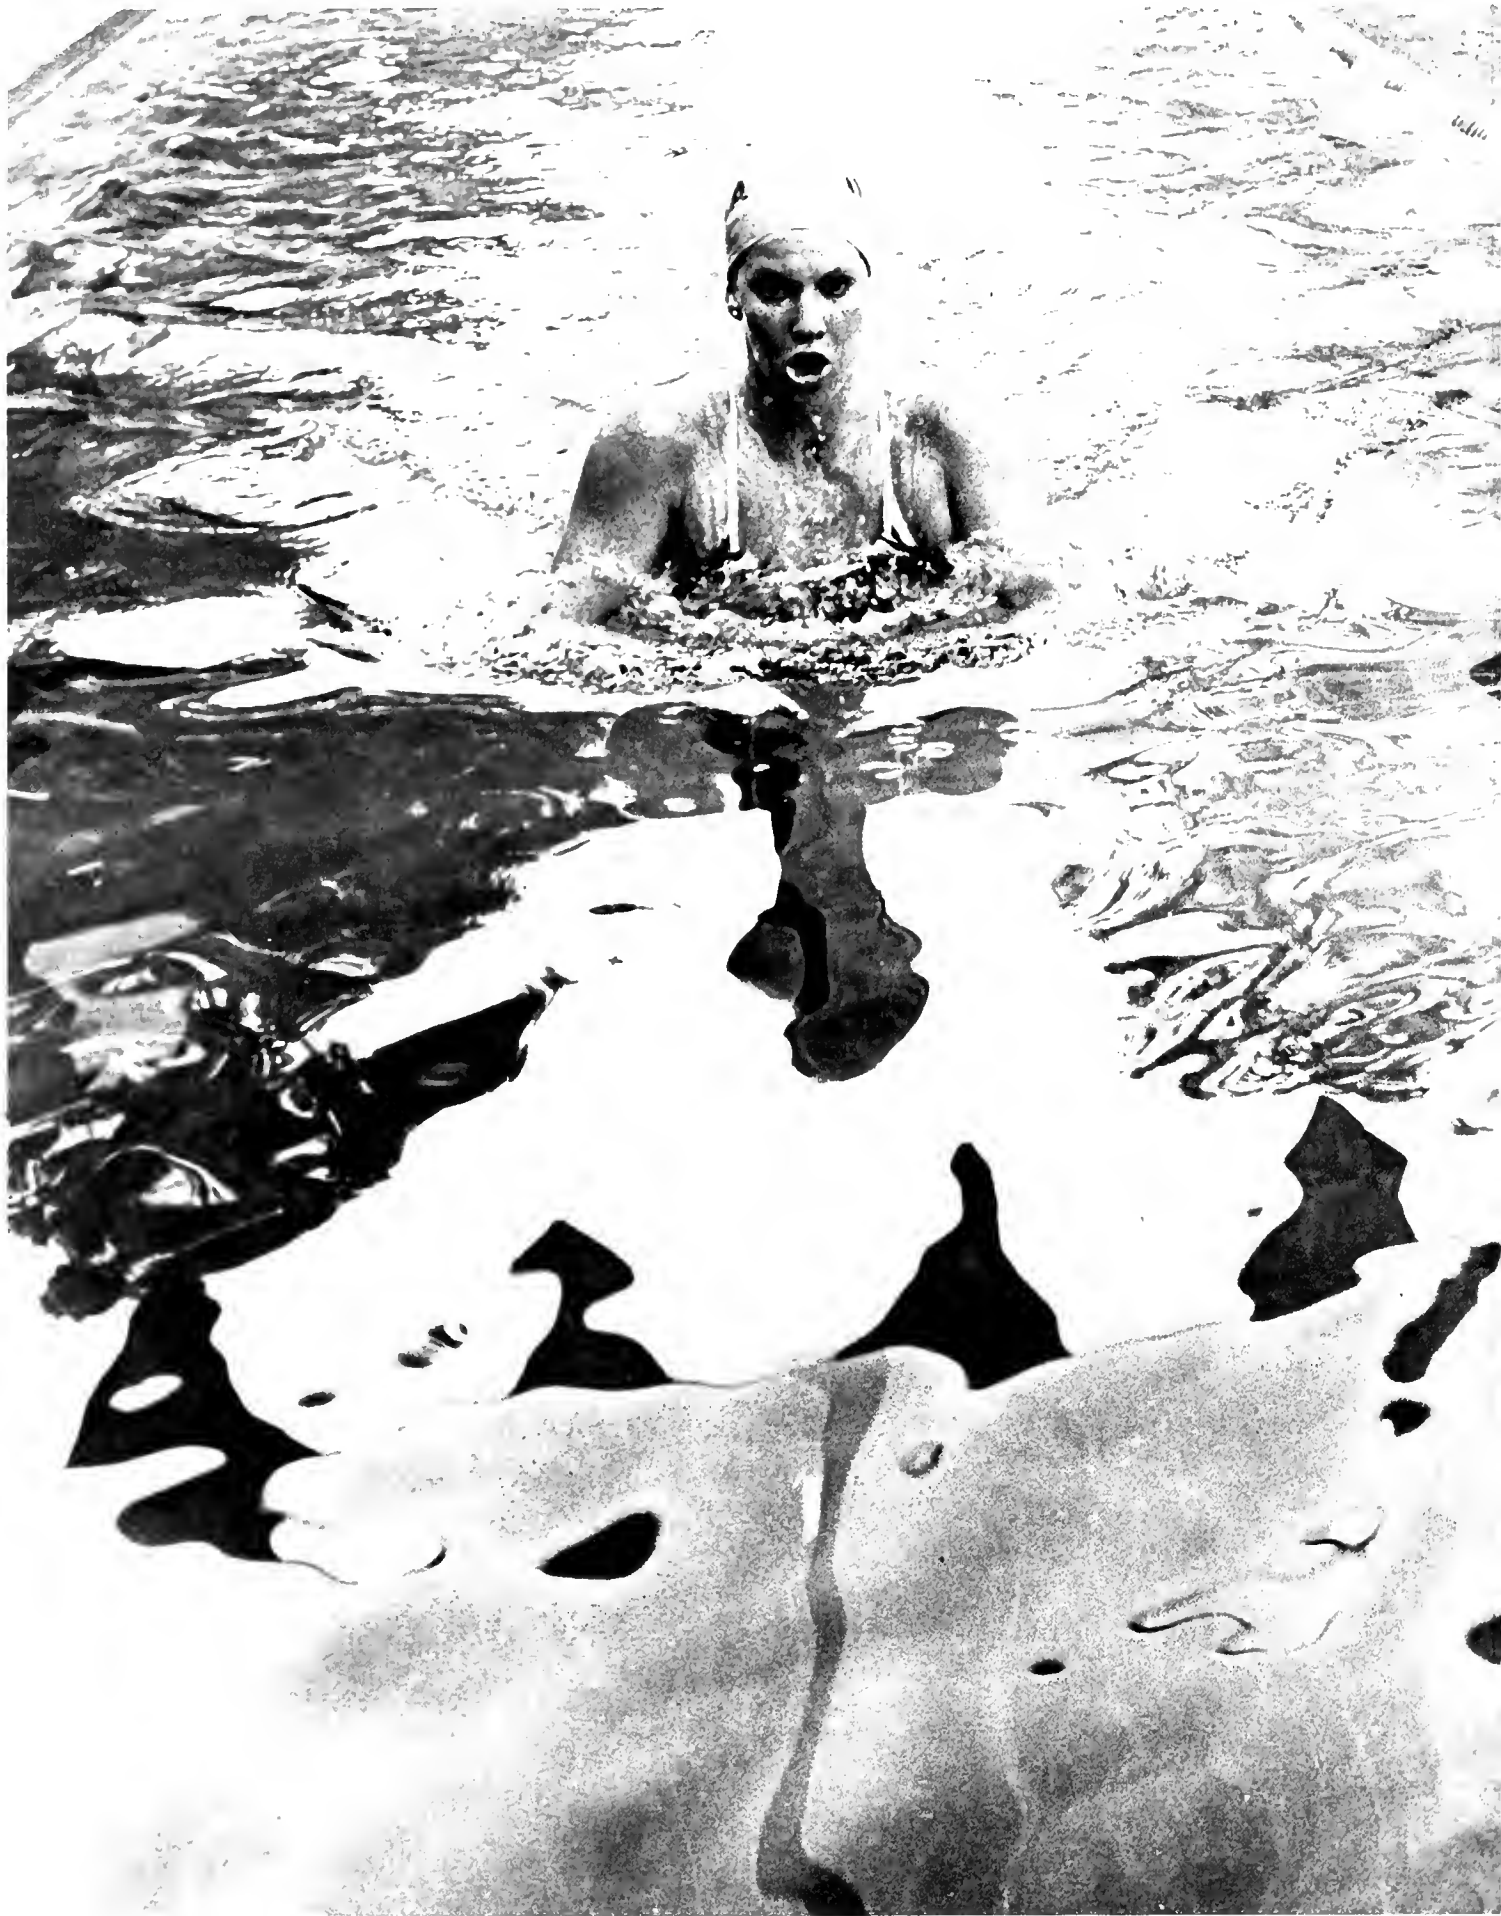

Long distance swimmers add greatly to the strength of this year's team. Leading the group is Rafael Escalles, last year's NCAA 1650 freestyle champion. In the 500, Bruce Hayes and Bruce Dorman are leading the pack. Also strong in long distance are junior Craig Nadel and sophomore Walt Beddeo.

Coach Ballatore feels that the freshmen are one of the factors in the success of the team. The ten youngsters should all be strong competitors for the Bruins. With all this talent, the Bruins have the power to top last year's impressive second place finish in the NCAA! □

Women's Swimming

UCLA Bruins Women's Swimming and Diving team should be improved for the 1982 season.

First-year UCLA women's swimming interim Head Coach Cindy Schilling expected considerable improvement in her team over 1981 when they combined with the diving team to place eleventh in the National finals. Her major reason for optimism is the return of most of the top athletes from last year, plus the addition of several top recruits that should contribute immediately.

"I definitely think we will be in the top ten nationally this year and we should have several All-Americans on the team," says Coach Schilling.

Heading the UCLA swimming returnees is All-American butterflyer and I.M. standout Jody Alexander. Also returning are All-Americans Nancy (butterfly) and Linda (backstroke) Placak, team captain Cyndi McCullum (long free), Ellen Ferguson (long free), Kathy Dimaggio (free), and Tanya Nielen (free, back).

UCLA had a tremendous recruiting year landing Mission Viejo back and I.M. specialist Loren Rozowsky of South Africa, nationally ranked short freestyle specialist Julie Williams from El Toro, standout breaststroker Cassie Cockran of Scottsdale, Arizona, and Mission Viejo I.M. and freestyler Tawny Hood. Brigham Young, Schilling believes USC and Arizona State are the teams to beat in the Western Collegiate Athletic Association (WCCA) conference, with Arizona also having a fine team. Nationally, Stanford is a clear favorite, with NCAA host Florida also having a very strong team.

University transfer Corinna Seibit should help in the backstroke events.

"We expect our returning people to be improved and we think we have a fine group of newcomers. Also, this is the best diving team we have ever had, which should help us in dual meets and in scoring at nationals." □

Diving

Like a winged acrobat, the diver plummets through the air towards the still water below. The poise, grace, strength and intense concentration essential for competitive diving can hardly be matched by any other sport.

Included as a part of the UCLA swim team are the men and women divers. The divers compete with the swimmers in dual and Pac-10 meets during the season, and this year the men's and women's team scored more than their share of points for the swim team. This year the women's team won all their meets and finished in first place in the Pac-10 conference tournament. And the men's team lost only one meet and split one and are presently on the road to a hopeful Pac 10 title.

Both teams are also looking forward to the NCAA Championship meets. Of the men's team, two out of five have qualified for the NCAA's and all but one out of eight have qualified from the women's team.

With such an impressive season for both teams, it's hard to believe that prior to three years ago there was virtually no diving program at UCLA.

"Now with its program built up, UCLA is in position to recruit the top divers in the country to add to their talented line-up."

---

Since the acquisition of the men's Head Diving Coach, Dennis Taylor, and women's Head Coach, Jerrie Weiss, the diving team has risen from the ranks of the unknown to become NCAA Championship material. Now with its program built up, UCLA is in the position to recruit the top divers in the country to add to their talented line-up. On the men's team this year there were three outstanding divers: Dan O'Keefe, Jon Reel, and Bill Ryan. Julie De Haven, Tina Lassiter, Linda Koval and Jenny McMahon were the exceptional divers on the women's team.

The Bruin divers have come a long way in a very short time. All the long hours of practicing everyday come rain or shine, not to mention rigorous weight training program, have certainly paid off for both the men's and women's team. Now both the divers and swimmers compete as a top rank unit. □

Men's Tennis

The Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association has vaulted the Bruins to the No. 1 position among the country's best teams.

As Head Coach Glenn Bassett entered his fifteenth year at the helm of his alma mater, he guided a squad with all the ingredients for his sixth NCAA Team Tennis Championship. The 1982 edition of UCLA tennis had it all: experience, depth, and talent.

The 1981-82 group included the nation's No. 1 and 2 ranked singles players and eleven lettermen from a team that won its 23rd conference title and placed second in the 1981 NCAA Team Championships.

The country's two top players, Robbie Venter and Marcel Freeman, were returned from the previous year. Venter, a left-hander from Johannesburg, South Africa, recorded an outstanding 20-4 singles mark as a junior and won the NIKE All-America Tournament in 1981. Freeman, whose 55 career singles victories rank him third among all-time Bruins, sported a 17-7 mark in singles competition and went undefeated in doubles. A three-time All American, he and Venter gave the Bruins the most formidable one-two punch in collegiate tennis.

Senior Blaine Willenborg ranked tenth in the pre-season polls. An All American as a junior and sophomore, Willenborg's 59-16 career singles mark ranked him second in UCLA annals. He posted a 19-5 singles mark in 1981 after consecutive 20-win seasons in his first two years. Fourth and fifth was junior Danny Saltz and sophomore John Davis, respectively. Saltz, who is ranked twentieth among the nation's elite, turned in a 16-3 singles mark a year ago after winning eight of nine singles matches as a freshman. Davis, who is the fifth UCLA player ranked among the country's top singles players, recorded a 16-8 singles mark and a 16-4 doubles record as a freshman. He also reached the semi-finals of the Pac-10 singles and Michelob All-America tournaments.

Bruce Brescia, a three year letterman, figured to be the number 6 man. An all-time UCLA leader in career singles victories with 60, including a record 23 straight wins in 1980, Brescia's experience and leadership was a key factor in the Bruin's season.

To complement his talent, Bassett added a fine crop of recruits to an already impressive list of returning squad members. Senior Jacques Maset, a doubles specialist with partner Freeman, returned to give UCLA great tournament experience in the doubles matches, while sophomores Randy Part, Craig Venter and juniors Todd Katz and Bobby Berger gave UCLA excellent depth.

Top newcomers included freshmen Mark Basham, the 1981 U.S. National Amateur Singles Champion, Jeff Klaparda, the 1980-81 Los Angeles City prep champion from Fairfax High School, and David Livingston, who defeated Glenn Machibata, Pepperdine's top ranked player last November. □

Women's Tennis

"Our four top players are all capable of playing the No. 1 position. The top positions are really competitive. A lot of times, it's just going to depend on who's playing well at a particular time."

The outlook for the UCLA women's tennis team in 1982 is . . . excellent. Last year, UCLA Head Women's tennis coach Gayle Godwin, led the Bruins to their first national championships.

Although the team is young and has lost some of last year's players, the team remains strong. "Last year we were a young team that got better as the season progressed. This year, we have primarily the same young team, but we have a year of experience behind us and we've added some people that will make us even stronger," stated Godwin.

Returning this year, and adding the main forte to the team, are four All-American players. Sophomore Kathrin Keil is one of the country's top collegiate players and the Bruins' 1981 MVP. Kathrin has the edge for the No. 1 position because she played so well last year. However team captain, Kathy O'Brien, a senior, has been one of the top and most consistent performers ever in the Bruin program and will definitely be a strong contender for the No. 1 slot. Also in hunt of the top singles position, is sophomore Shelly Solomon. She is a member of the U.S. Junior Federation Cup Team and last year earned the coach's All-American Honors. The Bruins have Brigham Young All-American transfer Heather Ludloff, also a top contender.

"Our four top players are all capable of playing the No. 1 position. The top positions are really competitive. A lot of times, it's just going to depend on who's playing well at a particular time," commented Coach Godwin.

---

"We are a lot stronger at doubles than last year because we try so many combinations."

---

With the top singles positions well covered, Godwin is expecting the most improvement in doubles. The Bruins' top doubles team last year was Kathy O'Brien and Helena Manset. Both All-Americans will be returning this year. Having won the AIAW Regional Title in 1981, their No. 1 standing appears stable. The addition of Heather Ludloff and freshman Lynn Lewis should give much more flexibility over last year's doubles teams. Godwin stated, "We are a lot stronger at doubles than last year because we can try so many combinations. When someone isn't on their game, we can try someone else at their spot." □ —LB

Soccer

With a relatively young team, head coach Sigi Schmid brought the Bruins to another successful season. Having an overall record of 12-5-3, this year's team saw new recruits, as well as many experienced players working well together.

The Bruins had a host of returning talent, in every area. Premier forwards included top scorers Peter Trifunovich and Gary Kretzschmar, with eight goals each. A strong midfield was led by Harry Tweedie, chosen as one of four West Coast players for the prestigious Senior Bowl, as well as senior Bill Bugbee. Also valuable in the midfield was junior Steve Hazzard, who earned the team's MVP award. Outstanding is the best way to describe sophomore goalie Tim Harris, who has already had seventeen out of thirty career shutout games. Harris was selected to the All Far West 1st Team. With his help, the Bruins' strong defense set a record for the least goals allowed in a season.

Some of the Bruins' toughest competition came from northern rival San Jose State and the University of San Francisco. Although losing closely to these teams, they pulled off an impressive tie with a tough San Diego State team. One of the team's best games came while the team was traveling back east. The Bruins were able to beat Rhode Island, a strong team rated second in their division.

As coach Sigi Schmid put it, "We had a good season and we now have a strong nucleus for next year." □

Rugby

Consider the team that was the smallest physically that the coach can remember, half of which had never played the sport before. Picture this team in a sport where strength and experience mean winning. Consider too, that the team won the division title.

There's a myth that all rugby players have had at least three knee operations, and have broken every bone in their bodies twice. And that is exactly what it is, a myth. In the past fifteen years at UCLA, there has been an average of under one broken bone a year. Another myth about this season's rugby team was that it would not be very successful, while UCLA has traditionally fielded strong teams. And that too, proved to be myth, unless you call winning the division title and going to the NCAA regionals unsuccessful.

Consider also that this year's team did not benefit from having football players on the team as other strong teams in the nation have. Because of the winter training program of football, rugby has been unable to attract any football players to the squad since 1978. To demonstrate how important having football players on the team is, all one has to do is look at the impressive

"... over the last fifteen years UCLA probably has the best overall record of any collegiate team."

---

record UCLA rugby has had in years past. Coach Dennis Storer estimates that over the last fifteen years UCLA probably has the best overall record of any collegiate team. In that period, the squad rolled to a 316-34-3 record and won the national title twice.

Storer also says that the team was the smallest physically he has had in his fifteen years here as coach. Although usually many of the students who make the squad know little or nothing about the sport, half of this year's team had never played rugby in their lives. Considering all these obstacles, having a good year and winning the division is in Storer's words, a "minor triumph." Storer attributes the team's success to "enthusiasm, fitness, quickness, hustle and intensity."

The Bruins were led this year by Tom Garcia, Andrew Warne and Mark Messerschmidt, a third year letterman. John Henderson and Dave McIntyre, both first year players also contributed to the team's efforts. □

Riflery/Fencing

Although riflery is not among the "big" sports at UCLA, popularity has nothing to do with the intensity of the sport. Shooters must aim for a target 1 to 1½ inches in diameter from a distance of 50 feet. Like riflery, fencing also requires hitting the target, the opponent. Depending upon the weapon used, foil or sabre, the target can be the legs, torso, or the whole body.

Riflery at UCLA isn't as popular as some of the major sports like basketball and football. Let's face it, about the same amount of people that know that there once was a shooting range under the men's gym, know about UCLA riflery. With only four members on this year's team, part-time coach John Malone feels fortunate if he can get all the members assembled at a tournament. However, shooting as a team is not as important as one might think.

Riflery is a very individual sport and the shooters can compete individually in local tournaments to get the scores needed to be invited to compete in the NCAA national tournament, which has only come into being two years ago. Key shooters on this year's team were Drew Suetter, a senior who has been on the team for four years, and Eric Wong, a sophomore.

Riflery is a year-long "continuous" program with the culmination of the season in March with the NCAA's. However another important tournament for the team was the Silver State Invitational held in Reno. Al-

"The shooter . . . competes individually in local tournaments to get the scores needed to be invited to compete in the NCAA national tournament . . ."

---

though most of the major riflery powers are located in the East, UCLA competes with eight or so teams in the West.

As an independent team, the UCLA fencing squad did not compete in many collegiate meets this season, however they met with moderate success in AFLA league competition, which provides tougher competition than collegiate meets. When the fencing team did compete in college tournaments, they did fairly well, placing third in the All-Cal Tournament and fourth in the NCAA Western Regionals.

Led by Greg Zimmerman (who placed sixth in the All-Cal Tournament) and Ophelia Fung, the Bruins had a fair year, but nothing to compare with the Bruin powerhouse team of the past. Out of 368 dual meets, the teams of yesteryear lost only 18, and ran up a string of 174 consecutive victories. Not to mention 19 conference championships.

However, Coach Mel North, who was coach during the glory years and has returned after a six year absence, is not optimistic about repeating those successes immediately. Since the sport is limited by budget and the squad being wholly composed of walk-ons, he believes that in a couple of seasons with proper budgeting, fencing might just be the power it once was. □

Cross Country

The Sunset Blvd. Cross Country racing course is one of the most challenging in the NCAA, with a grueling hill parallel to the north side of Circle Drive, just a mile into the course. Collegiate Cross Country racing teaches endurance, self-discipline and, most importantly, team work — the act of working for the good of the whole.

Men's Cross Country

Climbing back up to the top for the second year in a row, UCLA's Men's Cross Country came in first place again in the Pac 10 conference, a league that has been dominated for decades by the northern schools of Oregon and Washington States. Having started the season as an "unfavored" team, and not having been able to shake that label by mid-season with their poor showing, the Bruins ultimately came from behind, not only placing first in the Pac 10, but fifth in NCAA. The team also won four out of five invitationals that they entered this year, including the UCLA invitational, Stanford, Brigham Young in Utah, and the Southern Pac 10 invitational.

"We're quite excited about the fifth place at NCAA," relates Coach Bob Larsen, "especially because we compete with teams that play foreign athletes, while our team is composed almost fully of athletes drawn from Southern California." And with a team that will lose only one man to graduation, the team looks excellent for next year as well.

Dave Daniels, the team captain and the only senior, placed third All-American (having placed second last year), while Jon Butler, an incoming freshman, placed second. Steve McCormack, a recruit from Grossmont Jr. College in San Diego, also did exceptionally well this year. Yet for these men, the year has just begun, for all the members of the team compete as well on the regular track team.

Women's Cross Country

With only two returning runners on this year's team of ten women, this young Cross Country team did surprisingly well in this year's season—placing third in the Pac 10, sixth in the regionals, and ranked tenth in the nation.

"The reorganization of the NCAA regions is what hurt us," explained Scott Chisam, Women's Cross Country coach for the past six years. "There were six of the top ten teams in the nation competing within the Western Region, and only four were allowed to go to the nationals."

This year, according to the coach's point of view, was focused on preparing for the upcoming track and field season. Next year however, there will be a much more serious attitude towards running, as all of the top runners of the team plan to return. This will result in a much stronger and experienced team for next year.

This year's two top runners, Michelle Bush and Linda Goen, both placed in All Conference, and Linda did well in the NCAA nationals in Wichita, Kansas. Rounding out the top five runners were Terrie Brown, Shelly Hazlett and Anabelle Villanueva. □

Track and Field

Although all the public glory and adulation are missing, in the sport of track and field the real rewards are personal and self-gratifying. Every person is an individual functioning as a part of a whole unit. Each person must perform his best in order for the entire team to succeed. Support requires team participation. Winning is a team effort.

Men's Track and Field

So far this season, the UCLA men's track and field team has gone undefeated: a record that has not been broken in three years. Last year, the Bruins finished fifth place in the NCAA meets, which marked the fourteenth year in seventeen that they have placed among the nation's top five. In the Pac-10, the club finished in third and scored a perfect overall dual meet mark of 8-0.

The man behind all this success is Bruin head coach, Jim Bush. As head coach, Bush has been with UCLA for eighteen years and claims the best dual meet record in the conference (130-18) and six Pac-10 titles to go along with his four NCAA crowns. Bush has high hopes for this year's team, "We probably have the best all around dual team in the nation. I don't think anybody has an overall team for dual meets as we have. We have every event covered."

Although the team is mostly inexperienced, the young newcomers have proven their excellence along with the veteran seniors. The team, as a whole, is very strong in all distances, not to mention events in weight, throwing and jumping.

Last year, the Bruins won the conference and placed second (losing to Tennessee) in the national championship meet.

Of the sixty-seven team members, some of the top performers were: Eric Brown (sprinter), Delvon Davis (high jump),

Dokie Williams (long/triple jump), Chip Benson (long/triple jump), Marcus Allen (high hurdler), Tony Banks (400 meters), John Brenner (shot put/discus), Anthony Curan (pole vault), Dave Daniels (distance),

---

Women's Track and Field

At this point in the season, the women's track and field team has competed in three non-scoring meets, and had they been scored, UCLA would have easily swept them all. Unlike the men's team, the women's doesn't compete in a set conference schedule. Because of the team's high reputation, UCLA is forced to agree to a non-scoring meet so as to attract other schools for competition. To qualify for the WCAA conference championship meet, individual athletes need only a qualifying time as opposed to a qualifying team record.

This will be the first year for women's track and field competition in the NCAA's, and they will be paired with the men's team in the championship dual meet. In the future, the women's team will probably be competing in more dual meets with the men's team which will provide better exposure for the team and also a better meet for the spectator.

Depth-wise, the team's strongest events are in the sprints and relays. The key strengths of the Bruins rest with All American Arlise Emerson (400 meter), and Cindy Cumbess (sprints/relays). The Bruins were also strong in the middle distances, boosted by All American juniors Linda Goen and Michele Bush.

On the sidelines, entering his fourth year as UCLA's head women's coach is middle and long distance specialist Scott Chisam. Chisam claims an amazing record of having only one dual meet loss during the span of his UCLA career. Handling the sprints, jumps and hurdles is second year assistant coach Bob Kersee, who is highly regarded as one of the best sprinting coaches in the U.S.

The 1982 women's track and field team is certainly off to an impressive start, and appears to be on its way to a successful season and a hopeful win at the NCAA Championship meet. □

UCLA Golf

This year's team is young, but with the strength and experience of 5 All-American players on the team, the Bruins look hopeful of keeping their national championship title.

Men's Golf

Bruin Golfers of 1981-82 held a demanding schedule with tournaments at several major courses nationwide. The team visited Oregon, Louisiana, San Francisco, Santa Cruz, San Diego, and naturally their home course, the Bel-Air Country Club.

Head Coach Ed Merrins welcomed back eight lettermen from a squad which recorded ten wins without a loss in dual meets, and won three tournaments in 1980-81.

Seniors Corey Pavin and Mickey Yokoi added to the excellence of the new group. Pavin, a scratch golfer from Oxnard, won the North-South Amateur Championship, was a member of the U.S. Walker Cup Team, and was a Maccabiah Games medalist. Yokoi is a former Los Angeles City Men's Amateur champion.

Top returnees included junior Steve Pate, who tied for third in The Fresno State Classic and placed fourth in the Cal State Northridge Matador Tournament and the tough Southwestern Intercollegiates, and junior Jay Delsing, who tied for first in the UCLA Bill Bryant Tournament.

Other returnees were sophomore Duffy Waldorf, who won the West Coast Amateur Tour Invitational, and is the first alternate for the U.S. Amateur Team. Also, senior Jeff Johnson and juniors Louis Bartoletti, John Perles, Oliver Rheinfurth and Stuart Smith added strength to this group of outstanding dedicated Bruins.

Women's Golf

UCLA Women's head coach Jackie Steinmann, who is moving into her fifth season at UCLA, returned four of the first five golfers from last year and recruited three exceptional freshmen. Another letter winner and two transfers also contributed to Steinmann's success with the Bruins.

---

"Head Coach Ed Merrins welcomed back eight lettermen from a squad which recorded ten wins without a loss in dual meets, and won three tournaments in 1980-81."

---

The top returnee was All-American candidate Mary Enright, the 1981 U.S. Public Links Champion. Seniors Marianne Huning and Carol Hogan and sophomore Tara Zielenski went to nationals in 1981 with Enright to help the Bruins to the fifth place national finish after placing eleventh in 1980 and ninth in 1979. Junior Cindy Scholefield, who traveled last year, also returned.

Steinmann's three outstanding freshmen recruits were Jennifer Steiner, California State Jr. Girls' Champion; Sophie Lapaire, French Jr. Standout; and Nancy Mockett, U.S. amateur qualifier. Hawaii transfers Julie Fulton and Sandy Nickerson rounded out the ten person Bruin team.

The team met one of the toughest schedules in the nation competing around the country as well as in local tournaments. Coach Steinmann is known for demanding strict schedules as a means of improving the team.

"Our national schedule is very important in preparing the team for nationals," said Coach Steinmann. "We like to play all types of courses, both nationally and locally, so the players on the team will be able to handle any situation."

The Bruins are members of the Western Collegiate Athletic Association (WCAA), which includes Arizona, Arizona State, Cal State Fullerton, Cal State Long Beach, San Diego State, and USC. Arizona State was thought of as the strongest team outside UCLA in the WCAA last year, but the conference was balanced overall.

UCLA is respected nationally in women's golf and continues to produce top college players like Mary Enright because Coach Steinmann and assistant coach Amy Alcott (one of the premier golfers on the Ladies Professional Golf Association Tour) both work diligently for the success of the team. □

Baseball

Although the Bruins have the youngest squad in the league, the team is fast and made up of some excellent athletes.

Last year Gary Adams had his first losing season in 12 years as head coach. Remembering this loss posed a challenge to the coach and team, as well as giving extra incentive to not repeat last season's record. For the first time in three years a majority of the team were returnees. However, the majority of the returnees were sophomores. This gave the Bruins the youngest squad in the league, if not the entire country. Although the team is young and relatively inexperienced, the Bruins started off the season well. The performance was somewhat inconsistent, but the overall performance was better than expected.

Co-captains Jeff McDonald and Brian Graham were the leaders of the team. Coach Adams was pleased with Jeff's progress as pitcher and commented, "Jeff has three good pitches that are big league pitches." Jeff definitely has shown potential for being one of the best pitchers in the Pac-10. Jeff pitched a complete game over Irvine (5-3) early on in the season.

Co-captain Brian Graham was a very rare four year starter who changed positions every year.

"For the first time in three years a majority of the team were returnees."

---

Coach Adams has great confidence in Graham's abilities. "Brian has major league tools. He's a good runner, has a strong arm, good instincts and he's hit around .300 every year. In short, he has everything the scouts like to see," boasts Adams.

The '82 team is a fast team overall and is made up of some excellent athletes. Pete Beall has an excellent arm and is the leader in RBIs and the league leader in HRs. Two top hitters, average-wise, are sophomore Rich Amaral and Vince Beringhele. Providing power to the team was Lindsay Meggs, third baseman, who demonstrated outstanding defensive plays.

Most of the baseball team members are recruits, but Mike Burkland is a freshman walk-on pitcher for the team as well as a member of the Bruins football team. Other key players were pitchers Pat Clements and Colin Ward. Ward pitched a shut-out at Irvine (16-4).

The young age and inexperience of the team purposed a definite challenge for the '82 baseball team, and this challenge was accepted and met. The players really had to perform as a team and although there were rough spots going into the season, by the end, the team was working well together and showed great progress. □

Softball

UCLA softball players combine the perfect blend of talent and experience comprising one of the nation's leading teams.

Women's softball coach Sharron Backus had an excellent recruiting year as well as an excellent return of key players. Pitching was the forte last year in women's softball and Backus had two excellent returnees with Karen Andrews and Lori Warkentin.

Backus recruited undoubtedly the two top pitching prospects in the United States in ASA Most Valuable Player Debbie Doom of Tempe, Arizona and CIF 4A Player of the Year Tracy Compton of Santa Maria. Both have been dominating pitchers in both high school and ASA competition and they adapted very well to the college game. "Karen and Lori are outstanding returning pitchers and I think that Debbie and Tracy are the two best young pitchers in the country," said Backus.

Top returning hitter is two-time All-American shortstop Dot Ricardson, who was 1981 ASA Most Valuable Player and Top Defensive Player when she led her team to the title. Richardson was the team leader who aided the Bruins with her hitting, defense, and ability to score runs.

Backus had experience behind the plate with the return of All-Conference catcher Barb Booth and defensive standout Shelly Aguilar, both juniors. Senior Debbie Hauer and sophomore slugger Sheila Cornell also returned. Freshman Stacey Winsberg of Granada Hills was prime at second base. Freshman Leslie Rover of Palm Desert and sophomore Barbara Young played center diamond positions. ASA All-American Sue Eskierski had a solid season at third base.

Coach Backus started her seventh season this year at UCLA. She established the Bruins as one of the top women's softball programs in the United States, producing numerous All-American and top caliber teams. "We have unlimited potential," said Backus. "We have an outstanding blend of young talent to go along with proven experience and we have the best pitching staff in the country." □

University Recreation Assn.

The University Recreation Association (URA) fills that gap between competitive sports and just getting together for a friendly game. That is as good a definition as any because the URA has such a variety of clubs servicing the different whims of Bruins whether it be windsurfing, Go, or jujitsu.

Ever feel like playing lacrosse, cricket, or going wind-surfing? How about really getting into a heady game like chess, backgammon, or Go? Or what about martial arts — kenpo, karate, jujitsu? Well, you can do all these and a lot more in the University Recreation Association (URA). The URA, if you haven't guessed by now, is a group of special recreational interest clubs.

All one needs to do to join one of these clubs is to be the typical registered, ID-toting student. You would then jog on up to Kerckhoff 600, register, and bingo! — you're in.

Speaking of which, say you were really into bingo and there's no bingo club in the URA. Simply talk to the URA supervisor to arrange all the details.

Last year, 3,900 students were members of the URA and there are new clubs being formed all the time. Bob Henry, director of the URA program estimates that four or five new clubs are formed every year.

The URA also tries to find space and equipment for the clubs, not to mention providing financial support for the club's basic operations. "It's an opportunity for students to learn new activities and as an aspect of programming, (deciding) what they want to do," concluded Henry.

So don't lose hope, you Solitaire fanatics. The URA could be just the thing for you. □

Intramurals

Intramural sports — a great way to get exercise, fun, and maybe even vent a little anger over the last midterm. More and more Bruins are joining in on the program, as evidenced by the dramatic increase of 135% over the past six years.

What started out over fifty years ago as a small program has ballooned to immense proportions. There has been an increase of 135% over the past six years with even higher figures in sight. No, the subject is not inflation; instead it's a program where students can compete against each other in an atmosphere of fun that they call intramural sports.

With a varying selection of courses offered each quarter, the program tries to satisfy the appetites of thousands of Bruins. Last year, there was a total of 15,876 participants in the intramural program playing a variety of sports from Ultimate Frisbee to the Turkey Relays. Of course, more conventional sports such as flag football, basketball, softball, volleyball, tennis, track and field, soccer, racquetball, golf, cross country, badminton, table tennis . . . well, you get the message, don't you?

"... a variety of sports from Ultimate Frisbee to the Turkey Relays."

---

The program is divided into four programs: men's, women's, coed, and open. Last year, 9,730 male undergrads took part in the proceedings, with 3,302 in the coed, 2,522 in the women's, and 320 in the open program. And according to one member of the Intramural staff, this year most of the sports offered have equalled or surpassed their numbers this year. In 1984, over 50% of the student body is expected to take part in intramural sports. Not bad for a "small" program. □

A Time to Move On

All your life, you've lived under the thumb of Mom and Pops. And all your life you've told yourself, "Wait until I can finally move out of this fascist dump." Well, you finally graduate from high school and it's time to come to UCLA. Time to move out. Time to be on your own. Time to be independent. Time to experience life. Time to get scared . . .

Living at UCLA is definitely a once-in-a-lifetime experience. While everyone eventually grows accustomed to it, getting started can sometimes be a harrowing experience.

Maybe that "dump" with two cars, two TV sets, and a refrigerator full of food wasn't so bad . . .

Steps to finding a place to live at UCLA

1. Apply to dorms in November '80 for a space during fall quarter '81.
2. No word from housing office for ten months.
3. Letter from dorms one week before school starts. Didn't make it. But they tell you not to despair, you're only #4256 on the waiting list.
4. Buy a couple of LaCoste and Polo

- shirts and a pair of topsiders/espadrilles and rush a greek house.
5. Congratulations! You're now a pledge! But there's a two year waiting list for a room in the house. Time to depledge.
6. Co-op? Naaaaaah. . .
7. Look for an apartment.

Finding an apartment at UCLA

No problem you say. Oh, such naive. . .

You get a hot tip from a friend who knows a guy who has a sister going out with the son of a man who owns an apartment building in Westwood. Lucky break! But no dice. You have to turn it down because the four girls living above are all majoring in flamenco dance.

Desperation time. Three days until the start of the quarter and the only bed in sight is the backseat of your Pinto. You finally realize that the first place you should have looked is the Housing Office in the basement of Dodd Hall. You reach Dodd Hall and write down every available apartment within ten miles of UCLA and start calling.

You soon discover that within the past

24 hours, every vacant apartment in the LA area renting for under $500 a month has mysteriously been inhabited.

Finally surrendering to the adage, "Beggars can't be choosers," you end up with the cheapest place still available—a $650 a month one bedroom apartment in Brentwood.

Finding a roommate

After paying first and last month's rent and examining your net worth (possibly a negative value), you decide to add a roommate.

You go back to Dodd Hall and put up a notice for a roommate.

WANTED: One male roommate to share one bedroom with clean cut freshman at UCLA. Apartment is near bus lines and your share of the rent is $325 per month plus utilities. No smokers or dopers please. Ask for Winthrop: 825-2640.

Simple enough, right? Wrong! That night you get a call from every smoker and dope fiend within a five mile radius of your apartment.

Just as you are about to throw in the towel and move back into the Pinto, an ex-fellow pledge calls and agrees to share the place with you.

Fantastic, you've found a roommate. Next comes the real test. . .compatibility.

Getting along with your roommate

You go to sleep promptly at ten o'clock everynight. He goes to sleep at four o'clock every morning. You get up at 7:00 a.m. to get to your 9:00 class. He gets up at 11:00 a.m. to get to his 10:00 class. You like a clean, spotless kitchen. Face it, he's a slob. You like to study in complete silence. He likes to study to the beat of the GoGo's. You like to watch Hill Street Blues. He'd rather watch your girlfriend instead. You like to play backgammon. He'd rather be skiing. You like jigsaw puzzles. He thinks you're wasting your time. You think he talks a little too much. He doesn't like your attitude. You don't like his temper. He doesn't care for your singing in the shower at 7:30 every morning. You don't like listening to Oingo Boingo at 2:30 in the morning. He doesn't like having a nit-picky roommate. You hate it when he picks his teeth with the antenna of your transistor radio. He doesn't like your...

But at least you get along. . .

Diet

(or How to Starve in One Easy Quarter)

If you were lucky (or unlucky) enough to get into the dorms, you probably have a nutritious, balanced meal (no comment on taste) waiting for you three times a day.

If you were lucky (or unlucky) enough to get into the co-op, you probably have a meal (no comment on taste, looks, or nutritional value) waiting for you three times a day.

If you were lucky (or unlucky) enough to pledge a frat or a sorority, then you are guaranteed one nice meal a week (Monday night meeting).

But if you were lucky (or unlucky) enough to live in an apartment, guard your popcorn popper with your life. . .

As someone wise said long ago, "Man can not live by bread alone." But students can get by on popcorn and large quantities Cream of Wheat.

Budgeting your money

Money Problems

Serves you right for not budgeting.

You're walking through Westwood Village with friends. You come across a small boutique with the most darling pair of Frye boots in the window. They cost $75. But you just gotta have them. You don't have the money on you but you vow to come down the next day and buy them. You go home. You find out your share of the rent is due and your father's credit card isn't any good anymore because you surpassed this month's credit limit a week ago.

Time to call Dad. . .

Life is Never Dull In Dykstra

Settled somewhere in the immediate outskirts of campus, stands Dykstra Hall — the largest and oldest of UCLA's dormitory residence halls. Located at the bottom of De Neve Drive, this ten floor high wonder is by no means just an ordinary dorm, oh no. Don't let the shabby, drab appearance deceive you. For within its confines, reside 800 wild and crazy college students most of whom are freshmen who probably experienced a deprived and sheltered childhood and are now let loose.

During the day when most people are in class, the long and narrow halls of Dykstra remain quiet except for an occasional blaring stereo. Then in the evening, students return to the dorm to relax, socialize and most important of all — eat. The dorm cafeteria-style meals are, uh . . . just like Mom's home-cooking! (Well, actually not quite, but it fills you up.)

"800 wild and crazy college students . . ."

---

After dinner there is a wide variety of activities for one to indulge in including ping pong, pool, basketball, television, popcorn parties, party parties, frisbee in the hallways, water-balloon fights, shaving cream wars and so on. And if you're not in the mood for fun, then you can always pick up a book and study (but only as a last resort).

Incidentally, every year Dykstra holds two big social events — Las Vegas Night and the Luau. And now and then there are dances with live bands. I tell ya, life is never dull in Dykstra, but don't say a word to Mom and Pops! □

Hedrick Hall: It's Better On Top

The "Top of the Hill" Hedrick Hall holds a reputation of individuality with a special character all its own. Its residents are a diverse group including swimmers, greeks, jokers, and studiers. The down to earth atmosphere offers friendliness and support for Hedrick's residents. There's always a door open and someone to chat with.

Hedrick, which is the newest of the dorms, has a lot to offer the UCLA student. Hall government by the floor system offers the opportunity to get involved. Intramural teams are organized through each floor — friendly competition within the building. Also, Hedrick Hall participates in the Mardi Gras with a booth and Homecoming with a float. There's a winter formal, special dinners for special occasions and plenty of meet-your-neighbor parties throughout the year.

All this is just 128 steps (so they say) up Sunset Boulevard from campus — 128 steps to home. □

—JLM

Although not apparent from its facade, Rieber Hall has undergone a lot of drastic changes over the last ten years. The only major construction renovations have been in the cafeteria, but it's had changes within to modify it over the years to match the 1982 lifestyle.

For instance, in 1972 the two wings of Rieber were separated: one housed the men, the other was for women. Not only were the men and women in separate wings, but if a guy slipped over to the women's side after 10 pm, alarms went off!

As we all know, this is 1982 and separate male and female wings are a thing of the past at Rieber. However, there are certain floors that house just women or just men. But, for the most part, Rieber is coed.

The dormitory life has grown more popular in the last decade. In 1972, it was not unheard of to have a 'single' room. In fact, Hedrick Hall remained half empty. There was maid service once a week and besides just tidying up and vacuuming, your bedsheets were washed for you! Well, that was then, this is now: the waiting list for dorm housing is over 6,000 and the single occupant room is definitely a thing of the past (as is the maid service!). If clean up is to be done at all, it is undertaken by the two roommates.

Improving With Age

The main desk sorts and distributes its residents' mail, checks out room keys as well as supplying residents with recreational equipment for games like basketball, volleyball, pool and ping-pong. Rieber Hall, like the other dorms, supplies its residents with entertainment. Every Thursday night, movies are shown there and there are theme dorm dances. There is some form of entertainment provided every weekend in one of the dorms on a rotating basis.

---

When the cafeteria was remodeled, so was the food policy. No more mass quantity of burgers or eggs fried up and left sitting. Now food is cooked to order. The quality of the food has also improved. Dorm residents are given food coupons that may be redeemed for a meal on campus if they can't make it back to the dorms for meals. The price one pays to live in Rieber can probably not be compared to the 1972 dorm residents' fee but then neither can all the alterations 1982 has brought. □

Sproul Hall, "Where the Party Begins"

The Sproul Hall tee shirt exclaims "Where the Party Begins." And so it was, with their annual street dance which attracted over a thousand dorm residents and friends on the weekend before school commenced. What a terrific psyche up for all the freshmen in the dorm this year. But college life and dorm life isn't all fun and games as the residents soon discovered; hardship and patience were introduced right into their curriculum when meals were to be served at Dykstra. A face lift on Sproul Halls cafeteria was earmarked for the beginning of fall quarter, and until mid-spring quarter, residents had to "truck-on down" to Dykstra for their daily nourishment(?). And if that wasn't bad enough, they even had to "hop on back up" after eating. (Have you ever hopped on a full stomach of "Chicken Berzerk?")

"There's been a great surge of enthusiasm this year in Sproul, perhaps it's the freshman, or just the great people that reside here" so said, hall president

Steven Pantilat. And who could argue, with the likes of Miss California Cindy Kerby or members of the gymnastic and tennis teams floating around.

The atmosphere of enthusiasm

"Residents had to truck-on down to Dykstra for their daily nourishment(?). And if that wasn't bad enough, they even had to hop on back up after eating. (Have you ever hopped on a full stomach of "Chicken Berzerk?")"

---

translated itself into projects such as Homecoming. Third place was taken by their float in the parade, as well as third place for their marching group. Halloween was also celebrated in a big way, with a haunted house in the basement of the dorm, through which one had to travel in order to get to the dance on the other side.

Winter quarter, as always, was a settling quarter for the dorm, as students got down to business after the newness of fall. But Winter quarter was not all a complete bore, as a gala semi-formal was celebrated at the Sheraton. A good time was, of course, had by all.

A Mardi Gras Booth and a charity ball, held at the James E. West center for the UCLA Pediatrics Ward, were the highlights of Spring Quarter. The booth was the first one that the hall as a whole has sponsored in years, and it gave one more outlet for all the "go-get-em" residents. Spring quarter was also the time for fun parties in the lounge on the seventh floor, with its wooden dance floor and special lighting. The only one of its kind in the dorms, it was a special treat to be able to sponsor the numerous parties up there. But seventh floor wasn't the only place where they party began... □

How Suite It Is

“It’s more of apartment-style living,” explains Julie Villareal, resident coordinator of the Northern suites. Ah, the suite life—the vital proximity to the big U like the dorms, yet the tranquil serenity of apartment life (in other words, no loud music coming through the floors at 2 a.m.). For the 695 students fortunate enough to receive suite housing, it is sweet indeed.

For only $600 more than the dorms, the suites offer two bedrooms, bathroom facilities, and a living room, all furnished. Each of the suites also has a service building where all of the laundry facilities and the all-important vending machines can be found. The only drawback is that the suite-dwellers lack a food facility and must trek over to the dorms for meals (the Southern to Rieber and the Northern to Hedrick).

Now the only question remaining is why the hell do the sides of the suites look like a roof . . . □

CO-OP: Housing, Work and Fun

No dorm. Not enough money for an apartment. The army? Nix on that. Well, there is the CO-OP . . . The CO-OP, the mere mention of which would make the most hardened student shudder. Cramped living quarters, cluttered messy lounges, food . . . for lack of a better term . . . all these images of the dreaded CO-OP are conjured up by students.

And, like so many conceptions, this one is a misconception. The CO-OP teaches students responsibility, offers lower costs, and proves to the student that cooperation is the only way a large number can survive as a whole.

Each student is responsible for a certain job necessary for the smooth operation of the CO-OP. Whether it be cooking or general maintenance work, the student does his share for the good of everyone.

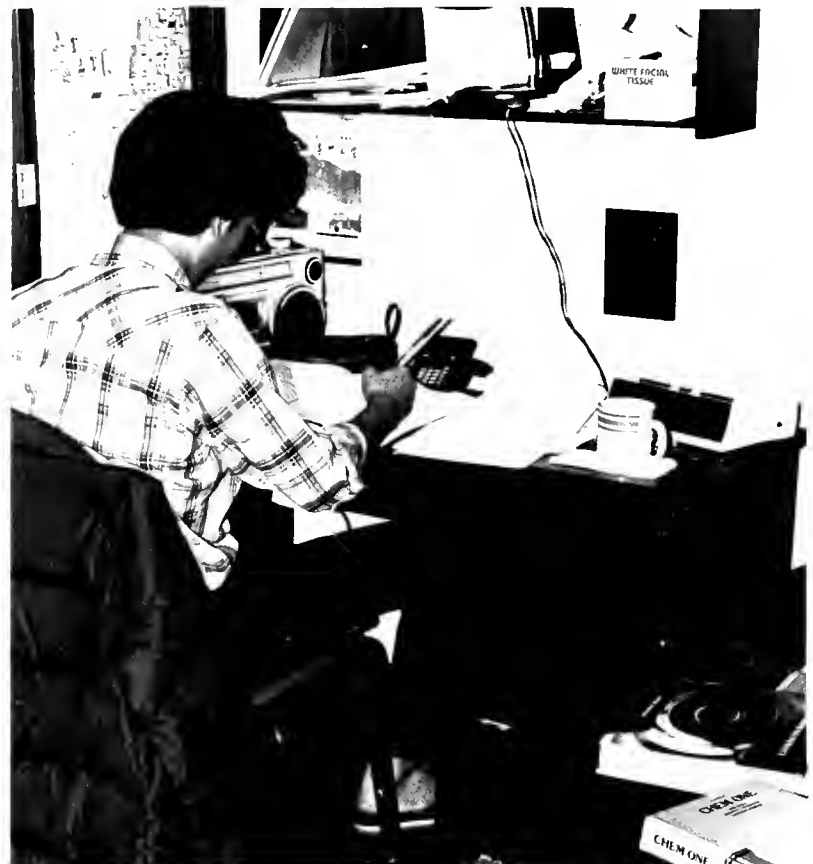

By doing their own maintenance work, the CO-OP student can save money and use it for the essential aspects of student life, like registration fees, books, Asteroids and Heineken. Compared to about $660 per quarter for the dormitories, the CO-OP rooms start at $384 per quarter.

Besides the financial advantages, the CO-OP teaches the student that cooperation is the key to survival. It's students working with and for each other—this is how a community thrives. The student gets a sense of self-worth by his contributions.

Add this to the other material benefits of parking, study rooms, game room, library, laundry facilities, CO-OP store, and proximity to UCLA and Westwood Village, and the CO-OP becomes not only a viable housing alternative, but a good first choice. □

Marie (grumble): Uh, whaaa . . . oh, yah, yah, sorry. Click. Holy Moly, it's past 7:00! I'm gonna be late for class! Time for a super quick shower.
7:11 AM Marie: Eeeeeeek! When is our crummy manager gonna fix our hot water?
7:20 Marie: Hey, what happened to all the Sugar Smacks?
Jan: Sorry, Mar, I gave all the rest to Puddin'. You know how he loves cereal in his milk.

Marie: That fat cat. He's got enough food in him to last twenty lives.
7:25 AM Marie: Yish, I'd better jam. Wait, I don't have enough change for the bus. D'ya have thirty-five cents I can borrow?
3:27 PM Marie: Hi kids! I'm home.
Roommates: Howdy Marie! How was school?
Marie: Rough day, lemme tell ya. I had to wait twenty minutes in line to cash a check on campus, and then I found out that one of my checks bounced. Pfff! Oh yeah, I saw Steve and Mike on campus today. They said they might drop by round dinner-time.

Jan: What? This place is a total mess. There's a ton of dishes piled up in the kitchen and the bedroom, well, half of the bedroom . . .
Trixie: Hey are you insinuating that I'm a slob? I mean, there's nothing wrong with my side of the room. So what's a little mess here and there? At least it's organized, sort of — okay, okay, I'll clean it up.

Jan: Well, what can we serve the boys for dinner if they come by?
Trixie: Let's see, how about cottage cheese and apples? Or popcorn? How about some popcorn?

Marie: No way. Guys like solid food, like meat. I think I have some macaroni and cheese, and we can go to the store for some hot dogs. Sounds good?

Trixie: Sure, s'alright with me. But how do we cook them?

Jan: Bake them, of course.

Marie: Sounds fine to me, too, but I've gotta study tonite so I'll have to eat and run. Sorry I can't stay. Oh, before I forget I'd better call my dad now and ask him to send rent money.

Trixie: Wait, you can't call your dad. The phone is disconnected.

Marie: What? I thought we paid the bill.

Trixie: We did. Two weeks late.

Marie: It figures. You know, we oughta be more responsible now that we're college students and living out on our own.

Jan: Yeah, I guess you're right, Marie. We're adults now. I think I'll do my laundry now since it's been three weeks. Does anybody have any Tide I can borrow? □

LIFESTYLES

The Two Sides of Commuting

There are two sides to the commuting situation here at UCLA, those that commute by bus, and those that take the seemingly easier route of the car. Each has its advantages, and each as its headaches. Time is of the utmost importance to each commuter, and no matter what, there just never seems to be enough of it.

The bussed commuter faces challenges, obstacles, and tensions that the driving commuter can only envision via a terrifying nightmare. This commuter's hassles begin long before actually obtaining a seat on the bus, for with the crowded Wilshire bus line, simply getting a bus to stop becomes a problem.

Once on board (due mainly to the tender heart of a compassionate bus driver), the busing commuter faces hassle #2: finding a seat. The bus is generally packed wall to wall with people, all of whom are holding on for dear life. This situation prevents any possibility of gaining a few extra minutes of study.

After gaining a seat, this commuter faces hassle #3: the heavy guilt of sitting while the little old woman standing balances unsteadily. This guilt tears at the commuter despite the fact that the old woman has nothing but a small pocketbook while the student has a heavy bookbag and three notebooks. The guilt soon becomes too stong and once again the commuter is standing.

Enter hassle #4: fighting the temptation to yell when a seat becomes empty at Wilshire Blvd. and Westwood. The commuter, after standing for 30 minutes, earns the privilege of sitting for

"He must search out every corner, curve, and crevice before (if lucky) finding that much awaited and longed for parking space."

The problems of the driving commuter are distinct from those faced by the bused commuter. While not faced with bus seat hassles, this commuter maneuvers around obstacles of a different sort.

Obstacle #1: forcing one's self to let the car warm up. This obstacle for the seasoned-driving-commuter is simple for he has learned that an unwarmed car may result in a terrifying freeway experience.

Once on the freeway, obstacle #2 finds its way into the commuter's path: the decision to memorize ID terms for today's test or to listen to the radio. But this obstacle is soon dismissed with the simple justification that freeway study is hazardous to one's driving.

Now, obstacle #3 creeps its way into the commuter's path: to resist the temptation to yell obscenities at the jerk that just cut you off. Understanding must now govern the commuter . . . understanding and a lot of will power.

Once off the freeway and on campus, obstacle #4 arises: Where on earth is there a parking space? The commuter now envisions life with the infamous "Blue-X." Detective thinking and patience must now aid the driving commuter. He must search out every corner, curve, and crevice before (if lucky) finding that much awaited and longed for parking space.

Yet once on campus and functioning with the flow of daily college life, the hassles and obstacles of each commuter disappear, leaving him with time to concentrate on more important matters, like the realization that a Bruin's life no matter how taxing is still worth its weight in Blue and Gold. □

Housemothers

To those not associated with the Greek system here at UCLA, the word "housemother" probably does not hold any special meaning. But to those young women in a sorority, a housemother is a very special person.

The housemother is the official hostess of the sorority. She welcomes the rushees into the house as well as the alumni, the parents and friends of "her" girls. The housemother is the overseer and coordinator of the house. It is her responsibility to help plan the meals and order the food. She must interview and hire the help for the house's daily upkeep. These responsibilities go on and on. It is a 24-hour a day job. The housemother's role is key in the smooth functioning of a house, both up front and behind the scenes.

Naturally a housemother is going to feel the most proud of "her girls" and the house where she lives; however, all of the housemothers realize the importance of helping out one another.

Food and supplies are traded between houses when needed. It is the give and take, the sharing that goes on with neighboring houses, that helps to strengthen the bond along the sorority row.

One very dear woman, who has been a housemother longer than any other of UCLA's housemothers, is Mrs. Ruby Long.

"No one knows as much as a graduated high school senior. Their first year on their own, you can't tell them anything . . ."

Kappa Alpha Theta is so very lucky and proud of this lady. 1982 marks her eleventh year here at UCLA's Beta Xi chapter.

Overseeing over 200 young women is not an easy task for anyone, but Mrs. Long does the job wonderfully. Having been a mother of three, grandmother of six, Mrs. Long is highly qualified and she really understands the young women. "No one knows as much as a graduated high school senior. Their first year on their own you can't tell them anything, it wouldn't do any good. I offer my guidance, my suggestions . . . I trust them."

The Thetas put their love and trust in Mrs. Long as well. In tribute to Mrs. Long's dedication, a special dinner is given in her honor once a quarter. Members present Mrs. Long cards and gifts and sing a song written especially for her.

Each year Mrs. Long receives cards and photographs of the girls who graduated years ago who now have careers and family of their own. For these reasons and many more, Mrs. Long reflects upon her role as housemother at Kappa Alpha Theta as "an active, but so rewarding and gratifying life."

It is because of Mrs. Long and the other housemothers on the row that the sororities become not a house, but a home. □

The Greek system, alive and flourishing

The Greek system is alive, flourishing and active here on the UCLA campus. In contrast to the late sixties and early seventies, membership in the houses is continually on the rise and their visibility on campus matches their popularity. The Greek system grows ever larger, this year saw two new chapters reestablishing themselves. Sigma Alpha Mu (or SAMI) was admitted into IFC in November of 1981, and has grown in just seven short months from its original membership of 15 guys to that of 32. Phi Mu's recolonization took place two weeks into the Fall quarter and by October 17th, initiation night, there were 85 members.

The Greek system has also been struck with its inevitable pitfalls, as houses don't always get along or follow the rules. This year Beta Theta Pi (or Beta) was brought up on charges of hazing, a violation of IFC regulations as well as California law. Because they were already on probation from previous actions, their membership in IFC was automatically suspended with a recommendation sent to their national that their charter be revoked.

SAMI fraternity, with chapters at USC and Long Beach, folded here in 1969 when Greek membership was at its low point. It was revived this year by two UCLA men who were unchallenged by the present selection of fraternities. They were contacted by a visiting field secretary of SAMI through mutual friends and the organization was formed. Dave Lowenthal and Gary Shapiro, president and vice president respectively of the house, have worked closely with both their local alumni and National to become one of the fastest growing colonizing chapters that SAMI has. Their goal in resurrecting SAMI was to offer an alternative to the "traditional" fraternity and appeal to those men who are looking for responsibility and challenge, as well as good times in their fraternal experience.

Looking towards their future, the next big step is the acquisition of a house. Help from their National in this respect has been slow in coming, due to a Catch-22 situation—their National feels it needs to see the stability that comes with time for the colony before they make a large financial commitment. The members believe that only with an actual structure will they be able to maintain and increase their membership in keeping with competition with other houses. "We see our membership growing strong," states Dave Lowenthal, "our house is young, and can only increase in number within the next few years."

Phi Mu's recolonization, on the other hand, was the culmination of long range plans to bring the sorority back on campus by their National and local Alumni groups. National officers and recent collegiate members from other campuses were brought in to rush and recolonize the chapter. Rushing in their refurbished chapter house (during their own designated week of rush) with great support from Panhellenic and other sororities, the Alumni took 85 motivated and challenged women. The road has not been easy, for most of these women had never met each other before, yet their numerous exchanges, raids and active involvement on campus has solved that initial unfamiliarity.

Phi Mu's future looks very bright. Participating with informal rush this spring, Phi Mu was able to have a "practice run" on their rushing techniques, as most of these women have never even experienced rush, let alone rush on the receiving end. Their advisory council, along with local support from their alumni groups, provided invaluable idea input and financial support to the chapter, and this most definitely will insure their success.

The Executive Council and Judicial Board of the Interfraternity Council have the designated power to bring charges against its members and to revoke their membership in IFC if necessary. Charges of hazing were brought against the Beta house (which was already on probation) by a member of the community who found a Beta pledge stranded outside her home in Palos Verdes. The Beta house was found guilty of hazing, and because of their previous record, their membership in IFC was automatically suspended. This suspension, for a period of one year, prevents Beta from formally or informally rushing and from participating as a group in any type of greek activities. To rejoin IFC, they must reapply next school year after Fall rush, and petition once again for membership within IFC.

The measure taken by IFC was quite a shock to the greek system itself. The action, ironically, has had a positive effect on the fraternity system itself, giving validity to IFC and its powers and proving to the community that, yes, the Greeks can handle their problems internally.

Betas' future is considered positive by many. An Alumni review board came in to reduce the present group of men to a good and strong core group. Money has been poured into the structure itself, mainly by a strong and active alumni, and many believe that Beta will be back on campus by next fall deservedly so. □

Panhellenic, Women of the Eighties

Who can keep track of 2700 sorority women at UCLA, an average of 1500 women rush-ees each year, and keep them all enthusiastic and involved? Not quarterback Tom Ramsey, or the Sigma Nu House, and certainly not Chancellor Young. The answer is none other than Panhellenic, the UCLA sorority governing body. Panhellenic, consisting of one delegate from each sorority and an eleven member elected executive board, provides organization and service to the seventeen national and the one local sorority that have colonized at UCLA.

Panhellenic's main concern, especially at the beginning of the Fall Quarter is Formal Rush, which lasts on this campus for nine activity packed days. Yet Panhellenic, in its never-ending goal for innovative programming, instituted this year such things as a Women's Awareness Week, which held programming on rape prevention, sexual harassment (especially related to the collegiate scene), and discussion session on relationships. Self-defense classes were also offered periodically throughout the year.

"Panhellenic involvement for the sorority members offers academic, Intramural, social and philanthropic involvement both on campus and within the community."

---

An increased emphasis on scholarship throughout the system as a whole has led Panhellenic to sponsor scholarship programs this year. Scholarships geared especially towards the fall pledges but also focused recognition throughout the system for outstanding scholars. Intramurals also has had a resurgence in recent years and Panhellenic has fulfilled that interest by offering intrasorority tournaments ranging from tennis to handball.

Panhellenic also sponsors many school-wide programs in conjunction with the Interfraternity Council (like Greek Week, Homecoming and Mardi Gras), which included an added philanthropic activity this year — the Special Olympics for handicapped children and adults. □

IFC, Inter Fraternity Council, consists of a group of 20 elected and appointed fraternity men, along with one representative from each of the 27 houses. It is the official link between the Greek fraternity system and the Administration of UCLA. Funded under the first Vice-President's office as a special interest group, IFC receives $5,000 from the University. They grant permission for a fraternity's charter on campus as well as monitor potential and actual problems between the University and the system, or between the fraternities themselves.

More informally IFC sponsors large events such as Greek Week, Homecoming and Mardi Gras, in conjunction with Panhellenic as well as six major interfraternity athletic tournaments. In the fall there was football, co-sponsored by Flashman distilling, and Basketball co-sponsored by Miller Beer Co., with the Spring season bringing in Water Polo and Softball. These activities as well as others brought IFC's operating budget close to $20,000 this year.

Probably the most important service that IFC performs however is the sponsoring of Fraternity Rush, which is their biggest program in the Fall. They mail flyers out in every reg packet and then respond to the 1,400 or so interested students with brochures on the various houses. IFC sponsors the first day of rush, this Fall with a barbecue and volleyball tournament up at the Sunset Recreation Center, an orientation meeting followed by row tours of all the houses, as well as advice for those rushing.

The council itself meets every other week on Wednesday for a formal dinner alternating between different fraternity houses. Their philanthropic event this spring was for the Hemophelic Foundation, as well as a Dodger Day for inner city kids in Los Angeles. "IFC has grown to have a real effect on the Administration's outlook on the fraternity system, as well as an effective influence on the fraternities themselves," states Matt Doretto, president of IFC. "In the past few years since the revision of our constitution, we've greatly diminished problems between the University and the fraternities, as well as problems between the fraternities and the community. We have the legitimacy of a governing body."

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

The Alpha Psi chapter of Alpha Chi Omega here at UCLA consists of 150 members. Alpha Chi offers lifetime membership to its initiates, encouragement to develop one's fullest potential, acquaintance with many avenues of service to others, high standards, many lasting friendships, and a lot of fun!

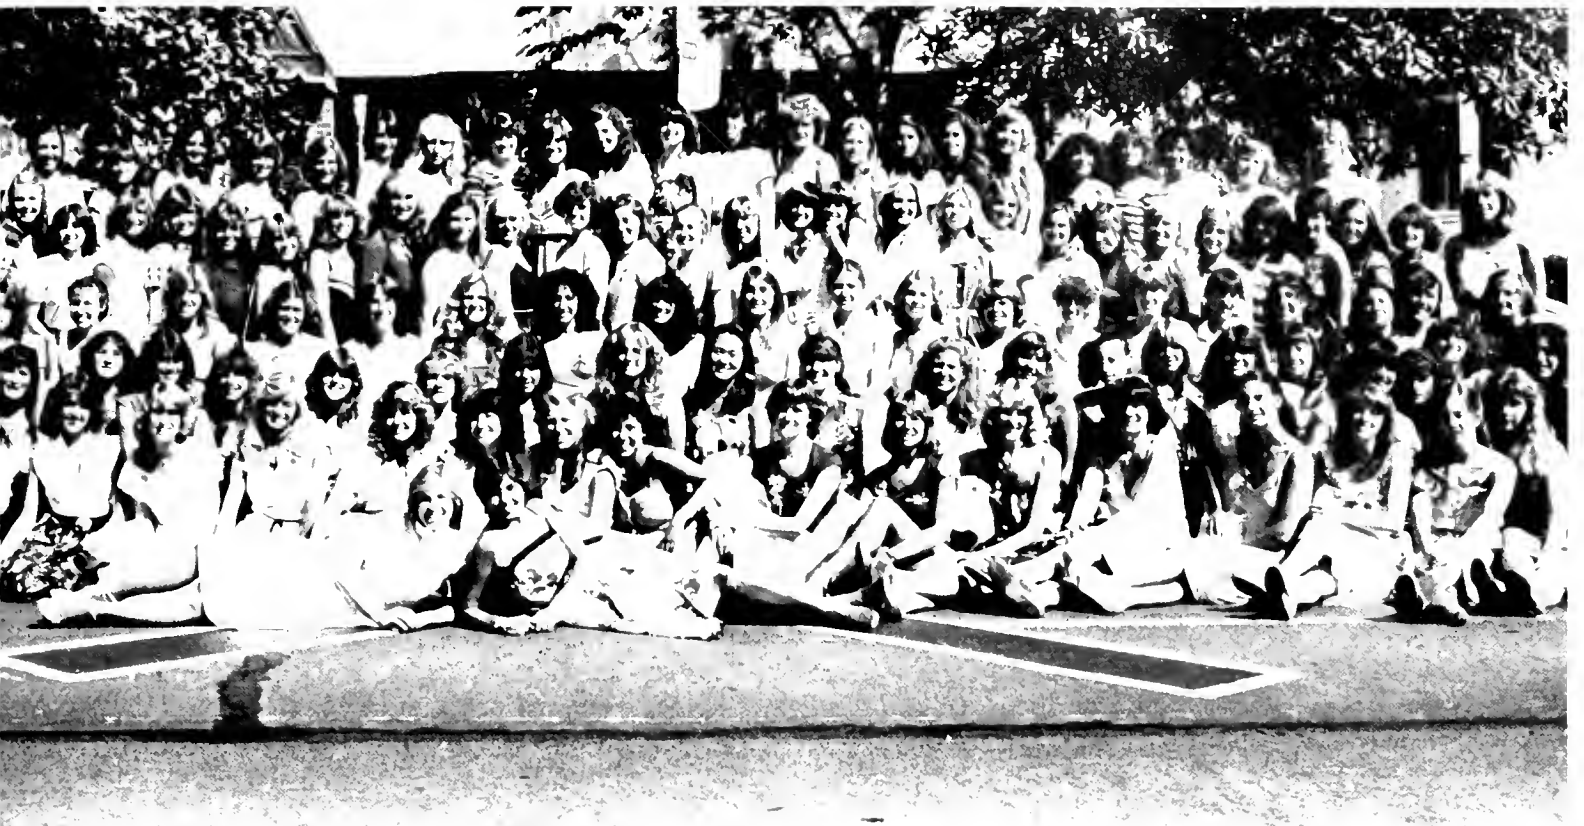

This year Alpha Chi contributed considerable hours and dollars to altruistic projects such as Easter Seals and the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. Alpha Chi was also very active on the UCLA campus. We placed third with our Homecoming Parade Float created with ZBT. We also experienced a great Greek Week where we teamed up with the Phi Kappas, while at Mardi Gras we fashioned a Casino booth with ATO. Alpha Chi has also been active in various intramural sports such as football, softball, and volleyball.

Alpha Chi had a Dad's day when we took them to the UCLA vs. Washington football game. Also we had a fashion show for our Mom's. We had a lot of fun, both at our exchanges and our Alpha Chi parties. Our exchanges had many different themes: from a 50's sock hop, to a western hoedown, a pajama party, and a Christmas party. Special parties included our Presents party in Pacific Palisades, our fall Pirate party on the Princess Louise, and our formal which was held at the Riviera Country Club.

ALPHA DELTA PI

Alpha Chi of Alpha Delta Pi established itself in 1925 when the Southern Campus, UCLA, was located near central Los Angeles. And when UCLA decided to relocate itself due to expansion and move to the Hills of Westwood, naturally ADPI followed. Royce and Powell weren't the only structures built in 1929. The members of the first college greek organization moved into their newly built home at 808 Hilgard Avenue. The southern architecture reminds members of our founding at Wesleyan Female College in Macon County Georgia in 1851.

Alpha Chi has grown since those fundamental beginnings. We are over 150 members strong and the largest chapter of Alpha Delta Pi, and we have served the campus and community for over fifty-seven years.

Throughout these years, ADPis have been involved in such organizations and activities as Bruin Belles, The Daily Bruin, Community Service Commission, KLA, Southern Campus Yearbook, Marching Band, Women's Choir, Mardi Gras, Greek Week and Spring Sing Committees, Spirit Squad, Peer Health and ASK Counselors, and much more. We're everywhere! Besides the involvement, many of the girls have held leadership positions — not afraid of the challenges that await them.

This year brought a new challenge to ADPI concerning our philanthropy, The Ronald McDonald House. A new, exciting fundraiser, The First Annual Alpha Delta Pi Winterfest at Ski Sunrise, let many people enjoy the great outdoors while raising money for a wonderful cause. Everybody deserves a break now and then.

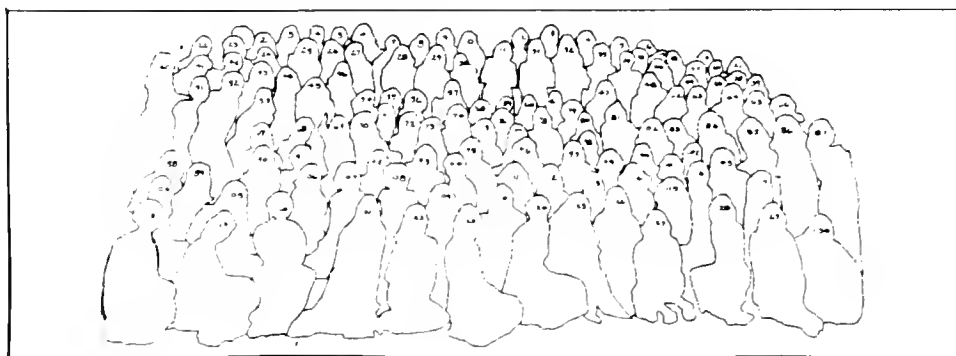

Sure enough, ADPI's, also known as Al's Pals, began the year by clowning around with the brothers of Theta Xi when we teamed up to create "A Celebration of Charity" — our Homecoming float which placed first

Though the cold winter winds blew, all ADPis had a warm feeling in their hearts because it was Friendship Week and time for our pledges to be initiated. Eugenia would have been proud. Winter quarter also brought the exciting Pledge/Active Party with the military in full force at ADPI's USO Show. As Greek Week rolled around, ADPis teamed up with the brothers from Phi Kappa Psi to sing, dance, and have a lot of fun.

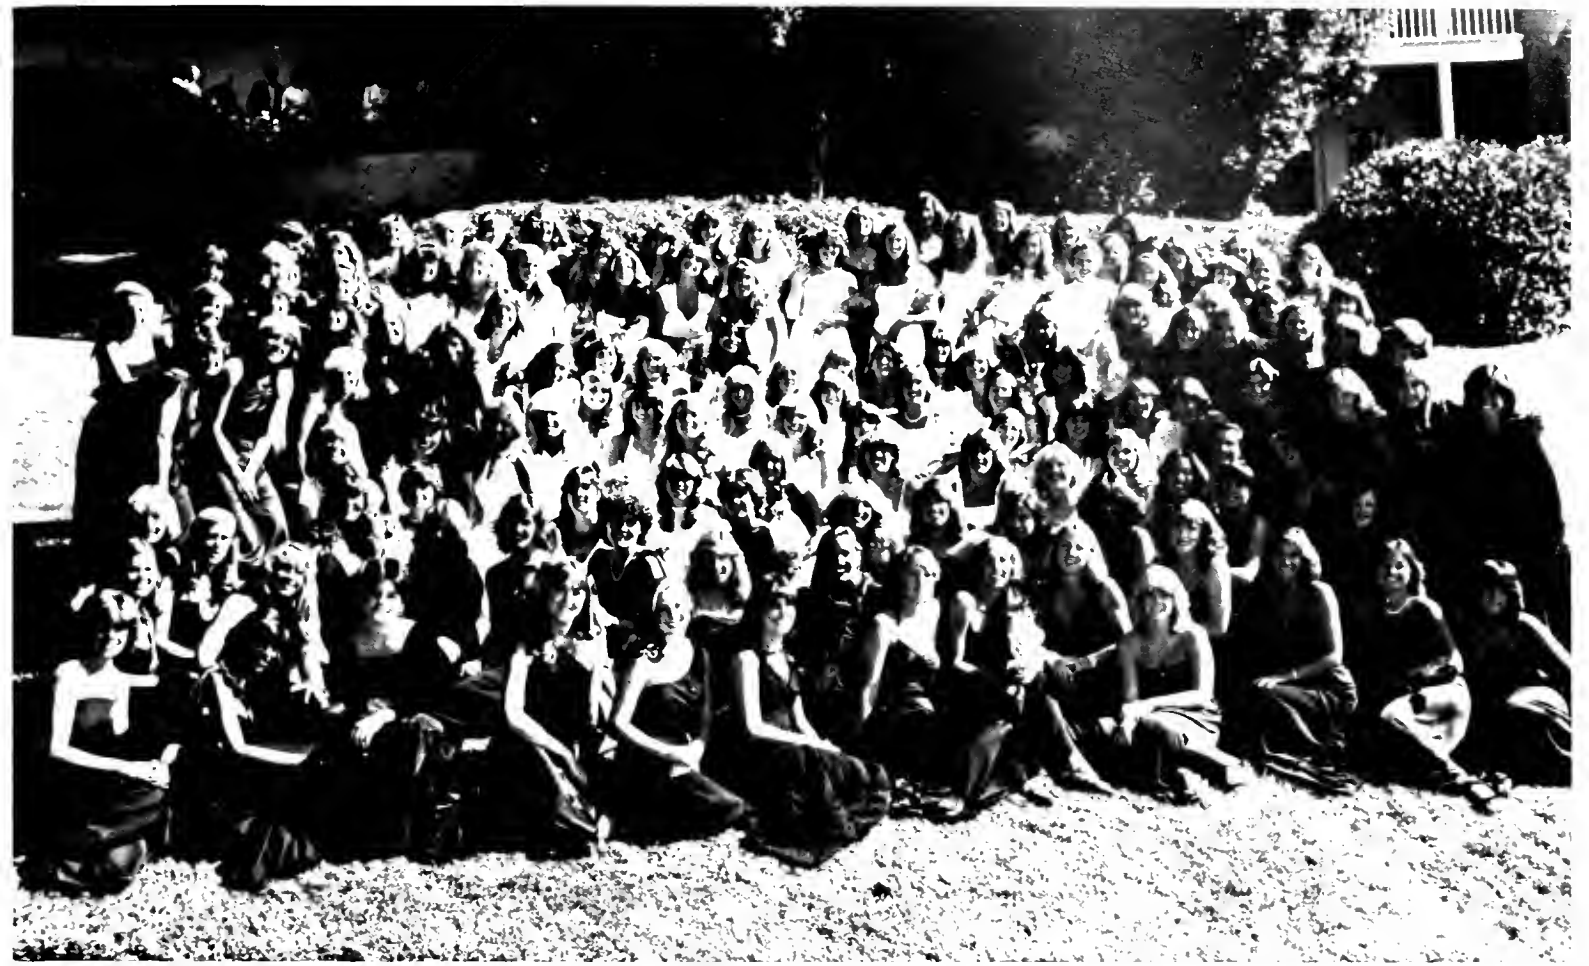

Spring quarter started out with the Pis traveling to mountain, sea, and shore. The traveling included trips to Mammoth, Palm Springs, and to Santa Barbara for the big volleyball tournament. ADPI also traveled with their moms to Santa Anita for a day at the races. In May it was time for the Diamond Ball, ADPI's annual spring formal. Everyone looked beautiful and had a great time. For Mardi Gras we teamed up with Phi Kappa Sigma to raise money for Uni-Camp. ADPI ended their year by having a "Last Bash" sponsored by the seniors as their last hurrah before graduation. WL-FEO.

ALPHA EPSILON PI

Alpha Epsilon Pi's chapter at UCLA, Xi Deuteron, has consistently been involved in all aspects of campus life. AEPi has had brothers elected to the offices of General Representative and Student Body Vice President. We have brothers on the Registration Committee, Election Board, IFC's Judicial Board, and in the Student Housing Lobby.

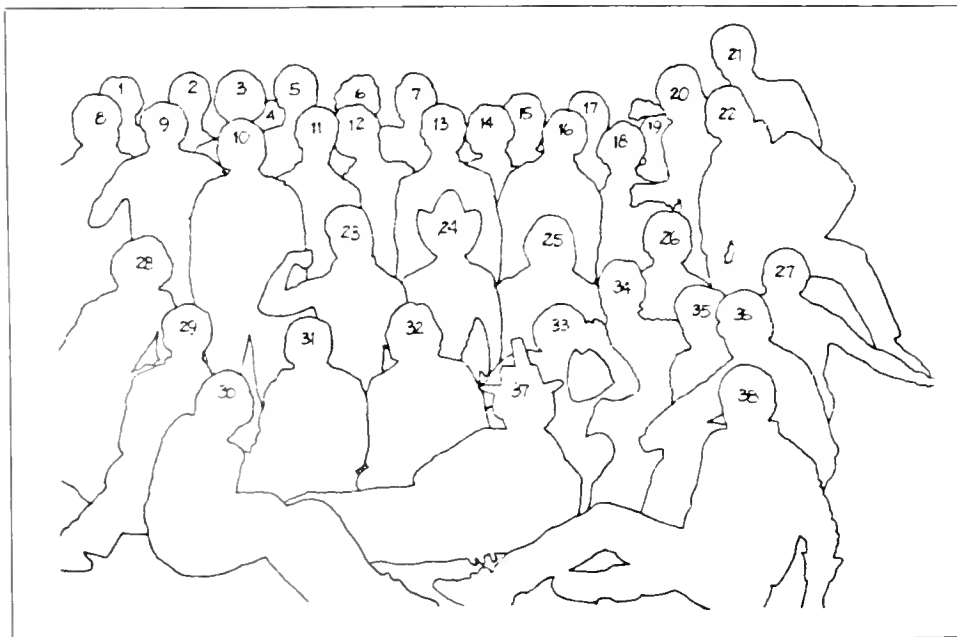

Xi Deuteron has continuously participated in intramural and varsity athletics: crew, cross-country, lacrosse, and diving. We also contribute off campus through community service projects, such as visiting a nursing home, working at the UCLA Child Care Center, and hosting our campus' International Day.

Social activities have always been important to us. Brothers plan rush parties, sorority raids and exchanges, little sister parties and excursions, "road-trips", beach-bashes, and our annual formal. These activities, worthwhile for their fun alone, engender a brotherly and cooperative spirit within our fraternity. Spirit among the brothers goes beyond the walls of our "Pi" house. Along with trips to football games with our little sisters, Pi's have been on the field with the UCLA Spirit Squad for the past couple of years.

ALPHA GAMMA OMEGA

Alpha Gamma Omega has been on the UCLA campus since 1928 and located at 515 Landfair Avenue for the past twenty years. The house currently consists of 60 members, 44 of whom live in the house. Membership in the house is a great source of fellowship and brotherhood, as well as fellowship with our auxiliary, the Little Sisters of Maranatha and with our sister sorority, Alpha Delta Chi. One example of this fellowship is our weekly Wednesday-night Bible Study. Annual activities include our Little Sister Retreat in the Fall, and the AGO-ADX Retreat in the Winter. One of the highlights of the year is our Christmas formal. Although AGO provides many social and athletic activities, our primary objective is to glorify Christ, and the house provides a great opportunity to grow and mature in Christ.

ALPHA PHI ALPHA

Alpha Phi Alpha's motto is "First of all, servants of all, we shall transcend all," and we follow that motto by stressing scholarship, brotherhood and community service. Scholarship is stressed because we believe the best way to uplift our members is by educating them. Brotherhood is stressed because we believe having brothers to share our college experiences will make college life memorable. Community service is especially stressed, and Gamma Xi is currently involved in tutorial projects dealing with high school students in Los Angeles.

Gamma Xi also participates in intramural athletics, gives fund raising social functions, selects a sweetheart court, and has members active in the running of government, and the Black Student Alliance. We are very proud, not only of our fraternity, but of our chapter and the many things we have accomplished.

ALPHA PHI

Leadership, involvement, and lasting friendships are only a few of the positive aspects that sorority life offers, and Alpha Phi is no exception. Colonized on the campus in 1924, the Beta Delta chapter has grown to be more than 160 strong and is one of the largest on campus. Attracting girls of many varied interests and involvements on campus and the community as well, Alpha Phi boasts a diverse membership who add variety and spice to the running of the chapter.

This year's schedule started a full month before the beginning of school with rush. Yet Alpha Phi was there in strong numbers, rushing hard, in the moderate weather (for a change) of a Los Angeles August. Fifty-nine pledges were taken during formal and informal rush.

Fall quarter saw Alpha Phi co-sponsoring a Homecoming float with Theta Chi, exchanges with Alpha Tau Omega, and the Phi Kaps. The pledges also had their traditional spaghetti dinner and attended a game show taping with Lambda Chi Alpha as fund raising projects. The pledge class president was stolen for a ransom of canned goods during Thanksgiving by TKE, which sparked a picture in the Los Angeles Times. Visitation of a rest home during the Christmas Holidays was also an event to remember.

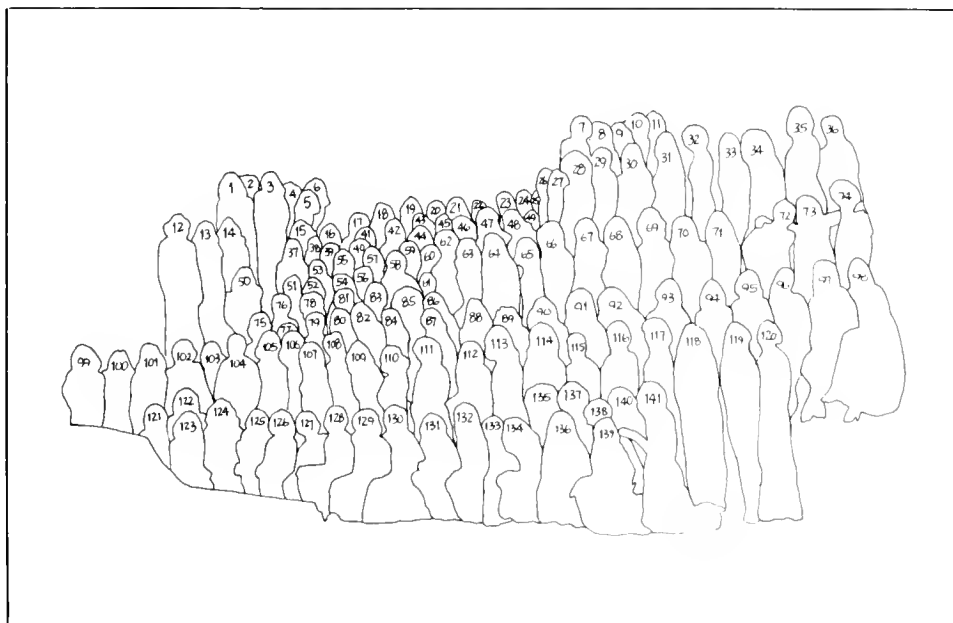

Winter quarter started right in, with initiation beginning Monday night of the first week. The weeks went by quickly: Greek Week with Kappa Sigma and the beginnings of Mardi Gras preparations with Phi Psi for the "Haunted House". Sheila Hoffman, a junior in our house co-chaired Greek Week. Social highlights of the quarter included the Winter Formal at the Sheraton and a "Phi"esta sponsored for all greek houses with Phi in their names.

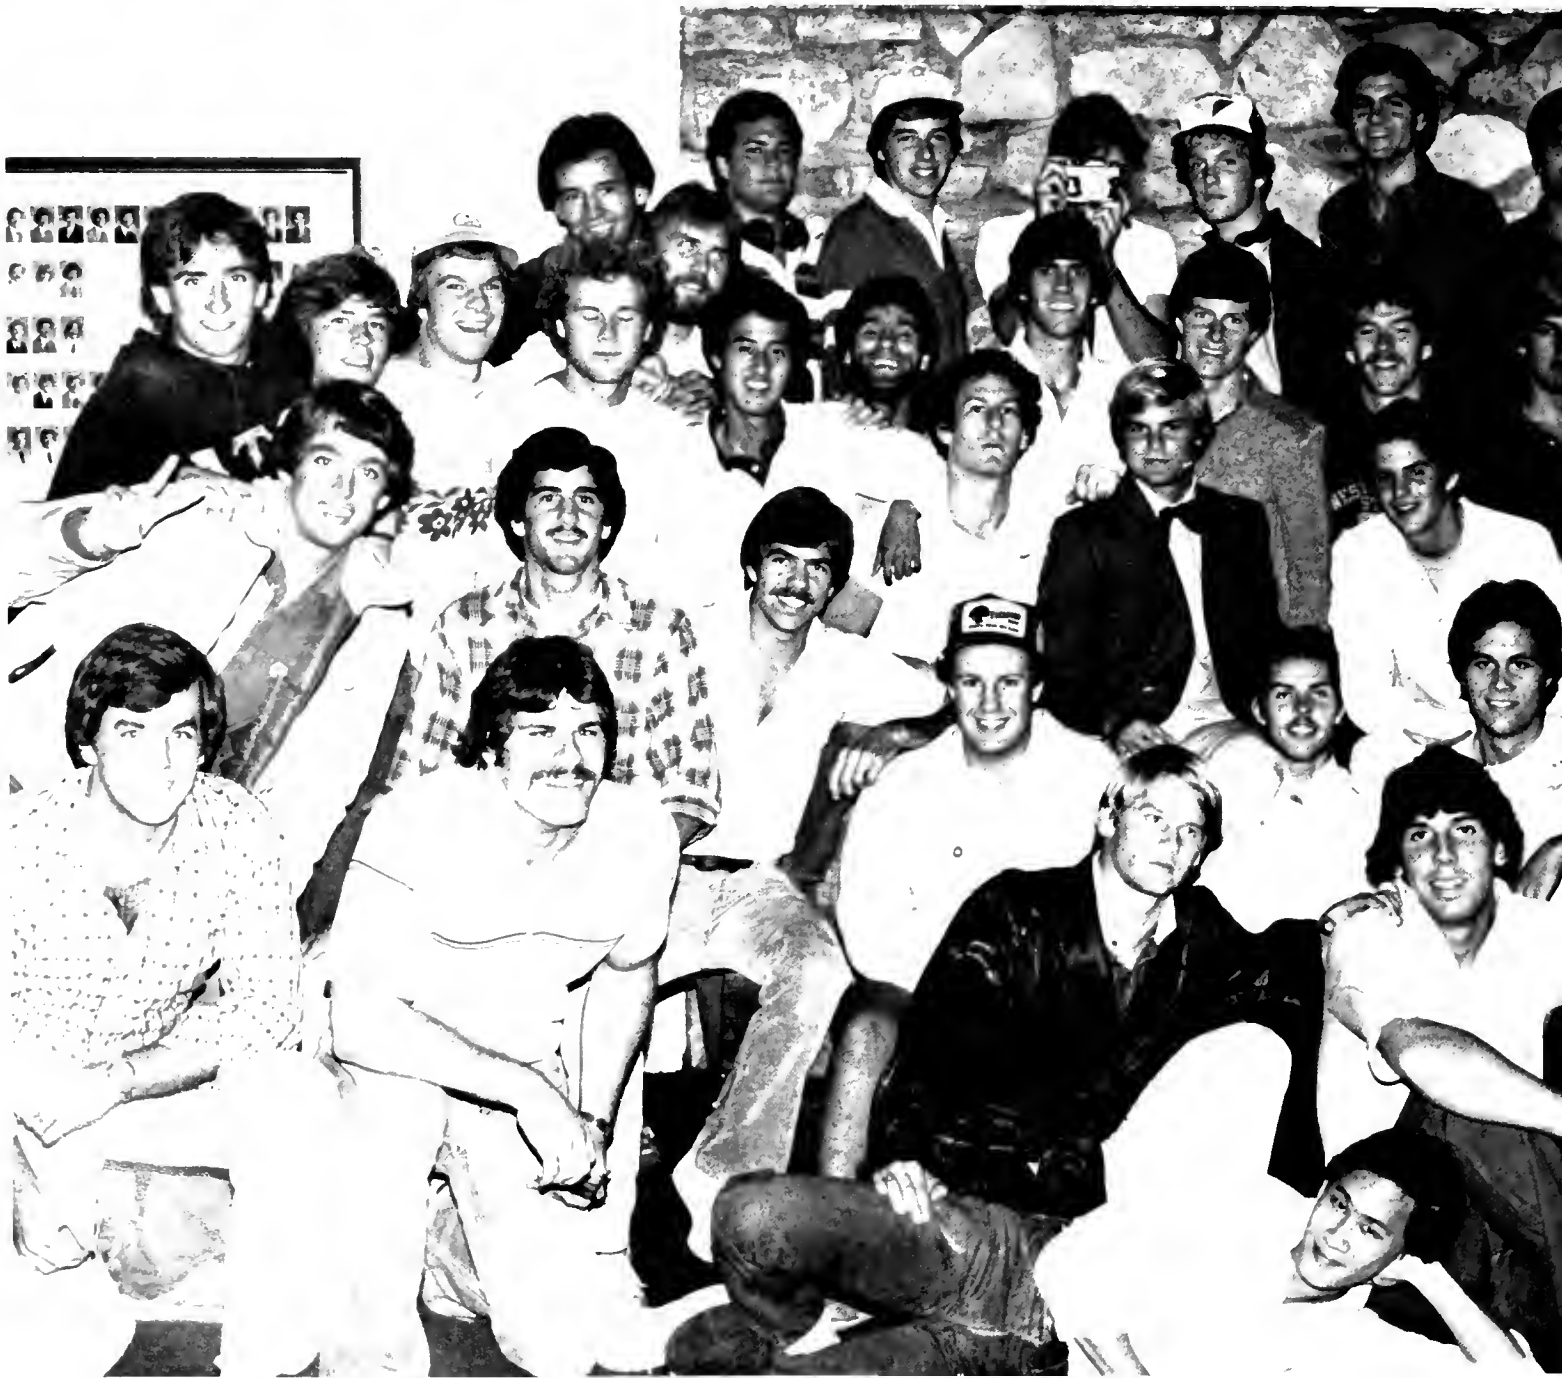

Spring quarter found Alpha Phi busy at work on Mardi Gras with Phi Psi. The Haunted House, one of the largest booths at Mardi Gras, took many man hours, yet resulted in a fund raiser for UniCamp and a lot of fun for both houses while we were at it. Spring Sing and a fund raising orchid sale for our philanthropy, the Heart Fund, also kept the Phi's plenty busy. The spring Luau Cruise topped off the school year, making a big splash at year's end!

ALPHA TAU OMEGA

Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity is a dynamic and diversified organization of individuals.

Although leaders academically, socially, and athletically, the members of Alpha Tau Omega have set themselves apart by their unique non-pledge structure. They have eliminated a cumbersome pledge program and in its place have formed a cohesive brotherhood of diverse backgrounds. All members are active and hold equal weight in the house. Personal motivation and pride in the house, not fines, hazing, and punishment keeps ATO on top.

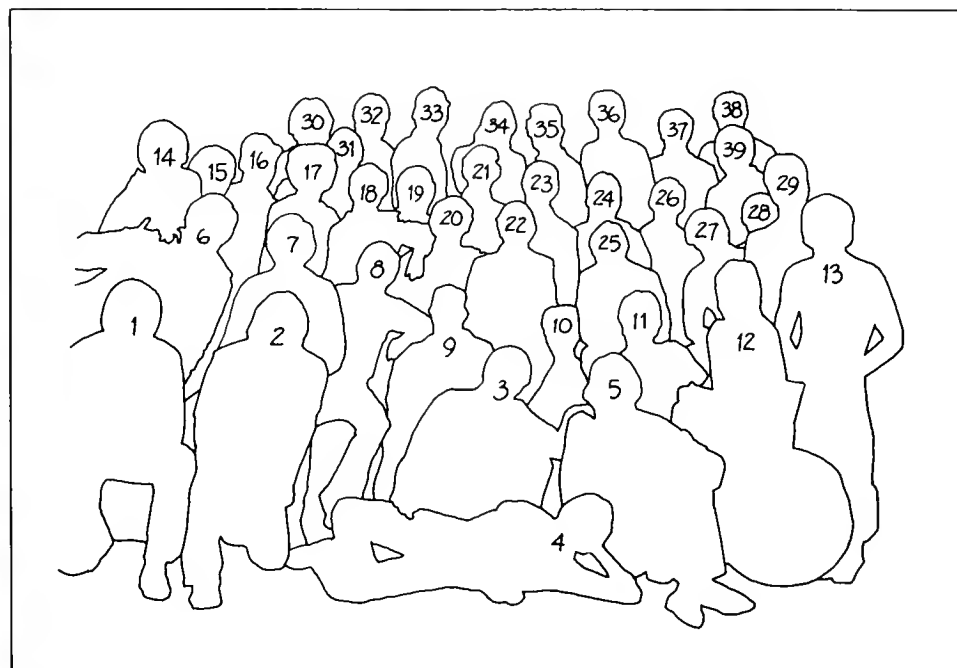

Their philosophy has proved highly effective as evidenced by the achievements of all the members. Several Brothers are active in student government, the Interfraternity council, various clubs, and intercollegiate sports. Academically ATO's belong to such coveted honor societies as Phi Eta Sigma, Phi Gamma Mu, Blue Key, and Phi Beta Kappa.

At the organizational level, ATO participates in such activities as Mardi Gras, Greek Week, and numerous social outings, such as trips to Palm Springs and Lake Tahoe.

Thus ATO offers an excellent environment to achieve scholastic, athletic, and social success as well as an environment in which to build lifelong friendships and memories.

CHI OMEGA

In 1926, Chi Omega built the first sorority house at UCLA. With a total of 169 chapters, Chi Omega is the largest sorority in the country. The main objective of the UCLA Chi-O chapter is to maintain a balance between scholarship, social activities and community service work. Chi Omega has one of the highest grade point averages on the row. Our fundraisers for the house philanthropy, the Special Olympics, are always very successful, and we were able to send thirty-three retarded children to the National Special Olympics in Washington D.C.

Chi Omega had a wonderful rush in the fall and we are more than thrilled with our 1981 Pledge Class. The pledges wasted no time getting acquainted with UCLA and to fraternity row. Their first venture was an exchange with the fall Sigma Nu Pledge Class, followed by a four way exchange with Sigma Chi, Kappa, and the Betas. Then, they branched out and had a Cowboy and Indian Party with the SAE's from across town at USC.

Dad's Day was tremendous as usual. This year we piled our dads into buses after serving them brunch and headed off to the Arizona State Football game. Later in the quarter we donned our "South of the Border" gear and went on over to ZBT for a fiesta complete with a mariachi band and a gigantic tostada dinner!

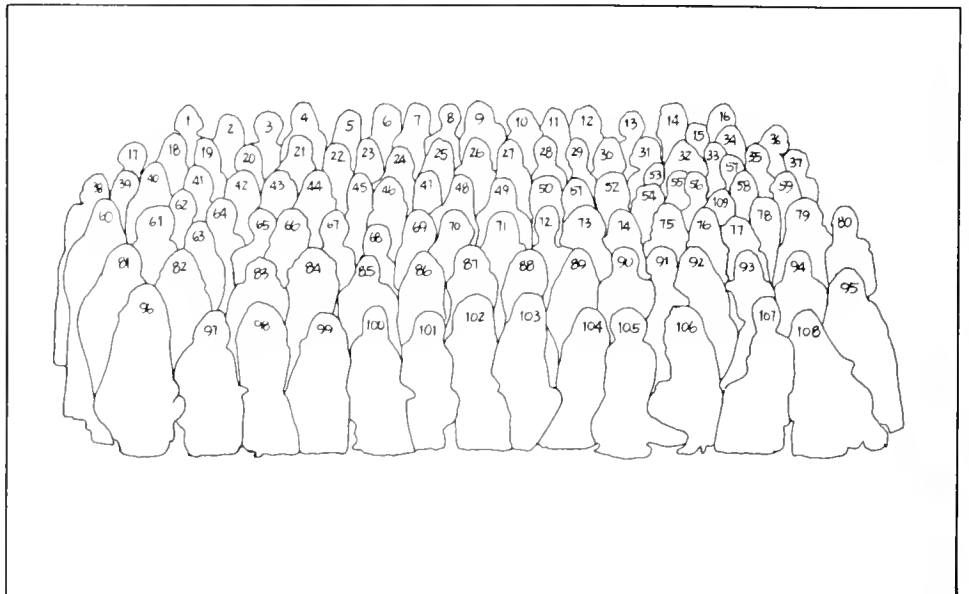

The first bash of winter quarter for the Chi-O's was a six way exchange with ATO, Kappa, Kappa Sigma, Theta, and Phi Psi. Dancing to the beach rock music of the "Ventures" we were oblivious to the pouring rain outside. The annual Chi-O Cake Cafe was again a success and helped finance our spring rush retreat in the Big Bear Mountains. One of the funnest events of the year was our "day at the races" with the Lambda Chi House. Other exciting events the Chi Omegas engaged in winter quarter include Inspiration and Initiation week for the 1981 Pledges, an ice skating party for the Dee Gee's, a Professor's night, the Pledge-Active which had a Chi-O Country Club theme, Greek Week with Theta Xi, and the favorite of all — the Winter Formal.

Spring Quarter we started a new tradition to complement Dad's Day, a Mom's Day. The Chi Omega voices were heard once again at the "Spring Sing" this year, and of course we were also involved in Mardi Gras. This year we helped ZBT build the Frisbee booth. The Spring Party was the traditional Luau. The Chi Omegas were sorry to see all of our graduating seniors leave us in June, but we wish them and the rest of the 1982 UCLA graduates the best of luck in all their endeavors in the future!

Delta Delta Delta, with numerous active members, brings a wide variety of characteristics to its chapter which was established in 1929. Tri Deltas are involved on campus as well as in the house. Many of our members represent UCLA in Bruin Belles and also hold responsible positions within that organization. Some members work for Campus Events and the Daily Bruin. One Tri Delt also represents UCLA with much spirit as a cheerleader.

Delta Delta Delta's calendar of events accumulates throughout the year. Annual events such as our popular Ice Cream/Brownie Social and our Spring Car Wash raise money for Tri Deltas' philanthropy, the Children's Hospital. Other social activities include Dad's Day, Mom's Day, Homecoming, Greek Week, Mardi Gras, and the festive Spring Sing, just to name a few.

Always strong in intramural sports, Tri Deltas have placed first the last three consecutive years.

Activities in the house are important. Whether it is studying with each other, sunning, or skiing at Mammoth, Tri Delt activities bring special unity to the chapter. Both scholastic and social activities brought a year of growth, learning, and fun—all of which are essential for the short and unforgettable years of college.

DELTA GAMMA

Nearly one hundred years ago, the first Delta Gamma chapter was organized when three young women at the Louis School in Oxford Mississippi found themselves unable to return home for the Christmas holidays. Today, Delta Gamma is recognized as one of the nation's top sororities and represents friendship, scholarship and community service for young women all over the country.

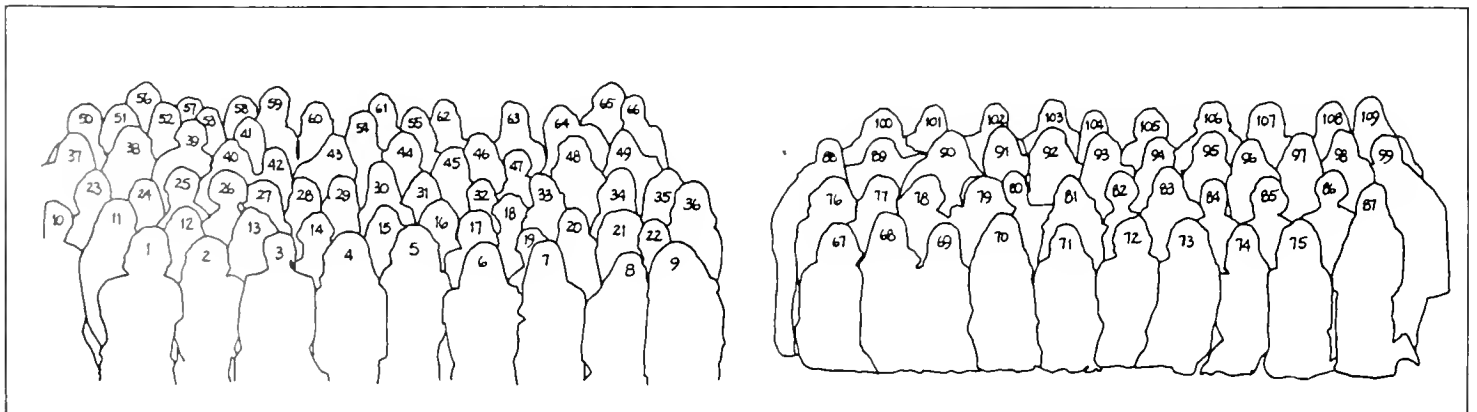

In 1929, Alpha-Sigma chapter was established at UCLA on its property at 652 Hilgard—a house designed by the famous Frank Lloyd Wright. The UCLA

"Dee Gees" have been active in many campus programs. After a very enjoyable and successful Fall Rush, they participated in UCLA's Homecoming with a float made with Sigma Chi. Winter quarter included Greek Week with the Lambda Chis, while the Delta Gamma intramural football team fought to defend last year's sorority championship. Spring brought another fun Mardi Gras project with Theta Xi Fraternity, and Spring Sing.

The Dee Gees are proud of the individuality and many accomplishments of their members. Several were scholarship winners this year or were members of honors programs in their departments. Three girls were actresses in major network television programs, and three others had represented California as beauty pageant winners. This year's Sigma Chi Sweetheart was also a Delta Gamma.

Delta Gamma is the major supporter of the Blind Children's Center in Los Angeles—the most outstanding facility of its kind on the West Coast. Past fundraisers have included the fun and popular "Anchor Splash," a swimming competition between various campus teams.

"Anchor Man" Kevin Baldridge of Sigma Chi was elected at last year's "Splash" to serve as Delta Gamma's favorite male Sweetheart.

DELTA SIGMA PHI

Delta Sigma Phi has enjoyed fifty-five years of brotherhood at UCLA and has had a long standing tradition in education, sports, Student Government and IFC. The brothers believe that the foundation of our house is centered around friendship and brotherhood.

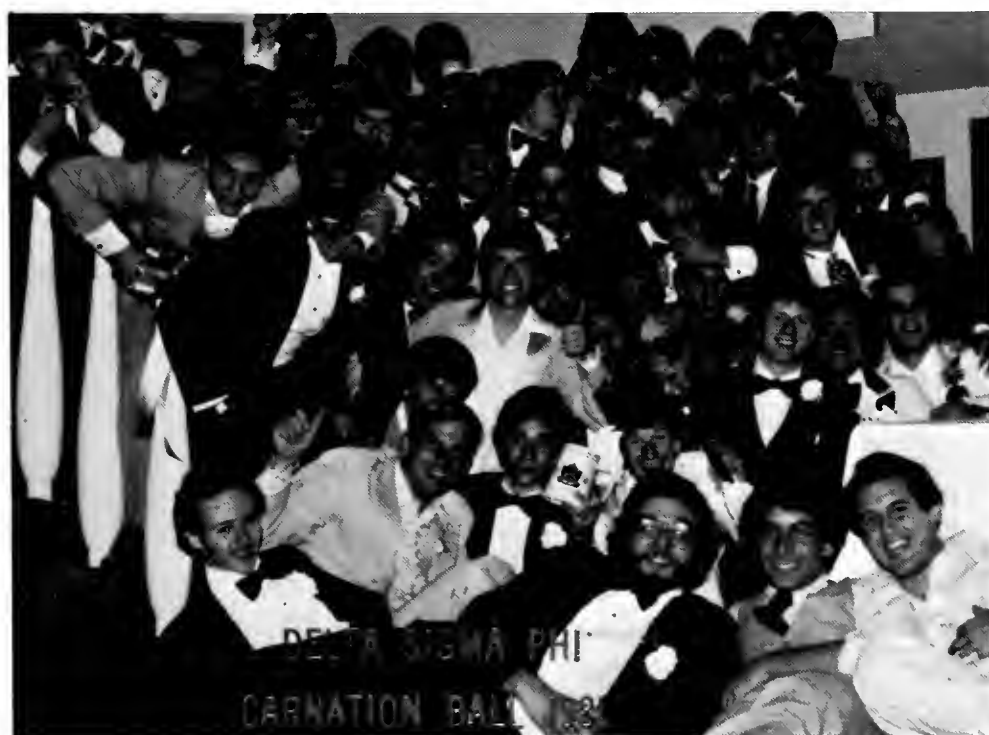

Of course, education is the prime reason for the existence of our fraternity, so Delta Sig helps each of its members to gain the most possible from their college education. Our high standards have been achieved through the use of our "Positive Scholarship Program," whereby the academic progress of each pledge and active is watched closely by the pledgemaster and scholarship director, respectively. Moreover, our chapter house maintains an atmosphere which is comfortable for and conducive to studying.

One of the most enjoyable features of Delta Sig is the quality of our social program. Some of the more traditional functions are the Lake Tahoe Casino night, the formal Carnatoin Ball, and the Tahitian Sailor's Ball. Much of our program is focused on the women of sorority row and we have become extremely proud of our accomplishments in Homecoming, Greek Week, and Mardi Gras.

DELTA TAU DELTA

We are a family of college men bound together in the fraternal bond of Delta Tau Delta. Whether it be sports, parties, exchanges, serenades, or beer chugs, you'll always find the Delts ready and waiting. Since we were re-chartered in 1976, DTD has evolved into one of the more respected and progressive fraternities on the row. In just this past year we have doubled our membership and plan on continuing our growth at an unrelenting pace.

Pride is an important part of being a Delt; it is necessary in order to have confidence and faith in one's self. Ever since our re-charter, at every stage in our development, we have always had pride in our house, enabling us to do our utmost to improve the house. Thus, each year we start out one step higher and one step closer to perfection. THE DELTS—A FAMILY OF PRIDE.

GAMMA PHI BETA

Gamma Phi Beta Sorority was founded November 14, 1874 at Syracuse University and came to UCLA in 1924. Gamma Phis regularly participate in many campus activities including Bruin Belles, Alumni Scholars, Greek Week, Spring Sing, Women's Glee, Women's Soccer, A.F.R.O.T.C., Peer Health Counseling, Theatrical Productions, UCLA Band, Women's Tennis, and little sisters at many different houses.

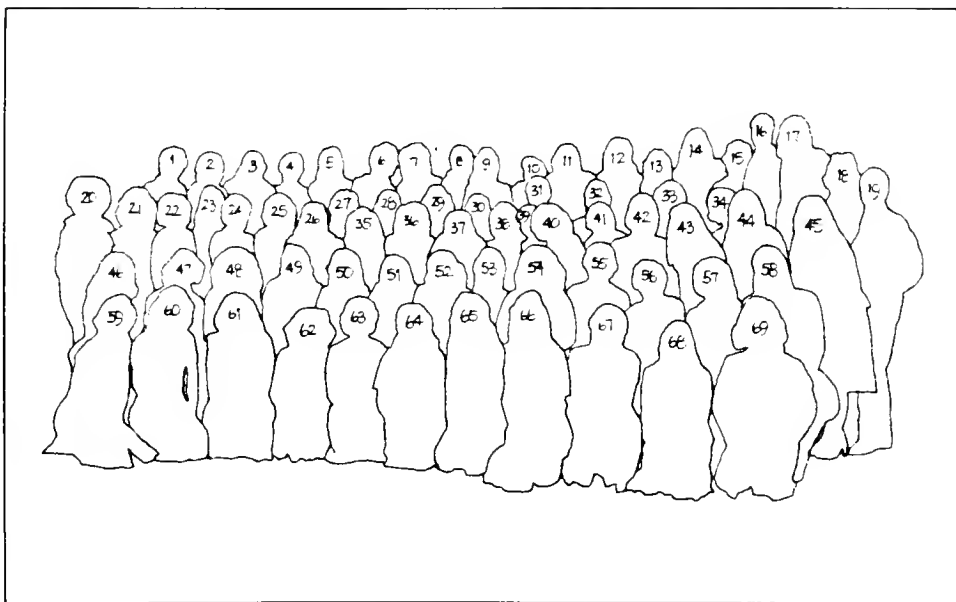

The Gammi Phi social calendar marked such exciting events as Pledge Presents, the Pledge/Active Party, "Fantasize with Gamma Phi," The Crescent Ball, Spring Luau, Parents Day, a Mother/Daughter Luncheon, and a Father/Daughter Baseball Day.

What Gamma Phi Beta means to all her members is as different as each individual. Through such activities as Rush, candle passings, singing, late night pizza runs, and making friends for life, we take pride in ourselves as we learn how to deal with life and develop our potential.

Mrs. Francis M. Corby came to Gamma Phi in the fall of 1980 after being a long time resident of Bel Air. She received her R.N. degree from St. Elizabeth's School of Nursing, Boston, and has worked as head nurse at Stanford University Hospital. Mrs. Corby has done extensive world traveling and through her strong efforts has made Gamma Phi Beta a happier and safer place to call home.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

To most people, we are known as "THETA." To ourselves, we are nearly 200 young women pursuing one of the most fulfilling courses college offers: Friendship. More than anything else, Theta means friendship.

What makes a Theta friendship so meaningful is its richness. Ours is a diverse house. Whether musical, mathematical, athletic or political—talent seems to fill our home. Gathering this diversity under the guise of "Theta" not only gives our sorority national recognition, but it gives each of us a wealth of fascinating people with whom to build lasting friendships. It is not a contradiction to say that our diversity binds us together.

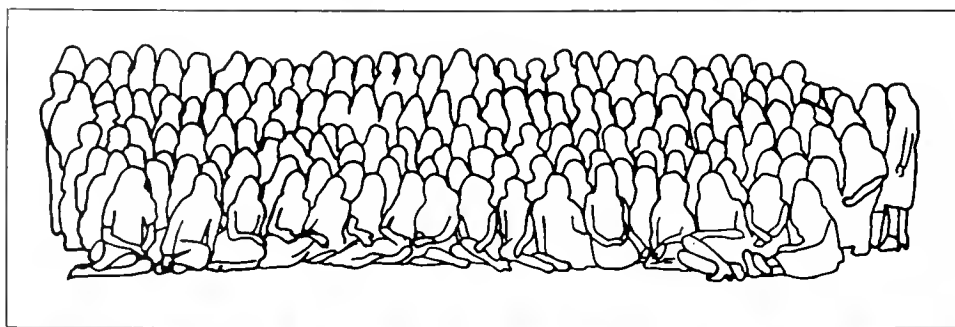

UCLA's chapter of Kappa Alpha Theta is nationally recognized as a superior house. Why? Because we manage, and even more, we take advantage of our enormous size. We carefully sustain our unity in spirit by assuring every person's involvement. Each member has an individual role in the chapter's organization and each role plays a significant part in the chapter's success. We are many women working individually for a common, rewarding end.

We are proud to be a part of Kappa Alpha Theta. This pride encourages us to share the talents we bring to the house and to appreciate the vast diversity that we represent in unity. Kappa Alpha Theta is not merely a house, it is our home.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA

Halfway up Hilgard, right at the heart of the row is Kappa Kappa Gamma. Kappa is the route by which the student number is erased and UCLA is shrunk to a manageable size. One hundred and seventy strong, Kappa started the year off with a beach party at Temescal Canyon. Directed towards firing the house up for rush, the barbeque definitely served its purpose as it ushered in a great rush and a fantastic pledge class of fifty-three.

Fall quarter was filled with Dad's Day where Kappa dads filled the coliseum as they aided their daughters in cheering the Bruins to victory. Later in the quarter, the girls walked the plank at the Fall Theme Party, "Pirates of Kappa." Combining their float-making talents with Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Kappa celebrated Homecoming in the grand traditional way.

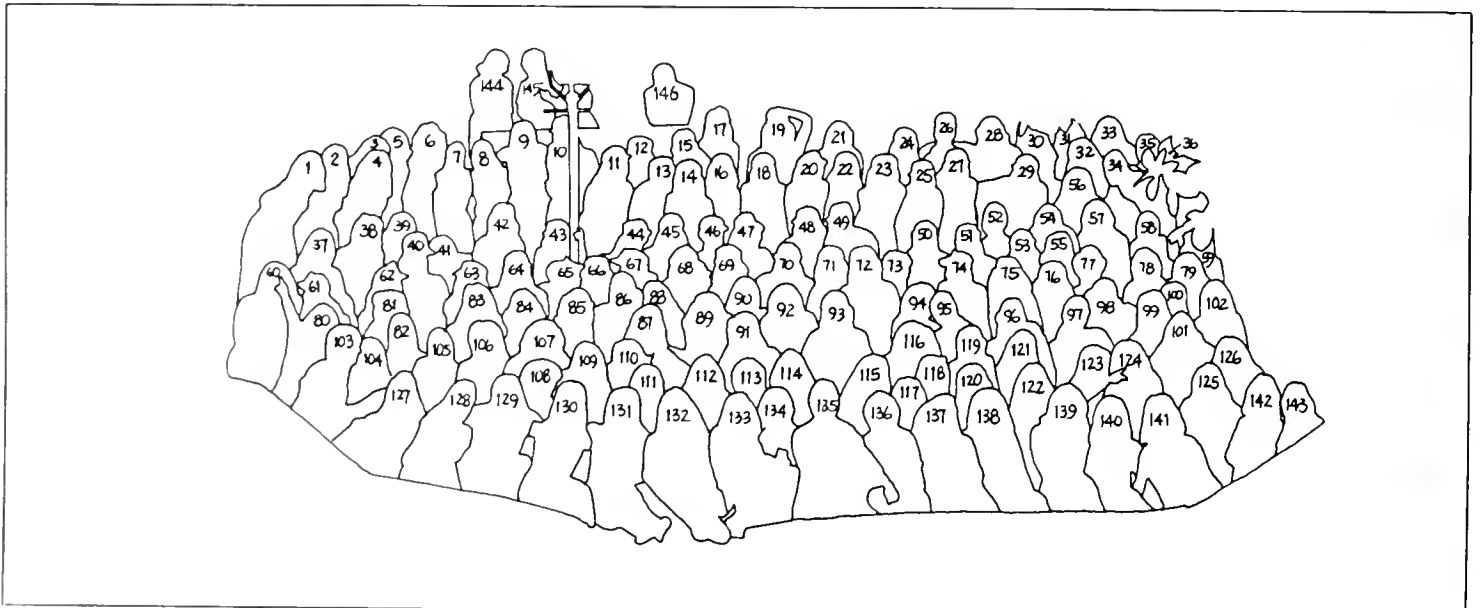

Winter quarter meant worthwhile philanthropic work as the Kappas became involved in "Project Mac," a program which comes to the aid of abused children. The Kappas also concerned themselves with the "Rose McGill Foundation," an organization that provides assistance to disabled alumni. Winter also brought the initiating of our amazing pledges in celebration of the end of pledgeship.

Warm weather, Greek Week, rushworkshops and getting wild on the patio—the Kappas came out of winter's hibernation, anxious to indulge in spring quarter. Kappa moms were "Queen for the Day" at a special brunch. Mardi Gras was a "fantastic" experience as they teamed up with Lambda Chi Alpha to present the infamous "Fun House." The Spring Formal was a classy way to end the fabulous year.

Kappa Sigma, the atypical fraternity. This year was stoked; so stoked we were jazzed; so jazzed we were psyched; so psyched we were totally rad', but more than rad', we were humbly awesome. # LAMBDA CHI ALPHA Summer's end saw the bronzed sungods of Lambda Chi Alpha return to school to face an intense year of partying, studying, and other assorted activities under the guiding hand of President Scott Sellens. Also returning for her 16th record-breaking year in the Lambda Chi kitchen was beloved cook Florida Taylor and her co-conspirator John. Kicking off the year in outstanding style was a successful Fall Rush that netted 18 new members, raising Lambda Chi's membership to an all-time high of more than 115 brothers.

Rollicking parties included a four-way Presents Bash with the Thetas, Pi Phis and SAEs, a wild "Nerd Party" with the Kappas—complete with South campus squids and pencil geeks, and the exotic "Amazon Jam" escapade in Fall. Also packing the peerless social calendar at Lambda Chi was the Little Sister "Crescent Classic 'Golf' Tournament," a "Day at the Races" with the Chi Omegas, the annual Dee Gee "100 Club" madness, as well as the superlative Winter Crescent Formal at the posh Santa Barbara Biltmore.

1981-82 was also a banner year for campus involvement, including a Homecoming Float with the Tri-Delts, Greek Week with the Dee Gees, Spring Sing, and of course, Mardi Gras' flagship attraction—the award-winning "Fun House" presented with the Kappa Kappa Gammas. Keeping the House well represented in campus activities was UC Student Regent David Neuman, SLC Campus Events Commissioner Kevin Cassidy, AS-UCLA Speakers Program Director Daniel Godwin, UniCamp Board of Directors member Steven Sann, as well as a flood of other Lambda Chis involved in Blue Key, Ski Club, IFC, and as members of various Bruin intercollegiate teams.

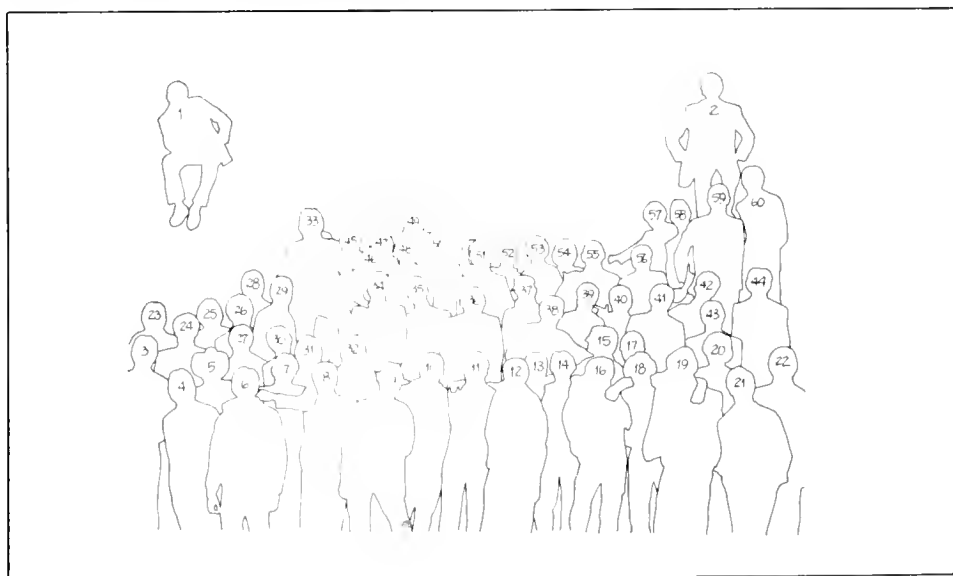

As if all that wasn't enough to keep the Lambda Chis tirelessly busy, there was the annual "Big Trip" up to Stanford, a Little Sister Ski Weekender, the infamous "Annex Parties," and even a pinning or two or three. Once again in Intramural Sports competition, the Lambda Chis were a House to reckon with, fielding especially strong teams in soccer, water polo, and softball as well as IFC's championship volleyball squad.

The year was topped off in grand style with the hottest ticket in town—the outrageous Second Annual "Playboy Celebrity Ball" as only Lambda Chi Alpha could pull off. Amazingly, some Lambda Chis even managed to earn some grades during the year, with a record number of more than 35 brothers graduating, including many headed for medical school, dental school, law school and into business. Suddenly for many, the fleeting world of frantic partying, Bratskellar Happy Hours, and other assorted fraternal fare comes to a screeching halt. Oh, well, as they say, "Stop the World, I want to get off!"

LAMBDA PHI EPSILON

Lambda Phi Epsilon Fraternity entered the 1981-1982 academic year with twice as many members as our previous establishing year, due to a great rush program. Having endured the trials of that first year of existence with a certain amount of success, the goal in this, our second year, was to strive to become an established and known member of UCLA and the local community.

Even though we are, by membership, an Asian Fraternity, we as Lambdas like to stress that we are a service organization which seeks to interact with the entire campus population. Our calendar was filled with exchanges, fundraisers, and service projects which gave us publicity that was essential to our growth. We also had teams in intramural sports such as football and basketball. Our football team advanced to the quarter-finals in the C league playoffs before losing to the eventual champions.

All of these activities served to strengthen our ties with each other and molded us into a single unit. We have become a close knit group whose members can not be afraid of themselves. All the Lambdas are greatly pleased with our rapid rise from obscurity in such a short time-span. We also pride ourselves in knowing that we are in the process of setting a tradition instead of following one. We look forward to the greater events in the future.

KAPPA ALPHA PSI

Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity is one of the largest black organizations in America. We have chapters in every state as well as in Germany and the Bahamas. Our organization is a fraternity in the true sense of the word. We are built on strong brotherhood and achievement in every aspect of human endeavor. Our objectives are to reach within the black community and educate the young leaders of tomorrow, the leaders of today and those of yesterday with respect to political and social sanctions which affect the black race and culture.

Upsilon Chapter of Kappa Alpha Psi is a city-wide chapter with a membership of sixty. There are currently ten members in our chapter—Arthur Akers, Everette Evans, Mario Holley, Walter Lang, Blanchard Montgomery, Royce Simon, Anthony Tate, Kourt Williams, Vincent Harris, and Kevin Kinsey. The fact that the numbers are less than other greek letter organizations does not stop Kappa Alpha Psi from contributing significantly to campus and community functions.

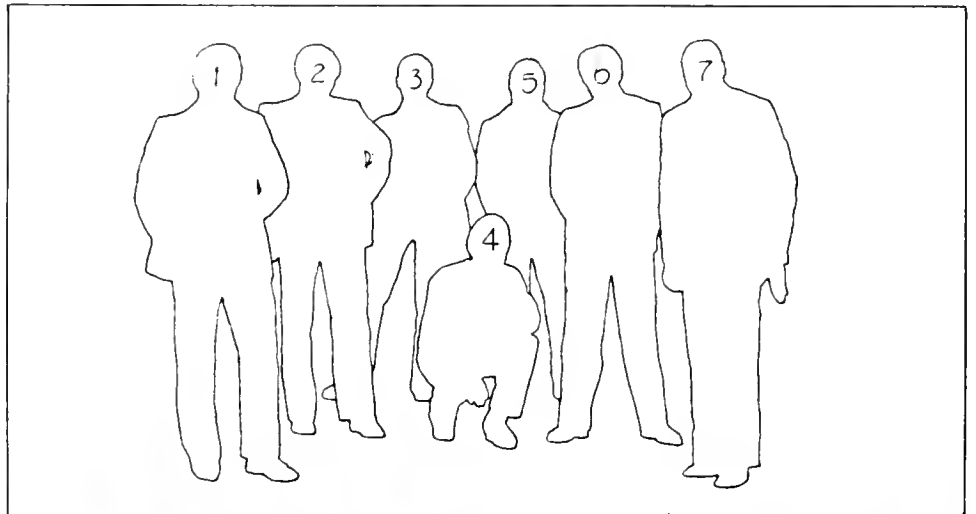

Year in and year out, members of Kappa Alpha Psi participate in numerous and diversified extracurricular and scholarly activities on UCLA's campus.

We are not a club, we are a corporation. Our members are men who strive for the highest goals at all times, have within themselves the intestinal fortitude to keep fighting when the chips are down and to reciprocate the knowledge which we have acquired to those who are less knowledgeable. We are an organization that desires growth, however, we will not overlook our objectives in order to expand. Kappa Alpha Psi is for those who possess intelligence, character, strength and an unquenchable appetite to achieve.

PHI KAPPA TAU

In the second year of re-establishment at UCLA, Phi Kappa Tau proved itself in every way. On campus, Phi Tau pins could be seen in the Interfraternity Council, the Mardi Gras Committee, Greek Week Committee, Rally Committee, the Pre-Law Society, and the Undergraduate History Association. Many of the brothers were put to work at ASUCLA, while one of the bros was a campus chaperone.

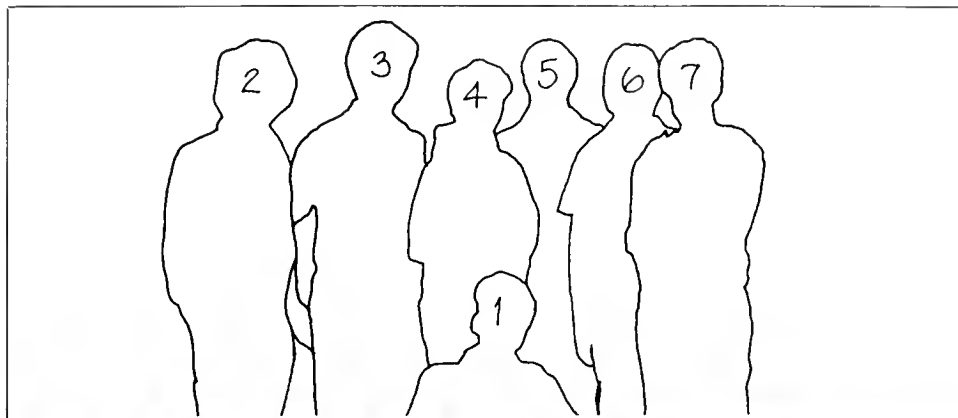

Athletically, Phi Tau began to stir discontent in the fraternity system, as the colony's athletic program began to take shape. Scholastically, the brothers performed very well, with Brother Jeff Marshall being accepted into Tau Beta Pi, the engineering honorary. Socially, the Phi Taus dared to do the impossible—and did well at it.

Fall was marked by a series of three consecutive raids, Little Sister parties, and various "get-togethers". Winter Quarter meant our voices had to be taken out of storage, and led by our fearless (and tone deaf) leader,

Larry Meyers, we Phi Taus sang sweet melodies and soft harmonies, bringing sorority row a luscious lullaby which will always remain on the lips of those who heard. After a great Winter theme party, we all thawed out for finals, after which Spring Quarter appeared. With that, we added just a tad more raids, serenades, and of course, our first annual Red Carnation Ball. And who can forget Homecoming, Greek Week, U-Sing, and the Phi Tau Five Tau? Finally, the brotherhood and fellowship of Phi Kappa Tau was felt in a way that helped instill pride in our colony and our fraternity. After a year such as this, we can truthfully say that the men of Phi Kappa Tau are truly on their way!

PHI DELTA THETA

Phi Delta Theta prides itself in being one of the most diverse Fraternities at UCLA. We hold no "stereotype" image here. We're young, and we're growing.

Letting the good times roll is big with us here at Phi Delta Theta. Getting together for theme parties, sorority exchanges, mountain retreats, and sporting events are just a few of the good times we share.

We actively participate in intramural sports and other campus activities and events. We have won awards for having the most profitable booth in our category at Mardi Gras for the past few years.

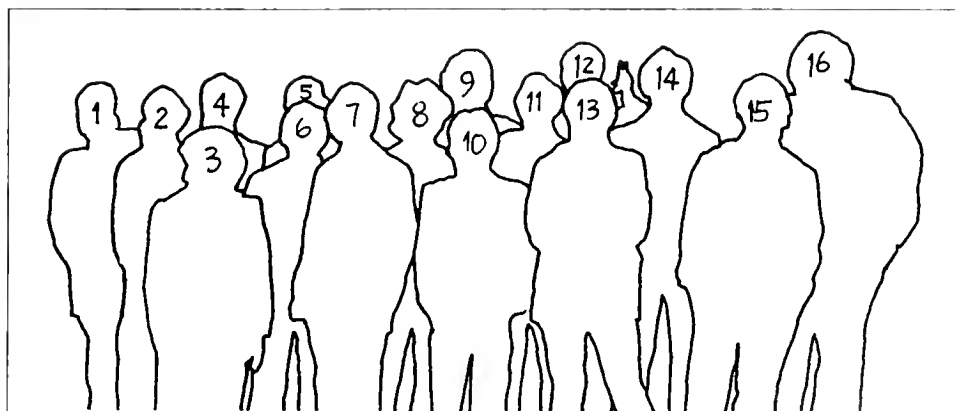

Founded in 1848, Phi Delta Theta has grown into the third largest international Fraternity with nearly 150 chapters and over 140,000 initiates. Phi Delta Theta alumni have distinguished themselves in all walks of life, including past President of the United States Benjamin Harrison, first man on the moon Neil A. Armstrong, baseball great Lou Gehrig, actor Bill Bixby, President of the Xerox Corporation C. Peter McCollough, and Burger King founder Jim McLamore, to name a few.

R-RING

FOR US.

The Lambda Alpha Chapter, one of 117 chapters of Phi Gamma Delta, has expanded to become involved in many aspects of UCLA life—high scholarship, student government, community service, an ever progressing intramurals program, plus better and wilder social functions. But now after fifty years of expansion outward, we're beginning to expand upward with the addition of our new house, enlarging capacity from 24 to 50.

Our social programs are designed to be unique—the Annual Purple Garter Affair (last year held at the Beverly-Wilshire Hotel), the Annual Fiji Islander (last year held at the Colorado River), the Hairy Buffalo, the Bago to Berkeley Trip, the Pig Dinner, the All-Fiji Ski Trip during the Christmas break, and the Annual Bikeathon for Ataxia (our yearly large scale community service event).

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Most important is scholarship, so we emphasize "Scholarship First!" Since scholarship is stressed heavily, we have created an academic program with the "Fiji" graduate brothers and have established a chapter library to assist the undergraduates.

Those who have chosen "Fiji" regard the house as a home to where each can bring his sorrows, pleasures, friends and ideas. Thus, Phi Gamma Delta teaches something that textbooks cannot teach: brotherhood, helping, teaching, and having fun together. Furthermore, our brotherhood extends to the graduates showing that "Phi Gamma Delta is not for college days alone."

PHI

Over 130 years ago, the Philomathean Society was founded at Wesleyan College, Macon, Georgia. Now known as Phi Mu, it is the second oldest and one of the largest secret organizations for women. 1981 marked the recolonization of its Eta Delta Chapter here at UCLA. The new Phi Mus came from all over the country, representing every college major and including every personality type. The absence of actives gave these new members the unique opportunity of building a house the way they wanted to, with each young woman bringing to Phi Mu her expectations and hopes of what Phi Mu would mean to her.

Phi Mu means many things to many people. To the provisional member, or Phi, Phi Mu means being accepted into a new circle of friendship, an instant social life, a second family. To the initiated member, Phi Mu means a place to find support and assistance, an opportunity for shaping one's life, showing one's leadership, and sharing one's ideas. Phi Mu means loving and laughing, caring and crying, playing and planning, singing and studying. Phi Mu means fantastic formals, exciting exchanges, super serenades, radical raids, perfect parties, and relaxing retreats.

Phi Mu means involvement in student government, ASUCLA, honor societies, Band, blood drives, Bruin Belles, and Southern Campus. Phi Mu means captivating conversation, soothing silence, winning work, fascinating fun, and invigorating intramurals. Phi Mu means doing one's best, learning more than all the rest, growing day by day, finding love along the way. Phi Mu means the freedom to be one's self and the courage to succeed. Phi Mu means scholastic, social, cultural, philanthropic, and spiritual challenges. Phi Mu means love, honor, and truth. Phi Mu means everything that's worth anything. Phi Mu means... THE BEST!

PI BETA PHI

The symbol of Pi Phi is the arrow, and at UCLA's Chapter, these arrows point in many directions. Pi Phi prides itself on being a house filled with diversity and individuality. Women ranging from athletes to intellectuals come together to share their goals and dreams through the traditions of Pi Phi. Many traditions date back to 1867 when Pi Beta Phi was first founded at Monmouth College, Illinois. Some of these traditions include Pi Phi's main philanthropy—Arrowcraft School of Art, Pi Phi's annual Pie Sale, candle passings, and special ceremonies.

Football games with dads, Floatbuilding, Palms Springs Retreats, Mardi Gras, and Theme Parties are just some of the many activities that bring Pi Phi's together. A highlight of these activities was the Winter

Pi Phi "Crush" Party, featuring the naming of Pi Phi's "Crush King" Sweetheart, Nicholas Frederick of Lambda Chi. But even with this busy year-long schedule, nothing stopped Pi Beta Phi from achieving the highest GPA on sorority row. Perhaps the biggest tradition of them all is the sharing of all that Pi Phi spirit!

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Sigma Alpha Epsilon has been part of the UCLA Greek system since this campus opened in 1929. Since our chapter's founding over fifty years ago, our members have developed a strong tradition of brotherhood which has been perpetuated to those of us who are current actives in school. This fraternal devotion can be seen in the unrivaled support of our alumni organization, both financially and in an advisory capacity. Over the years many of California Delta's brothers have gone on to become notable successes outside of college. Famed actor Lloyd Bridges and his son Beau and many other famous SAE's are still loyal brothers even though their days at UCLA are over.

Among our active membership, we take pride in what we feel is diversity in its best form. Our brothers realize the importance of academic pursuits, as evidenced by our house GPA—one of the best on the row. Our social calendar shows that we're not afraid to have a good time either. SAE parties traditionally roar late into the night, long after the neighboring houses have turned out their lights. This is especially true of our big party of the year, Paddy

Our brothers are especially proud of our athletic achievements. SAE's presence is felt in nine intercollegiate sports at UCLA, through the efforts of our 35 varsity athletes. Double Olympic Gold medalist and nine-time NCAA swimming champion Brian Goodell is the most reknown of these brothers. Our influence in intercollegiate athletics is rivaled only by our success in intramural sports. For five of the last six years we have captured the coveted Intramural Trophy, awarded to the fraternity who is most successful in all sports over the course of the year.

SIGMA CHI

The Delta Eta Chapter of the Sigma Chi Fraternity at UCLA has continuously been honored as one of the top fraternities in the United States. Along with many national honors, Delta Eta has built a solid reputation as one of the most outstanding houses on the row. Much of this success results from the wide diversity of our fraternity members as well as a strong brotherhood.

Scholastically, the overall house GPA rates consistently above the university men's average, with the past winter pledge class posting near perfect marks. An extensive social calendar is highlighted by our annual Shipwreck Party and the extravagant Sweetheart Ball. Athletically, Sigma Chi perennially finishes among the top three houses in the IFC sports program, always striving for that number one standing.

With the active chapter of nearly 100 members and a Fall Rush that produced a very qualified pledge class, Sigma Chi seems assured of its continued success as one of UCLA's top fraternities.

SIGMA DELTA TAU

Only a few words can express some of the feelings that the girls of Sigma Delta Tau feel for each other. SDT is a home away from home—with love and friendship needed for emotional growth and stability. Being in a sorority means growing and maturing in an environment that returns love, friendships, and fond memories of those fleeting moments of youth.

SDT is a place where we belong, where we can feel comfortable, where we can laugh, where we can cry, where we can grow, and where we can learn. SDT is that place where we want to be.

With that freedom to express ourselves and to be accepted as we are, the girls of SDT are thankful for those givings—special givings. This giving and taking expresses SDT to us.

SIGMA KAPPA

During the past year, Sigma Kappa has enjoyed involvement in social, athletic, academic, and on-campus activities. The diversity of our house provided a ready supply of talent to supply a wide variety of events. Intramural sports rated high on our list of favorites, with girls on teams ranging from volleyball to football. Sigma moms and dads enjoyed an afternoon at the theater and a day of football fun with their daughters.

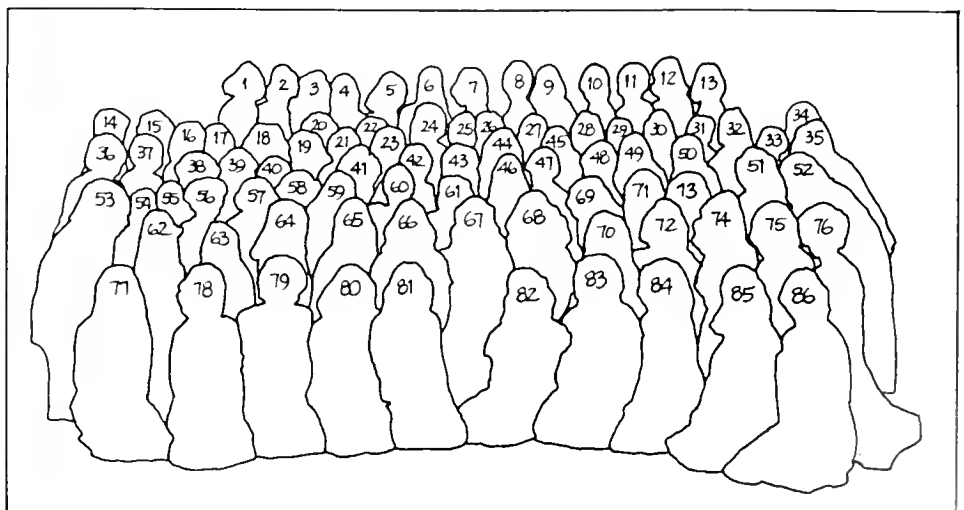

Our social calendar was filled with late night raids, exchanges, serenades and elegant formals. We will not soon forget our Violet Ball held at the luxurious Huntington Sheraton nor our Presents party at the Beverly Wishire.

Sigma Kappa's can be found in many events on campus: the Daily Bruin, KLA radio, Bruin Belles, Student Government, and theater just to name a few.

Our most exciting events of the year include Homecoming, Greek Week, and Mardi Gras. We had to work hard (well most of the time!), but the fun of working was well worth the effort. To wind up the year, we grabbed our swimsuits and beach towels and headed for Catalina. Studying, papers, and midterms were forgotten as we enjoyed a weekend of sunshine, swimming, and sailing.

SIGMA NU

Sigma Nu Fraternity, located at 601 Gayley Avenue, has consistently been ranked as a top fraternity on the UCLA campus. The chapter was granted its charter in 1931. Since that time the house has been dedicated to foster an atmosphere that is conducive to the maintenance of rich brotherhood.

Not only does Sigma Nu excel in the area of brotherhood but it also does in different areas that make it a "top" house. Included in this category are its prowess in I.M. Athletics, its uncomparable social calendar, and its beautiful little sisters.

Above all, the fraternity, as a whole, is dedicated to the ideals of love, truth and honor. The members pursue these in their own diversified ways. Together with a dedicated alumni, the house is expected to prosper and excel in the years to come

Dear Mom,
This year has been great here at UCLA! Most of the quarter was spent studying . . . alcohols' effect on the human brain. The brothers used the calm of dead week to buy their books and then crammed for the finals. Seniors and juniors made grades the usual way, while the underclassmen studied. I scored a 1.06 grade point average—the highest in the house since our twenty-five Phi Beta Kappas graduated. Well, I've decided to attend class today but I'll see you this summer.

Love, your son,
Brock McDonald

TAU KAPPA EPSILON

Tau Kappa Epsilon is the largest fraternity in the nation. Because we are the largest and one of the oldest, our national organization ranks supreme. Our alumni include many famous individuals, including President Ronald Reagan, Conrad Hilton, and Terry Bradshaw.

For college students, participation in athletics is a very beneficial and often necessary study break. We at TKE have had consistent success in the intramural sports program. In the last four years our teams have gone to the upper division in every sport. Athletics are an integral part of our fraternity, but success in the classroom is given top priority.

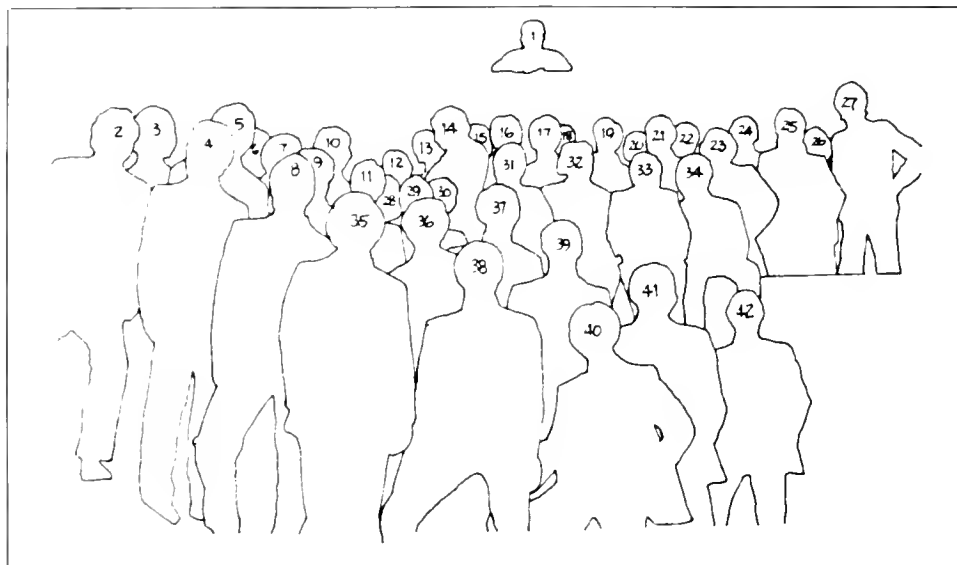

A well-rounded college education includes social as well as academic pursuits. The fraternity sponsors a number of theme parties during the school year. In the past, brothers and their dates have danced clothed in gangsters attire, and dressed as tough and ready pimps with their "ladies" at our traditional Pimp and Hooker Party. The highlight of the year comes with the elegant "Red Carnation Ball," in which tuxedos and evening gowns glide across the dance floor. In addition, our many exchanges with sororities give the brothers a great chance to party with the ladies in a casual and entertaining surrounding.

Our "Little Sister" program is also very popular and active in the fraternity. Whether it be a party out by our pool, a Dodger game, or one of their infamous early morning breakfasts or late night surprise parties, this little sister chapter of TKE is a big part of our fraternity.

Athletically, academically, and socially, Tau Kappa Epsilon is tops at UCLA. We believe our motto best describes our organization; "not the best because we're the biggest . . . but the biggest because we're the best!"

THETA DELTA CHI

Theta Delta Chi Fraternity at UCLA is a brotherhood founded on the principles of academics, athletics, and insanity. Our membership is comprised of some of the most unique individuals on the UCLA campus. As such, we pursue active terrorism and disobedience in manners distinctive from the common fraternity clones.

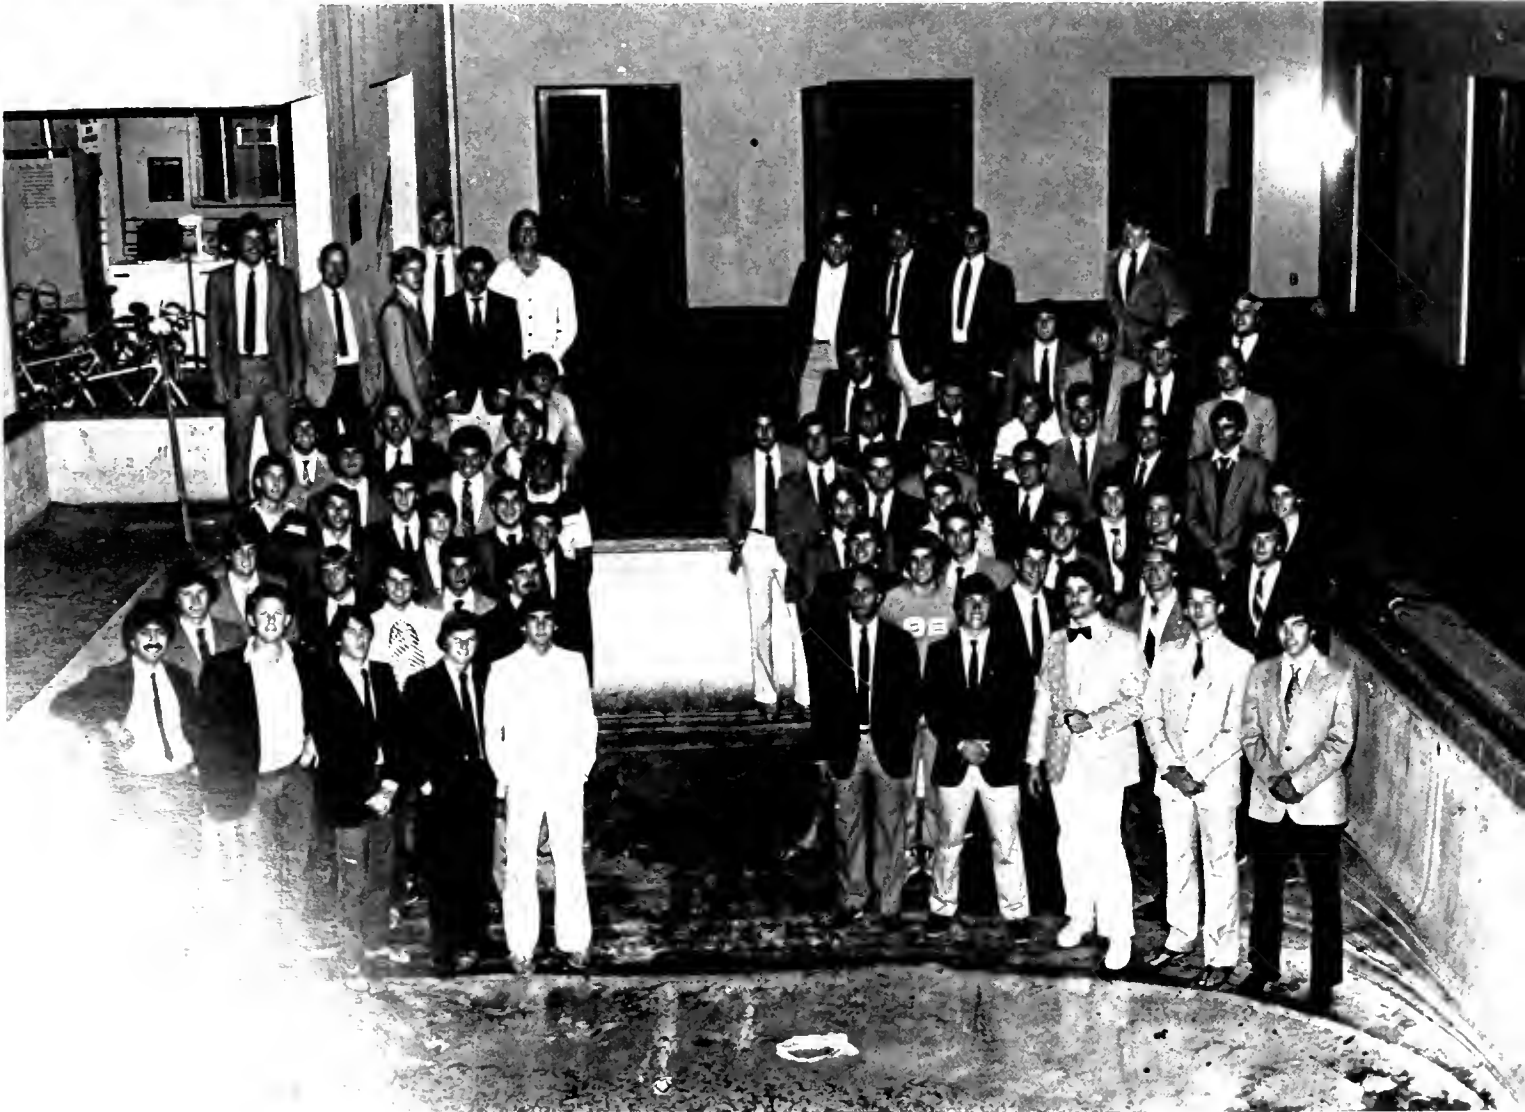

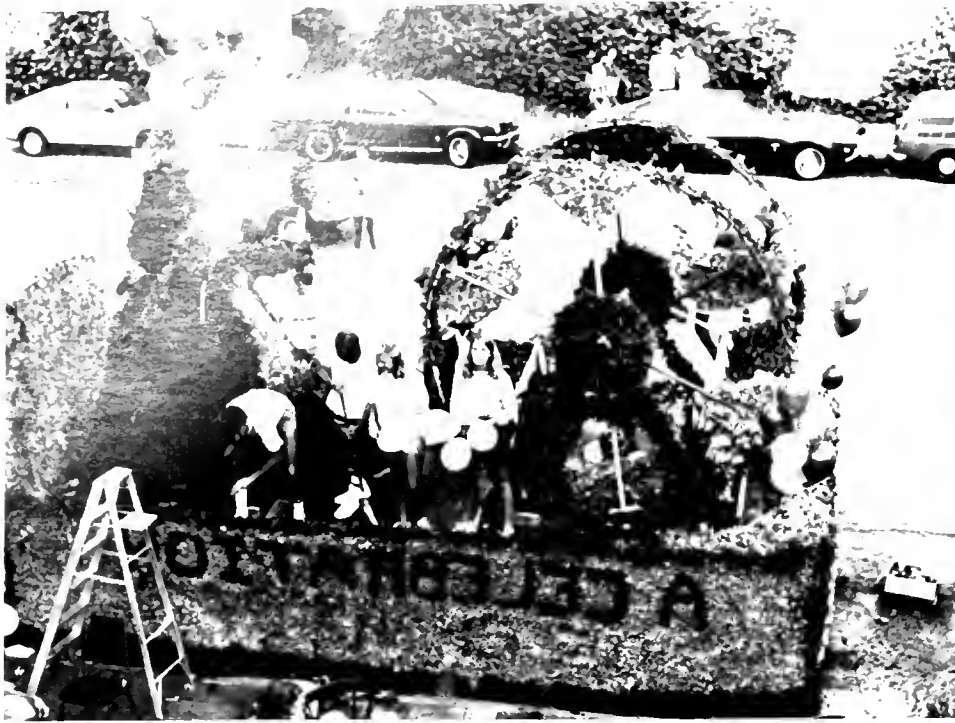

At Theta Delta Chi we also believe strongly in the development of athletic abilities along with academics. Our pool, basketball/volleyball court, weight room, sauna, jacuzzi, racquetball/tennis court, and driving range/putting course are always open for conditioning and relaxation. Moreover, since nearly all of our members have competed in high school varsity sports, we field teams in every possible intramural sport (including tanning).

We at Theta Delta Chi also keep an active social calendar to balance out our scholarly and athletic pursuits. Our little sisters are often parachuting out of planes with us, in addition to other notorious social events. Other highlights on our social calendar include the Halloween party, the Pajama party, the Red Carnation Formal, the UCLA Band Jams, the Virgin Islands Luau, the Tahoe ski/gamble weekender, Minsky's Mardi Gras Burlesque show, and road trips to our private Swiss chalet. The legend lives on.

THETA XI

The Alpha Zeta Chapter of Theta Xi was founded in 1929 in conjunction with the opening of UCLA's Westwood Campus. Over the years, Theta Xi has emerged as a leading Fraternity at UCLA. This is due to the strong Brotherhood and unique partying atmosphere present at 629 Gayley. Fall Quarter witnessed a lot of "clowning around" during Homecoming, a Sweepstakes winning float, and an incredibly wild "Bacchanalian Orgy" Pledge-Active Party. However, when Spring Quarter rolled around, we were ready for the non-stop entertainment at Mardi Gras when the Brothers sang and danced their way to fame in "The Palace Theatre." The internationally famous Theta Xi Sea and Ski Tanning Classic also provided a chance for UCLA students to expose themselves to those sun rays and compete for prizes. At the end of Spring Quarter, however, it was the Brothers' turn to expose themselves!!

P.S. Our group picture is fondly dedicated to the Brothers of Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity.

TRIANGLE

Triangle is a national fraternity with membership limited to students majoring in Engineering, Math and the Physical Sciences. The restricted membership has many advantages to Triangle members. Science and Engineering are rigorous, competitive majors that require a strong study effort. The extra emphasis that all Triangles place on school work creates a living environment that is more conducive to study.

Triangle is socially, as well as academically, oriented. Our social calendar includes events with our awesome little sisters, exchanges with sororities, Greek Week events, and intramural athletics. Some highlights include our yearly road trip to the Bay Area for the Cal or Stanford football game, a Halloween costume party, alumni poker nights, water ski trips to Lake Shasta and the Colorado River, and snow ski trips. Triangle actively participates in Engineer's Week at UCLA, which is held each winter quarter.

We also participate in interfraternity events such as the Miller basketball tournament, the Coors ultimate frisbee tournament, the Metaxa soccer tournament, and the Lonestar/Zeta Psi All Greek Beer Chug. Perhaps the greatest event of the year is Mardi Gras, the nation's leading college carnival, when we build and operate our award winning booth, Showboat, in which we provide live entertainment and carnival games.

ZETA BETA TAU

We at ZBT are a brotherhood which stands for diversity in membership and activities. Over the past four years we have maintained the highest grade point average of any organization on campus, far above the university men's average of any organization on campus, far above the university men's average. After graduation, our members go on to become doctors, lawyers, dentists, businessmen and others. Some of our distinguished alumni include the late Jack Benny, Leonard Bernstein, William S. Paley, Danny Thomas and Chuck Barris.

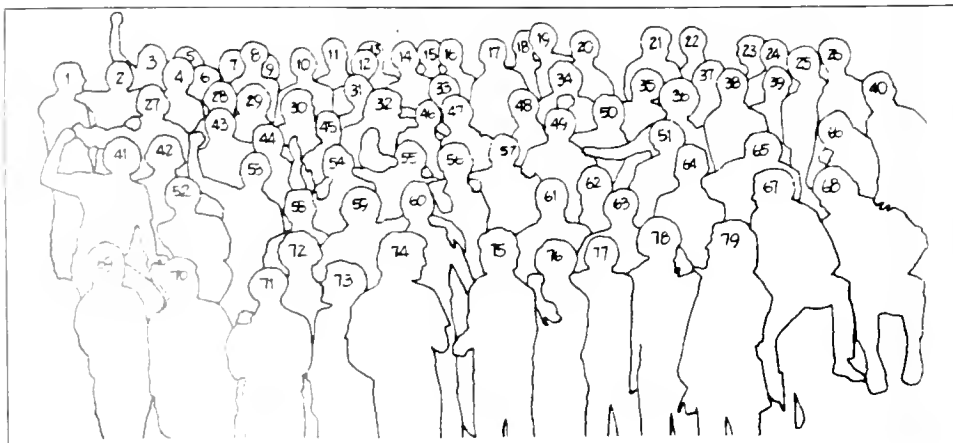

ZBT is one of the strongest houses in athletics, consistently placing high in fraternity intramural standings. We participate in over twenty sports throughout the academic year. We usually enter at least two teams in every intramural sport; one for those who wish to play on a more competitive basis and one for those who just enjoy getting outside and having a good time.

Our social program provides our Brothers with a break from the books. Each year our activities include pledge-active parties, buses to football games, formals, and little sister events. ZBT's social functions with sororities include such events as Homecoming, Greek Week, Mardi Gras, exchanges, and late night raids, as well as the famous Red Light Affair.

As the largest fraternity at UCLA, we are proud of our diversity and our excellence.

ZETA TAU ALPHA

Zeta Tau Alpha . . . a sorority proud of its heritage and individuality. This has been a fantastic year for the Beta Epsilon Chapter. We began by pledging a wonderful group of girls — the marvelous Mu's. Fall quarter featured such activities as Presents, our fall quarter party — western style, Dad's Day, our annual frat-president kidnap dinner for canned goods, a serenade with our sisters from Pomona, and a float in the Homecoming parade.

Winter quarter brought us Zeta Week and Initiation, our pledge-active at the Marriott Hotel, Greek Week activities (movie, song, dance), and elections. Spring quarter we enjoyed Mardi Gras, the University Sing, our White Violet Formal at Yamashiro's, Zeta Day at the Valley Hilton, and our annual Luau.

Zetas were unrivaled in their participation in intramurals this year. Volleyball, racketball, tennis, football, and softball were just a few of the sports we participated in. We are also proud of our inter-collegiate athletes participating in Women's Crew and the UCLA ski team.

This year the Zeta house took on a whole new look — as our exterior remodeling got underway. Plans for additional exterior and interior improvements are in preliminary stages.

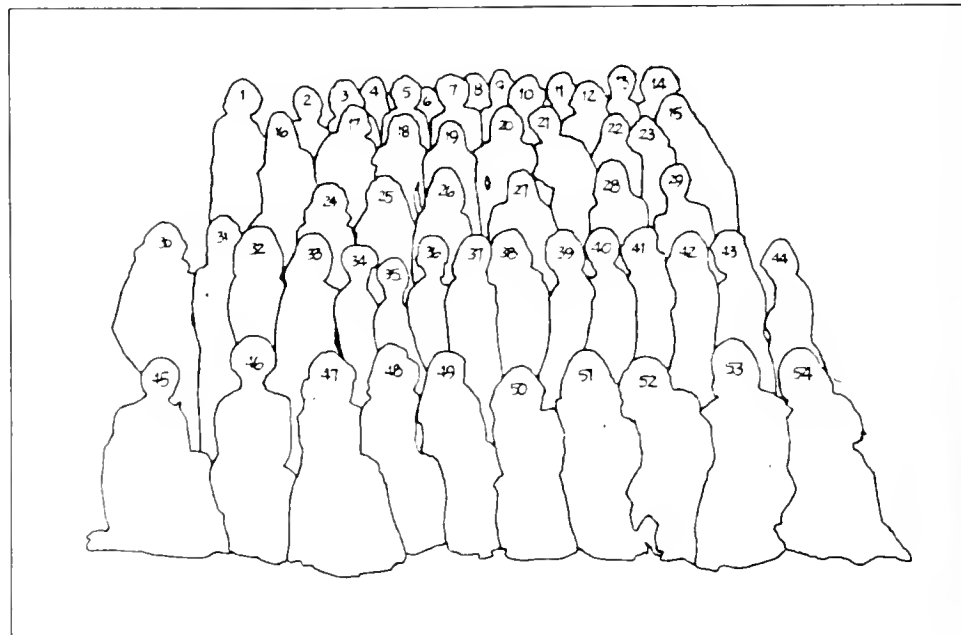

We were very proud to have our Zeta representatives in Panhellenic Executive Board, Bruin Belles, Peer Health Counseling, Mardi Gras Committee, UCLA Band, Dance Marathon, and fraternity "Little Sister" programs, as well as other campus organizations.

To end this fantastic year, many Zetas are planning to attend the Zeta Tau Alpha Convention held in St. Louis, Missouri. There they will be able to meet Zetas from other college campuses. Zeta Tau Alpha is proud of the opportunities for members to experience personal growth through leadership, social activities, and friendships.

PERSPECTIVE

A Story of Survival

“If you are coming to UCLA hopeful and a little scared, you are like most entering students. UCLA offers both educational possibilities which can fulfill your hopes, and new and strange experiences which can be frightening, but, since you’ve made it this far and met the standards for admission, your chances for success are good.”

—Dr. Jules Zenter, UCLA Orientation Handbook, 1978

It seemed like something straight out of “Father Knows Best”. There I was with my hands full trying to balance a backgammon set, a tennis racket, a dying Boston fern and holding three bags under each arm. Dad was holding Mom, and Mom was holding back the tears. “Take Care,” “Write often,” “Be good,” and such flew back and forth. Even my dog followed me barking her good-byes as I drove down the block. It was all so Main Street USA. It made you want to puke at its corniness, laugh in disbelief and cry at its tenderness; I couldn’t help it — I did the latter.

Having just enjoyed and shared the last few months of summer with the most remarkable circle of friends, the thought of starting out college away from them was a task I’d rather do without, thank you very much. But I was leaving home if only for a while to sample my new found independence, gradually weening myself from what had previously been my security and constant source of comfort. And that in itself made me feel better.

The adjustment went surprisingly smoothly, and I soon felt at ease with 30,000 other Bruins. The minor changes came with time. After years of being brainwashed never to write in text books, it became the rule rather than the exception. You never asked, "What grade are you in?" — it was, "What year are you." Biology was never "biology," rather it was "bio". Just as Political Science was "poly sci" and, Economics was "econ". Wallabies were out and Topsiders were in. Pee Chees were nonexistent — legal pads were ubiquitous. It was a matter of, not so much changing I guess, but fitting into a new environment.

Textbooks were things you used to read in a year — not in 10 weeks. Lunch used to be from 12:00 till 1:00 without exception — not in between classes running from Young to Bunche. Probation used to happen to convicts — not students, and 32 was simply a number that followed 31 and not a parking lot way out in Boonesville.

Even ordering food became a new art form — “I’ll take a cheese burger-basket, a red toe, cheeps and an order of sticks” — Remember the old Coop with the red and white checkered tablecloths and runned down jukebox?

E10, E11, EAP, CS 20, CSC, SLC, STD, ARC, AAP, ASK, DB, IM, TA, RA, URA and URL became more than just letters and numbers but had special meaning in the campus lingo. And UCLA became more than a four letter word. It became a place to learn — to learn about academics, philosophies, ideas, people, communicating, listening, contributing, sharing, succeeding, and surviving.

After going through more

highlighters, Pilot pens, Mountain Man backpacks, Blue Books, 10x10 mm graph paper, number 2 pencils, spiral notebooks, Scan-Trons and grade cards than I care to think about, I finally received the magic and long awaited “GS” on my study list — the golden key to privileges galore. I like to think that it stands for Grand Survivor rather than Graduating Senior. Afterall, it takes a certain drive, determination and insanity to constantly have to take on new challenges without giving up and actually coming out alive. If getting through four (five in some cases . . .) years at UCLA doesn’t constitute survival, I don’t know what does.

I can integrate trig functions, write a thesis statement, balance chemical equations, tell you all the sulci, gyri and lobes of a sheep’s brain like the palm of my hand and know exactly which items in the Country Store add up to exactly one dollar. But these claims to fame, I'm afraid, will soon fade into oblivion or filed under "T" for trivia. In perspective those things really are trivial compared to the people, the fun, the exposure to the odd, the unique, the new, and the exciting — all of which are but a part of the UCLA experience. So far I've followed the prescribed academic pathway, and arrived at the end of it all too soon. I'll have to make my own tracks now — one's outside the confines of this safe ol' place armed with four more years of learning behind me.

I'll be leaving home soon if only to test my new found strengths, gradually weening myself from what had previously been my security and comfort. I'm moving forward and that in itself makes it worthwhile. □

A letter of recruitment brought Joel Fierberg to UCLA, after he was apparently spotted at a High School Music Festival here. "We'd love to have you as a part of our music program here at UCLA," read the letter. When he responded in the affirmative (figuring that UCLA couldn't be that big if they took the time to write him a personal letter) he got the royal runaround by the administration before he was finally allowed to transfer in (as he had originally planned to attend U.C. Santa Barbara).

From an entering freshman tuba player, with aspirations to become a High School Band Director, to a graduating Senior, member and president of the Band Fraternity, Kappa Kappa Psi, a big part of Joel's life has been music — especially associated with the band. Travel with the band has brought Joel on many trips up North, out to Arizona, and even to Japan for the Mirage Bowl. "The people in the band are great, always friendly and helpful," states Joel. "UCLA is also a very good academic community, (it has) a lot of resources. There are people who go through this University without ever going to the Rec. Center, or going to a football game, or doing any of the other extra curricular activities that make UCLA so great. These are things that aren't a part of the formal education, yet make up a large part of the over-all learning experience."

Joel works for the UCLA Women's Athletics department. He is making the teams' travel arrangements, and is assistant events manager, in charge of what happens on the floor of major women's sporting events. Looking towards next year, Joel hopes to be hired permanently (depending on budget cuts) here, and eventually becoming an Athletic Director at a major university.

"I can't wait to graduate. I have been in school since I was five, I'm 20 now, I've had enough; it's that simple!"

Kim knew that she had arrived when she stood at the bottom of Bruin Walk, looked up and wondered at the majestic old brick building. "This is the place! This is where I've been meaning to go!" And so it was. Kim Austin had arrived at UCLA, where she would continue and complete her collegiate career (coming in her second year from a junior college).

A Spanish Linguistics major, Kim has been extremely involved in campus activities. As a Campus Ambassador, Kim acts as a liaison between foreign students here and regular student body, "helping them to integrate into the American lifestyle." As one of the coordinators for the program, she organizes dinners, welcome picnics, tutors, etc., and even writes prospective students abroad to tell them what to expect when they arrive. Kim is also active in Bruin Bells and the Undergraduate Spanish/Portuguese Association. Kim speaks Portuguese, French and Italian in addition to Spanish, and has aspirations in mastering Romanian and German.

Kim pledged Alpha Epsilon Phi Sorority during the fall of 1979. She was encouraged to join by her roommate during a summer session. Her roommate convinced her to go through rush by showing how the good aspects of sorority life outweigh the bad. "You can certainly integrate into school and do a lot of other things without being a Greek, but it is another open door."

Kim's future? "Diplomatic Service, and travel. People! It feels good to graduate. I'm not glad to be leaving, just glad to know that I've come this far. I've got a degree behind me — hey world, I went to UCLA . . . There are so many opportunities here we don't even realize. I could spend the next five years here and still not take advantage of all that's here, and the sad thing is that it's not till you're a junior or senior when you realize what is available. But, hey Mom — I MADE IT!"

Jeff Makoff, a Political Science major whose career goal is to become a photojournalist was drawn to UCLA "because both of my parents are graduates of UCLA (Mom, a biochemist and Dad, a successful business man) . . . I had the feeling that if I put the quality intensity into it, I would get quality education back." Jeff is currently working for a freelance photographer while working on a quality education.

During his sophomore year, Jeff went on a study abroad program to India, and it affected his outlook on UCLA and life in general, very deeply. "When I returned from India, I got much more out of my time here at UCLA . . . it was an added dimension to my collegiate experience . . . the trip gave me a lot of focus, and most importantly, it gave me motivation. It gave me a reason to do things, to select certain classes . . . I went out of my way to take courses I wouldn't otherwise have taken (like a graduate course in Indian politics) . . . It still motivates me."

"In Southeast Asia there's a constant neurosis when you're traveling about getting sick, but you can't worry about it too much, because it ruins your trip. Using my camera, I have documented the image and character of wealth and destitution juxtaposed. In places where men and women break their backs toiling for a family's survival, a token of attention such as a photograph can provide a small source of pride in an environment where dignity is a scarce resource."

Jeff's immediate future includes a wedding in June to his travel-mate on his second trip through Southeast Asia last fall. "An experience at UCLA definitely has to be complemented with some other type of experience, whether it's working at a part-time job, or volunteer work . . . somehow break the barrier between academia and reality . . . especially by going away — it gives you focus, and the cultural perspective you need. Go somewhere and then come back — you'll get a lot more out of school. STEP OUT OF IT!"

Cheryl Jay on coming to UCLA: "You come in from high school and there's so much to do, and there's so much going on . . . I was kind of awestruck by the whole thing. It was a nice mix of the hardcore academic stuff with softcore environment, like Westwood . . . so I came to UCLA."

Cheryl Jay on Berkeley: "Berkeley is like UCLA placed in Venice."

Cheryl Jay on Commuting: "I hate it — the worst decision I ever made was to commute. If I had to do it all over again — no commuting."

Cheryl Jay on being an ASK Counselor: "Reg week, people are pulling out their hair, first through fourth is crazy, sixth week everyone wants to know how to drop a class, seventh and eighth are quiet then by the ninth and tenth weeks, everyone wants to know how to drop that class again."

Cheryl Jay on Spare Time: "Spare time? What spare time?"

Cheryl Jay on Moonies: "My freshman year the moonies were on campus . . . they were here for a week . . . I must have been stopped 7 or 8 times that week. I must have looked like I had no purpose in my life!"

Cheryl Jay on Biochemistry: "It's competitive, but it's a healthy kind of competition. It's the kind of competition that makes you want to go out there and do your best, not to go out there and wipe out everybody else. You feel as if you not only made it through UCLA, but you made it through the Chem Dept."

Cheryl Jay on Grad School: "It's like living your day by the mail box. Every day I run home to see if I got a letter. Getting a paycheck is a disappointment compared to hearing from a med school."

Cheryl Jay on Graduating: "It's a time for a change, I can't wait. I've learned a lot, not just academically, but in dealing with life . . . There are so many obstacles that are thrown in your way. Learning to cope with Murphy Hall, the computer, the parking service, and all the bureaucratic institutions makes UCLA a good training ground for life. I have come to the conclusion that life can't be worse than life at UCLA. The years I've spent here have been the most interesting, the most frustrating, and the most challenging years of my life."

“Hey! Who’s that guy hashing at that sorority, who’s in that fraternity over there, who’s the guy throwing rocks at SC cars?” Jim questions in drawing a picture of himself. Jim Bechter, Sigma Alpha Epsilon brother from Northern California (Millbrae on the San Francisco peninsula) and self-proclaimed “Great Defender of the North.” Then what made him come to UCLA?

“I always wanted to come down to Southern California. UCLA was kind of an All American place. They have had a lot of good athletic teams and I liked the beaches and the Southern California weather. I was the only guy who went to UCLA from my high school. . . I felt attracted to it. When I got here I was kind of shocked at all the things that I could participate in . . . intramurals . . . the dorms . . . all the things that were going on in this school. You could go to a movie on campus, or you could see a political speaker who ten years ago was trying to overthrow the government, or you could go down to Westwood to see the weirdos, or you could go . . . UCLA carries with it a pretty good name and people are especially impressed in Northern California — ‘Oh, you go to UCLA?’ I’m pleased to graduate with that.”

A civil-engineering major, member of SAE fraternity and the American Society of Civil Engineers (for resume purpose only), Jim has recently gotten into country music, but has always enjoyed sports and girl watching. The future is uncertain, perhaps an American consultant to a Japanese Engineering firm?!

“I feel that I’ve accomplished something — I think getting through engineering and having fun was a good combination. I’m happy I had a great time and these were the great years of my life . . . I’ll leave thinking this is a great place, and I’m going to defend UCLA wherever I go. I’m ‘keyed’ to get out, I’m ready to get out. I want to get out into the world, and make some money for a change, try something new!”

Some people just make you sick. How many people do you know that get a more than decent score on their MCAT and then take the LSAT for the heck of it? And to top it all off, get a 750 (out of a possible 800 points)! He can say goodbye to any friends majoring in law . . .

Biochemistry major Ed Herskovits just happens to be one of those people. Ed has hopes to enter Yale Medical School next fall and aspires to go into some field of medicine (to be determined at a later date).

This man's claim-to-fame, other than his outstanding academics, is his passion for video games. Spending much of his free time at the Dec-10 computer and the arcade in Ackerman, Ed has built up quite an aptitude in video games. Scores over 800,000 points on Missile Command are not unusual. If you have ever been skeptical about how humanitarian doctors really are, then take heed of Ed's philosophy. He believes that one's purpose in life is, "not just to make your life as pleasant as possible, but to make life for others pleasant. It's kind of like the Golden Rule, but not exactly . . . My definition of a good person is one who tries not to hurt others, as opposed to just helping others."

I think we're in good hands.

When Terry O'Neal left McComb, Mississippi (population 400), for California, there was some skepticism as to his eventual success. "A lot of people said, 'you won't graduate, you won't make it in California.' They felt that I would never make it out here, but I knew one day I would be graduating from UCLA and they will see my diploma, and that time has come!"

A transfer from Cal State Los Angeles, where he ended up through a mistake made by a counselor at his high school, Terry chose UCLA not only for its academic excellence, but for the "second" life that UCLA offers. The social life that UCLA offers — athletic events, speakers programs, and Mardi Gras. "UCLA offers a well-rounded program and a multi-cultural setting with a broad spectrum of people and events which heighten one's cultural awareness."

Terry has been actively involved on and off campus. Terry is a member of Kappa Kappa Psi, a national band fraternity, and plays clarinet and saxophone for the marching and varsity bands. He is also involved in Phi Alpha Theta, the History Society, the UCLA Gospel Choir, and the Mentor program. Terry's job with the Judicial Review Board (set up by Chancellor Wilson to restructure the rules and regulations on campus regarding organizations on campus) put him in better touch with the school.

Terry's history degree will lead him to law school, "where I hope my philosophy can best be put into action, reflecting the strong beliefs I have in the public interest, working as a significant positive social force." And what about graduation? "Thilled! I feel my three years at UCLA haven't been wasted. I feel that I am now on the road to success, with UCLA being the initial step. It's a joy to be leaving . . . because I know I am going forward, going to better things, but to leave the campus behind is a sad thing."

Being married and mother of two while carrying a full class load of Art/Sculpture classes hasn't been an easy task for Bonnie Jackson. "My parents prompted me to complete my degree; and they were right: you're wasting your intelligence if you don't use it. And if you want that degree bad enough, you can do it. My kids are pretty independent — my daughter, 13, and son, 10; that helps a lot. My husband and the kids have been morally supporting me throughout my academic career. Personally, I'm glad that I'm graduating before my children. I'm glad that I'm older going back to school. When I was younger, I liked going to school, but I had too many other things on my mind, like dating — things that pull your mind away. I'm sorry to leave, I love going to class. I could spend the rest of my life doing this."

Bonnie immersed herself in pursuit of her goal, first attending Santa Monica Junior College at night (while she held down a full time computer programming job for UCLA admissions), earning the credits necessary to enter UCLA. She plans to pursue a Masters of Fine Arts immediately in the fall or will take a year off to get her portfolio in shape.

"Come hell or high water, I'm going to be an artist — even if I have to work at something else. I can at least be doing something I truly enjoy and love. You have to have some reason for your work. I've seen a change in students. Most go to school so they can get a better job; there's something wrong. Education is to broaden and enhance one's being and mind or soul. Humanities are an absolute joy."

“Everyone needs pressure to achieve a goal, and for me acting was a motivating force.” Phil Goldfine’s goal was to overcome his stuttering, which he’s had since about the age of eleven. Phil has been successful not only with the eradication of his former affliction, he also has a great head start at an acting career.

The acting bug bit Phil when he became involved in drama at high school. After graduating, he began to attend “cattle calls” for commercials and his career was launched. Phil has appeared in commercials for Ralph’s and several other stores and has had guest roles on the television programs “Star-sky and Hutch” and “The Paper Chase.” Following graduation in June, Phil will begin work on the film “The Stones of Silence” for PBS, in which he will play a high school student who stutters.

So what has Phil been studying at UCLA? Biology of course! What? “I might as well study a subject that I enjoy while at college,” states Phil. He transferred from Berkeley because he felt that there was more opportunity for his career down here. “A lot of people say Los Angeles is phony, LA’s this, LA’s that, but it’s not! It’s great down here.”

Phil’s immediate plans after summer is graduate school of film. He hopes to go into production and direction. And after that? Dental school of course! “I’ve wanted to be a dentist for a long time, and I think I have the grades to do it, but I want to do film first.”

“It sure is good to be graduating. I’m relieved . . . a little bit sad, but then I figure there’s so much more out there after this. I’m looking forward to graduate school, something new.”

Definition of a roommate: one of two or more persons occupying the same room. Ah, but this doesn't wholly define the true meaning of roommate; they laugh with you, cry with you, make excuses to unwanted callers for you, take care of you when you're sick, and hopefully are your friends while at school. Barbara Davidson and Linda Harvey are both roommates — both have been Kappa Deltas for their four years here at UCLA. They like the same music, but that's about the extent of it.

Barbara is a Northern California gal (from Marin County to be exact) and came down to UCLA for school "mainly because Berkeley was so close." Majoring in voice performance, Barbara has been active in various groups on campus ranging from honor societies (Alpha Lambda Delta, Freshman honor society; Alumni Scholars and Mortar Board), to her musical interests (Mu Phi Epsilon music fraternity and the UCLA Opera Workshop). Then there are the social outlets — the Kappa Delta sorority and little sister-ship at both Phi Kappa Sigma and Alpha Tau Omega.

"It's kind of hard fitting the goals of a serious musician in with the overall social side of college life. That's why I sometimes feel there are two halves of me — one is the 3.95 honor student and musician scribbling research notes on music staff paper; and then there is the sorority regular, drinking her dinner at Acapulco's happy hour. It makes life difficult when, in addition to regular studying, you have to explain to your roommate that yes, you really do have to go back up to Schoenberg on a Sunday afternoon just to sing. But music is the one thing I've always wanted to do. It's something that keeps me going when the rest of school and life gets too much for any human to bear!" Barbara hopes to eventually devote her talents to professional opera, and in the meantime her immediate future includes marriage in July (her fiancée studying for a Ph.D. in Art History).

Linda, on the other hand, is a true blue Southern Californian from Orange County, and a born and bred Bruin. "There was no question that I would come to UCLA. My diapers were blue and gold. I cuddled with a Teddy-Bruin at the age of three. I could also recite the Greek Alphabet forward and backward in Kindergarten." Linda certainly has kept to her prescribed tradition, active on campus as a member of Panhellenic Council, involved impressively in Kappa Delta Sorority (this year acting as Rush Chairman and reeling in a quota pledge class), as well as Bruin Bells and Sailing Club.

Linda's academic pursuits have been less distinctive than those of Barbara. Nonetheless she will graduate with a diversified liberal arts degree which has given her a broad background in Liberal Arts in preparation for an education degree as an elementary teacher. "I was born to be a Greek Bruin. I'm a third generation UCLA Sorority girl. Tradition — isn't that what UCLA's all about?"

Carlos Gonzales' GPA his first quarter was a 1.2. By the time his first year was up, it had risen to just below a 2.0. Yet his first year at the big U was not to detour him, and he will graduate with Departmental Honors in Engineering with about a 3.4 — a true success story of what a little elbow grease and some hard studying can do for you.

Carlos, a native born Cuban, is into body surfing and skin diving. His activities in school presently include Assistant Commissioner to the first Vice President in S.L.C. and numerous school plays. His plans for the immediate future? "I will see my father in Cuba this summer for the first time since my mother smuggled me out of Havana in 1961." He hopes to produce a film while down there to document the social atmosphere of the times. And after that? "I will try to be a Hollywood 'Star' for about one year, then if I still want to punish myself, I will pursue a joint J.D./M.B.A. degree."

What else is Carlos known for? "I play trumpet with my mouth, but without a trumpet. I speak fluent Spanish . . . I wear braces . . . and I smile a lot."

Born in London, United Kingdom, Premnath (Prem) Pillai has spent most of his 21 years moving from country to country, with the United States being his seventh "home" in his lifetime. Why? His father works for the United Nations. During his travels he's managed to see a myriad of cultures, people of various backgrounds and different religions.

"It was hard to ever completely assimilate, completely assimilate moving every three years. I never really had one neighborhood to grow up in, never just one set of friends. I never had any real attachment to one place, one country, or school . . . I wish I would have though." A transfer from the American University in Cairo, where he spent his first two years of college, Prem chose UCLA because he wanted to complete his education in the United States and in particular, Southern California.

An economics major, Prem has been extremely active in the Community Service Commission in such programs as the Special Olympics and the Exceptional Childrens Tutorial Program. "I recommend volunteer work for everyone. I wish I could convince people to do more of it. It's the most rewarding thing I've ever done." Prem plans to obtain a special education credential, but would eventually like to do research.

"College has had its ups and downs, overall I've enjoyed it. Looking back, the times I've spent down and depressed are far outnumbered by the positive . . . It's been a growing experience. All my experiences traveling, etc. . . have been narrowed and framed in my mind through education and brought through that into focus."

Hailing from Nashville, Tennessee, Eddie Frierson originally came to California to play baseball for UCLA. Eddie was following his big sister Dianne who played women's basketball here from 1977 to 1980. "I loved the two years that I played ball here. But I really didn't have much of a future. I could have either not been playing, or layed on the J.V. team. But I wouldn't trade my two years on the team for anything. It's what got me so involved in so many things. I took the option of converting my average existence at Sawtelle Field to the more predictable career of the theatre. Since then I've taken part in eight or so productions up and around MacGowan Hall." Besides keeping busy up in North Campus, Eddie is a volunteer on the staff of the UCLA Women's Athletics department and is an NCAA Volleyball Official. "I used to sell programs at the matches and just help out. One night at the USC game, the lineman called couldn't make it, so I filled in. I've been doing it ever since. I've even officiated at National meets, and have traveled with both the men's and women's teams. My best friend from Tennessee is out here now, going to USC. Howie Klausner and I are now partner officials for volleyball. His friends don't make as many UCLA jokes as we make USC jokes." And Eddie's future after graduation? "It's scary, especially being a theatre major. The future is wide open. But I'm glad to get out, I'm ready to go on. I'm planning to give it a shot, in Los Angeles or New York, perhaps in Nashville, for Operylad productions."

“When I was a freshman, I used to get a kick out of walking through South Campus and behind professors and pick up on their conversations. I used to get blown away. But all you have to learn is the terminology and there you have it.” Marty Green was offered several football scholarships at “lesser” schools, but came to UCLA “for the big university atmosphere, the Greek system. UCLA is outstanding in both scholastics and social life, and that combination is pretty hard to beat.”

A psychobiology major, Marty has been active on campus as a Peer Health Counselor for the past few years, was in charge of the Stress Reduction Clinic, has been a patient escort at the UCLA hospital. A four year member and live-in of ZBT fraternity, Marty has found good times as well as encouragement in his studies. “Looking back, the fraternity has really helped a lot. I need a support group . . . going to the library with a bunch of guys, or studying on Sunday . . . it really helps to have that friendship to bring you there. You don't get much sleep in the fraternity, that's all.”

Marty is looking towards a future and dental school (of which he has been accepted into seven!). He plans to gear his studies toward oral surgery. What about graduation? “Most seniors have this feeling, it's a conflicting feeling of thoughts — where you have two competing ideas. First, you want to be happy, you're getting somewhere, you're going to be more on your own, you're going to see what the world is all about; Then you have the other thing in your mind — it's going to be upsetting, it's going to be depressing. You're going to leave all your friends, you're not going to have this life. You think of the past and how much fun you've had. But you have to keep everything in perspective . . . you have to keep an equilibrium between those two thoughts, and you'll stay at a pretty decent level. Just go all out your senior year.”

“The biggest pain that I’ve experienced this year has been not being able to park my car. I’ve always gotten parking permits — and my senior year? Of course not.” Paul Jusko, a chemical engineering major from Sherman Oaks, has enjoyed his senior year. “You can’t take a hard core last year, there’s just no motivation. I took five years to complete my undergraduate education just so I could take full advantage of all UCLA had to offer.” Paul has been active in school this year as vice president of the Ski Club and an instructor and assistant in the Sailing Club, as well as a math tutor. “I was originally a pre-med student, and suddenly it hit me. I didn’t need this so I decided the only way for me to keep most of my chemistry background useful was to go into chemical engineering. . . . then I signed up for my first ski-trip. That’s when I discovered a fun and wild world. Next was Mardi Gras, Sailing Club, Phrateres and more skiing. I have now decided that school was just a part of my life here at UCLA.” Paul’s future is uncertain, like most of ours. “My immediate goal is backpacking in Europe this summer. I’ve talked to a lot of people, and they say once you’re into a business, you get two weeks off, and it’s going to be hard to take time off. Do what you want now. If you can go to Europe, get the traveling out of your system. You aren’t going to be able to do it later.” “My time at UCLA has been fun, interesting, enjoyable, and at times harder than hell. It’s everything when you don’t want it . . . during the middle of the quarter when the best parties are around. You make as good a time of it as you put into it, as much as you put in, you get out.”

“In life so many good things come by that if you pass them all up, you miss out. You can’t go for everything, but you have to take that chance, and give things a shot. A lot of times it works out.”

Allen Ginsberg, a graduating senior in history, has been very active in campus government as well as in other campus activities. This has been his third year on SLC’s Judicial Board, this year presiding as Chief Justice. He’s an ASK Counselor, and belongs to Mortar Board. “Have a good time — that’s what it’s all about . . . you’ve missed out if you don’t do all those things. That’s what is UCLA. It’s the students, faculty and all the things that are happening, and getting into as many things as you want to.”

Living in Southern California all his life, Allen hopes to go away from UCLA to Law school. About graduating: “I have a combination of feelings, a montage really . . . In a way I’m excited about the prospects of getting out of school and getting out into the real world. I’m about ready to move on and yet I’m going to miss so much that’s here. College is the greatest way to live your life; if you could live your life in suspended animation in college, it would be such great fun. There’s a part of me that’ll be sorry to leave, and another part that’s going to be excited to be what I’m doing.”

“I’m going to miss the sensations about UCLA — UCLA physically. You know right outside of Kerckhoff Hall — the pepper corn trees on the ground after the rain, the smell is so aromatic, it always sticks with me. I’ll miss everything about life here . . . college life is so unique.”

Listed in the "Little Black Book of Hawaii," Albert Chong thus is considered one of the most eligible bachelors on the islands. So what is he doing in Southern California? "I like the pace here, at least for a while. It would have been too mellow at the University of Hawaii. Leaving home for college has been an experience in itself, especially when you know only a couple of other people going there, you don't get into the dorms the first quarter, and to top it off, when you do finally get in, you only get to live there for Spring quarter."

Does he find a difference here on the "mainland"? "It is very significantly different in terms of culture. Back in Hawaii — known as the melting pot of the Pacific — these different races, European, Caucasian, Japanese, Somoian, Hawaiian, all more or less get along. There are flare ups of course, but there's a lot of 'Aloha' as they say in the islands. People can joke with each other and no one cares . . . it's not as culture conscience, we share our cultures."

Albert is graduating with an Electrical Engineering degree and is working presently with a consulting firm Fredrick, Russel, Brown and Associates. He plans to eventually run his father's Engineering business, "it will be tough once I get into it." "Four years here have been interesting, educational and memorable, and I'm glad I made my choice to come to UCLA. School is as impersonal as you make it . . . you can't expect a university of this size to reach out to everyone. They're there if you put out." His philosophy of life? "GO FOR IT!"

Artist: Julie Sporer
Hometown: San Jose, California.

Major: Design, with emphasis in photography and graphics.

Career Goals: To be successful with her own work, using graphic arts and art in combination.

"I feel there's a real dichotomy between the two fields of 'Art' and 'Design.' The aesthetics of creativity are just as valuable in the design of a chair as in an oil painting of a piece of sculpture. I would like to 'marry' the two worlds in my future work."

A Time for Change

Although there were about 25 different freshman orientations throughout the summer, I still believe that mine was the best. It seemed like a lot less than the three days it was, mainly because we were always busy. Our days were planned out to the minute. We hardly had time to breathe before it was off to the next lecture, meal or whatever. From the first afternoon we were bombarded with information about UCLA, and what makes it tick. We were expected to be experts on it by the time we left our fast-paced orientation.

We were welcomed to orientation with the shock treatment. We were informed that only a small percentage of us would make it to graduation and that our high GPA's would bite the dust. Next it was mass confusion as some of us scrambled to find our way to our counselor. Each group consisted of 6-12 students with common majors, and two counselors with related majors. I will never forget my counselors because it was through them that I had my first taste of UCLA. I listened carefully to everything they said and desperately tried to absorb every word I could about the big U. Although we were going non-stop everyday from seven in the morning until one the next morning, we also had to do our "homework." This consisted of planning out a schedule of classes and completing exercises in our "Degree Planner" (so we could be sure of taking the right courses for our major—if only we knew it?). Even though I didn't catch everything at orientation, I do remember a few basic rules:

1) Get an American Express reg card and photo ID (don't leave home without it!). I soon learned that it is virtually impossible to function on campus without both.

2) Get a Daily Bruin every morning so you don't miss out on vital university information (not to mention the fact that you can look cool while reading it in class).

Your shopping list: topsiders and button-down collars are a must . . .

Another fond memory of my orientation was the dorm experience. It was like a constant party: open 24 hours a day. There was always someone's door open—a virtual welcoming sign. And seriously, the dorm food wasn't all that bad. (It wasn't all that good, but it wasn't all that bad either.)

The last night of orientation was the very best. It all started off with an activities fair. All sorts of organizations with opportunities for us to get involved with on campus were there (gee—there's so much to do here.) Another highlight was the "Counselors on Review" at Kerckhoff Coffee House. This is where they showed us their "true" talent: from brushing their teeth communally (you know if you were there) to reenacting a certain Royal Wedding. There were impersonations of the freshmen girls ("Hey, big counselor, why don't you spend a little time counseling me?") and a rousing version of "Old McDonald."

The orientation to UCLA was truly complete with an invigorating rendition (the first for some of us eight-clap virgins) of everyone's favorite cheer—the eight-clap. The closing cheer brought an end to my orientation and the beginning of a Bruin experience.

I got used to lines pretty quickly around here. After a thrilling two hour wait for my official photo ID card, I was ready for anything. (Anything just happened to include another wait to see the infamous COMPUTER). The computer wasn't as I had pictured it—a great ominous room filled with wall to wall flashing lights and an uncountable number of buttons to push. Instead I was greeted by a person with a typewriter-type machine on his lap who calmly punched in all the necessary information and shifted my classes for me. By the next Monday I was totally “psyched” for my first week of college life . . .

I met more people and had more fun than I can remember. I had temporarily forgotten the meaning of the word “study” and spent all my free time socializing (and finding my classes). Unfortunately it didn't last long, but by the next week I found myself in a routine and relearned how to study. By the third week I felt as if I had mastered the college life. Just as I was beginning to feel like a local, someone pulled a “Freshman Reception” on us, (to remind us who we are). I went along with some 2,000 fellow classmates to meet Chancellor Young. While waiting in the greeting line (of course it was long), we were able to feed upon an endless array of edibles from fish to fresh vegetables and cold cuts to chocolate croissants. The next best thing to standing and munching out was mingling with friends old and new.

After some inspiring speeches from Chancellor Young and undergraduate president Sam Law, we were entertained by the cheerleaders and all joined in on the eight-clap. Then there was recreation—we had the run of Ackerman Union, including free bowling and billiards, a country-western band in the newly opened Cooperage as well as another live band in the Grand Ballroom. After it was all over, I felt as if I was on my own. No more special treatment to the “new” Bruins. We had been through it all now—lines, socializing and eight-claps. What else is there to UCLA? □

The Man Behind the Missive

It's easy to take for granted the "Charles E. Young" on the bottom of the form letter welcoming you to UCLA. But there's much more to the man behind the missive. After receiving an A.B. from UC Riverside and his M.A. in 1957 and Ph.D. in 1960 from UCLA, Young worked his way up to the Chancellorship in 1968 at age 36. He also assumed teaching responsibilities during 1960-69 when he taught political science at UCLA. He was appointed as a Professor of political science in 1969.

In addition to the responsibilities of his position, the Chancellor is also active in civic affairs. He is vice-president of the Young Musicians Foundation and on the Board of Directors of the Southern California Theater Association. Young also is a board member of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee. The Los Angeles World Affairs Council and the Mansfield Center for Pacific Affairs are other examples of his community involvement. □

Pacmania

2:26 a.m. You a-waken in a cold sweat. You dreamed "Blinky," "Pinky," "Inky" and "Clyde" just deflated you. In your sleepy trance you observe that being a Pac-man is not easy.

7:59 a.m. You are in the arcade. You have all your Pac-men and are closing in fast on the high score. You also have an eight o'clock class.

8:00 a.m. Well, you wouldn't have made it to class anyway. You continue . . . and continue.

12:59 p.m. You've skipped lunch and played Pac-man. You try to tear yourself away. You realize it will be hard, but if you move gradually . . . No good — your muscles don't respond. Instead, they skillfully guide the Pac-man over numerous cherries, strawberries and oranges.

2:26 p.m. You're out of quarters. You're desperate, but no one is interested in a slightly used Casio watch without a game function. You slink away. You sigh. What does it all mean? What is the purpose? Does anyone really know what time it is? Suddenly you laugh and happily skip away. The sea of hardened faces of video addicts turns towards the skipping figure. They all know, you'll be back tomorrow. □

Prices Up, Up and Away

Time for a little word association. Ready? OK, "increase." No, no, not "decrease." The correct reply is "prices." Why you ask? Because it happens to be what this spread is about. Here you will find a listing of essentials for the college student and their relative prices (relative to avoid prosecution). We picked 1976 as the comparison date, reasoning that five years would be enough to show price changes, but still be recent enough to be relative (there's that word again). Yup, I remember 1976. Why, way back then a dollar was worth . . .

Building for the Future

Change is an essential feature of the Southern Campus montage. The student changes as a result of his environment; in turn, the environment changes for the student. Evidence of these changes are not hard to find: dirt piles, workmen and the sounds of hammers, saws, and drills at work.

These environmental changes are constant. Future plans in the "Prelim-Design" stage, still pending, call for a southern regional library which would store library materials for the Southern California UC campus. Another proposal makes provisions for a north campus facility to be located between the law school and GSM.

Already approved is the UCLA owned and operated telephone system which will serve the campus. The university currently employs General Telephone for installation, maintenance, and switching, but after the new UCLA system is in operation, it will assume those duties. The switching systems will be located in Culver City and are scheduled for operation in February of 1985.

Ongoing projects include the John Wooden Center and renovating Kinsey Hall. The Wooden Center is slated for occupancy by December 1982 and will alleviate the overcrowding in the athletic facilities. Kinsey Hall has undergone extensive modifications to bring its safety levels up to today's standards.

While the change is constant, it can also be subtle. A simple tree trimming, a fresh coat of paint; all alterations in the framework of the montage. □ —RRG

Looking Back...

Years from now, the current UCLA graduating class will think of 1981-82 as the year that mini-skirts returned to fashion and golden accessories sparkled during social events. In music, jazz increased in popularity, Frank Sinatra songs returned to favor and New Wave Bands became more sophisticated. The rock groups to really hit the charts were groups like The Cars, The Police, Earl Klugh, Blondie, and Toto. The Rolling Stones toured the country and played to record crowds.

Making sports headlines, the Dodgers won the World Series, Mohammed Ali lost his World Boxing title and the University of Washington went to the Rose Bowl again. On an individual level, racquetball gained popularity and the Beverly Hills Diet was the latest way to lose extra weight.

tempt. El Salvador erupted into civil war and Iran entered into war with Iraq. Prince Charles of England married Lady Diana Spencer in one of the most lavish and highly publicized weddings the world has ever seen.

Martial law was declared in Poland in a governmental crackdown on Solidarity, the Columbia Space Shuttle made two manned journeys into space, which made it the the world's first re-used space craft. L STUDENT CENTER

Center

A montage can be made up of many things, but there is no better example than the montage of people. Different cultures, colors, creeds, and races all struggling to live together, though oftentimes it seems like no one is trying at all. Fortunately, there are groups like the Peace Corps and Amnesty International that care not only about what is happening but what is happening to people. In this spirit, the International Student Center (ISC) was formed in 1952. ISC seeks to create "a greater awareness among people of different cultures."

Through programs, services, and events, the ISC tries to bring visitors from abroad, foreign and American students, and people from the Greater Los Angeles community together.

One such program, the "Know Your World" series, focuses its events on one country, with a different country each month. A newly formed program, the ISC Assistants Program, deals with helping foreign students adapt to UCLA and Los Angeles life and is staffed by volunteer students. Besides these, the ISC sponsors many other programs, such as the English Conversation Sessions and the International Womens Club.

In providing these services, it is nice to know that ISC helps the pieces of the montage all fit a little better. □ —RRG

Books — you use them once and they become lost in the pile once known as your desk. Or worse yet, you sell them, like they were just dead weight, back to the bookstore. Ever wonder how they must feel? They are your constant companions during finals week and they never go to sleep before you do. And what do they get in return? Marked and torn pages! Bent covers and broken bindings! It's enough to make any librarian cry. □

For Whom the Whistle Blows

If you should happen to be on campus at six o'clock on the last day of finals, you will experience some very bizarre sounds. At first you might expect the beginning of World War Three. But no! Everyone ignores these obnoxious sounds if they are old Bruins. Why? The answer is simple — if you're a freshman then you just don't recognize the sound of a UCLA tradition.

On top of Boelter Hall stands a large steam whistle. Every quarter, after the last hour of finals, a proud group of engineering students sound the whistle to finalize another term. Unfortunately, despite their pride for this rare privilege, the students must sacrifice their hearing for the following six weeks! — a small price to pay for such a thrill.

So if you still have an undeclared major, why not look into engineering? Who knows? You might become one of the privileged steam whistle blowers! □

The Social Experience

Contrary to what many true blue (and gold) Bruins may believe, UCLA is not merely an institution for those seeking a higher education. It is also a valuable opportunity to share in government activities; to participate in social and cultural events; and even create new clubs, organizations and programs. Active participation in campus organizations has been rapidly increasing in popularity, becoming a major means for student involvement.

An explanation for the increasing interest in campus groups is, without a doubt, due to the highly impersonal nature of UCLA. Human beings are, for the most part, gregarious; therefore, the need to be accepted by peers is strong. Needless to say, joining a club is a great way to break down the isolation of such an overwhelming university. After all, what does anyone have to lose in meeting people with similar interests or backgrounds (except for maybe a little spare time?).

Another reason for the increase in club involvement can be attributed to everyone's insatiable appetite for mere fun. Everybody has interests. And everybody enjoys a break from books now and then. Student groups provide a great escape from anxiety. Wherever your interests lie, UCLA has a club to match.

The Armenian Student Union, the Women's Rugby Club, and the Integral Yoga Association are only a few of the many interesting groups on campus. The Immoral Majority provides a change of pace with their questioning of dogmatic beliefs. Many honor societies have been formed for graduate as well as undergraduate students. Also, the Concerned Faculty group exists to foster education and discuss social issues of concern to faculty members.

The Organizational and Interorganizational Relations Office (ORG), formerly known as the Campus Programs and Activities Office (CPAO/SR), is the office which oversees such school activities, organizations, and programs. ORG provides guidelines and counseling on how to start and how to keep clubs going. All campus functions register with ORG before their founding and at the beginning of every school year.

For many UCLA students, whether or not to get involved is a major decision at one time or another. Which club and how to go about doing it can also be a problem.

Joining a club is easy. One simple visit to the ORG office in Kerckhoff is all it takes. A complete list of all clubs including their meeting place and time is available on request. Just stop in any time and say hello; new members are always welcome.

Thanks to ORG and the numerous registered campus organizations, UCLA provides a multitude of opportunities extending far beyond the scope of formal education. Such opportunities should, by all means, not be missed. □

Editing this yearbook has really been quite an experience, filled with its good moments as well as its major headaches. It is something that I never would have wanted to miss... but on the other hand, I never want to do again.

This year's staff has had to work especially hard this past year to produce the 1982 UCLA Southern Campus Montage Yearbook. Late nighters were not uncommon for some of us die-hards whose task it was to crank out UCLA's largest yearbook in 14 years. But in addition to its increased size, this book contains almost three times more full color than any yearbook in UCLA history.

My sincere thanks go to those people who really made this book possible. They're all listed on page 467. (Take a look right now, I'll wait...): But just a listing of a name doesn't seem appropriate for those who put in those extra hours. Marianne—even though you didn't rejoin the staff until January, thanks for all the time and effort you put in above and beyond your job description, including getting me organized. Jim—you did a fantastic job of bringing us out of the slumps before our last deadline—may we both become perpetual UCLA students so that we can get a 10% discount at Uncle John's for the rest of our lives. Blake—thanks for being "too artsy"—we'll form a merger in twenty years after you take over Architectural Digest and I take over Communication Arts. Dick LoPachin—Thanks for being an understanding yearbook rep and putting up with all of our excuses. To Art Atkinson, all I want to say is, "May 'miracles' never cease."

I think an old friend of mine put it best when he analogized the creation of this yearbook with a pregnancy. "You sweat and swear for nine months wondering who or what the baby will look like, occasionally having second thoughts about whether or not the commitment should have been made to undertake such a project. But, alas, the baby does arrive, you take one good look, and you know that you had made the right decision all along." Let me add to that analogy—I think conception was the most fun.

Sincerely,

pus offers an opportunity to interact and flourish in the diversity of its surroundings. It is an environment which encourages the exchange and interaction of ideas while still allowing us to maintain a sense of self. College is much more than a way station; it is an enriching process.

Alive with such interchange and filled with vitality, Kerckhoff Hall is the center for a myriad of campus organizations, student publications and the student government. Radiating energy, its kinetic nature sets the campus in motion—a catalyst for personal development. From the riches here, we build for ourselves a strong foundation, one that will carry us beyond the security of this guarded society.

We leave UCLA like light beams from its source—initially as a unified group, en masse as we came, only to gradually scatter as separate and unique entities—always part of and ever changed by the montage.
